PRISON FOR 2 SALOON MEN

WHY HARDING CHOSE HUGHES AS HIS PREMIER

Character, Ability, Swayed Selection.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—President Elect Harding's selection of Charles Evans Hughes as secretary of state, upon whom will fall the most difficult international problems, is no surprise to those who observed the signs of warm friendship between the two men on the occasion of Mr. Hughes' visit to Marion during the campaign.

Mr. Harding has always admired the fine mind and moral courage of the former Supreme court justice. He had watched his career as prosecutor and governor of New York. When Harding went to Washington as senator, Hughes was on the bench. Their meetings were casual here, but in 1916 their real friendship began.

Mr. Harding was chairman of the Chicago convention which nominated Hughes for the presidency. Later, Mr. Harding went to the Hughes home and delivered the address formally notifying him of his nomination.

Worked for Hughes' Victory.

Mr. Harding worked during the campaign for the candidate and they met several times on speaking tours. There was no one more disappointed than Harding at the Republican failure that year.

Although an admirer of Mr. Hughes as a man, Mr. Harding did not fail to take advantage of some lessons of Mr. Hughes' method of campaigning when it came his own turn to go before the people. This was probably one of his reasons why Mr. Harding decided to stay at home.

He sent for Mr. Hughes during the summer, after letters and confidences had been exchanged. Here in Marion the dignified lawyer was thrown pell mell into a group of actors and motion picture stars who happened to be staging a performance with frivolous songs and jokes on the Harding front porch.

Mr. Hughes stood in the background, his face showing keen enjoyment. He was called on to make a response and did so happily. He went out to luncheon and sat next to a movie queen and a comedian of national reputation, and said that he had never had such a jolly day in years.

Chilly Only on Surface.

Mr. Hughes revealed himself as a "mixer," a good story teller, a rare companion. In addition, he untangled for Mr. Harding the league of nations situation as it existed at that time, showing in a statement remarkable for its clarity and precision of word and thought just how the Harding attitude squared with the best aspirations of the American people and responded to the duty which America owed the world.

When it came to the question of a selection of secretary of state, Mr. Harding's first preference was for Mr. Hughes. His later judgment, based on careful weighing of all the candidates, confirmed this desire. To accept, Mr. Hughes will have to abandon a law practice which, it is said, is yielding him an enormous revenue.

It is expected that in view of his friendship for Mr. Harding and his high sense of public duty, he will accept, although this remains as the uncertain quantity in the situation. The men have a further tie in that they are both Baptists.

Aspirants Talk to Him.

Representative Fordney, Michigan, chairman house ways and means committee; former Senator Weeks, Massachusetts, thought to be under consideration for a cabinet position, and former Gov. Odell, New York, conferred today with Mr. Harding on finance and taxation.

Although a few more engagements are scheduled for next week before Mr. Harding leaves for the south, most of his activities here now will be devoted to winding up his personal affairs.

HOOVER LEFT OUT.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover is not to be a member of the Harding cabinet, according to the latest information obtained by senators direct from Marion. Mr. Harding, it is said, has decided that there is such strong opposition to Mr. Hoover among Republicans that his appointment as a cabinet member would hamper his administration.

An attack on Mr. Hoover in the senate is expected next week. Pending in house and senate are two or three resolutions calling for information as to the collection and handling of relief funds. Mr. Hoover's name is not mentioned in any of these, but it is understood that they refer to his activities.

SCHEER WARNS U. S. AGAINST A NAVAL HOLIDAY

Benefit to Britain, German Admiral Says.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WEIMAR, Jan. 15.—Admiral Scheer, whom at least half the world regards as one of the greatest leaders in naval war history, today for the first time since the signing of peace granted a newspaper interview.

For the benefit of American readers I sought and obtained the opinion of the Skagerrak-Jutland commander on these great questions of the day: The naval holiday, the disputes between adherents of capital ship construction and submarine programs, and the American naval policy both offensive and defensive.

"I would like," said Admiral Scheer, "to see the world pass from national, class and religious hatred; from the dangers of bolshevism and from the chaotic and economic conditions, all of which have resulted from the war, to justice and friendship. Universal disarmament would be a step toward that goal. But for the nation having the miggest fleet to enjoin shipbuilding looks to me like a swindle.

Urges Honesty of Purpose.

"Let us have honesty of purpose, not hypocrisy. I have read with interest President Elect Harding's plan to call a world congress on disarmament and I trust that idealism still remains in America despite her experiences with the fourteen points.

"America today is in a position to strengthen her navy. Great Britain is in a bad position for two reasons: she hasn't the money and she doesn't know what kind of ships to build.

"The naval holiday plan benefits England only, not America. In three years who can tell what economic changes shall have transpired? England then would begin building again and by that time the building question regarding supremacy of capital ships or submarines and other minor weapons will have been cleared up.

Would Aid Great Britain.

"Universal disarmament would work out, but a naval holiday merely would tide Great Britain over a bad spot in her naval plans, her politics, and her economic hardships. As far as I can judge, the press reports which clamor for a naval holiday come almost exclusively from Great Britain. America has money for building ships, while England, with her enormous fleet, has not.

"More important, however, I believe, is Great Britain's decision. I see therein a great lesson in naval warfare.

"England is naturally dissatisfied with the rôle her high seas fleet played off Skagerrak and throughout the war. England's capital ships decided to do nothing and remained in port. A party arises of politicians and naval men who are claiming that ships of the line are dead and who desire nothing built but submarines, small craft, and aircraft.

Want Time to Decide.

"The old timers waver. Their indecision prompts the cry for a naval holiday, during which experiments will show the best course to be adopted. This is the best proof that England recognizes she lost the Skagerrak battle and that her navy has not gained any new laurels.

"Japan is an island empire like England and, to some extent, has to meet the same problems. America is a continent and does not face the most important of all naval warfare problems, the possibility of an economic and food blockade. America, therefore, more easily than her rivals, can afford to carry out her naval program.

"Certainly if I were an American I would not listen to the naval holiday talk, but would cast my vote for universal disarmament and restoration of world peace, which still is far away."

BRITISH MILLION IDLE; RED FLAG IN LONDON STREETS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The registered unemployment figures are rapidly mounting toward the million mark in England. The increase during the week between Jan. 1 and Jan. 8 was 111,000, bringing the total to that date to 859,000. Since then 10,000 coal miners have lost their work and many thousands of other workers have been ousted.

Among the many firms which have closed their doors since the new year—those employing a large body of workers—were the Furness Iron mines and the Belfast spinning mills. Lysgath's St. Vincent iron works will close on Jan. 29.

All the admiralty establishments will work on a short time schedule of forty hours a week beginning on Monday. Coates' Paisley mills, employing several thousand women, have been placed on a thirty hour a week schedule.

The crisis in London is becoming acute, with the labor bodies refusing to accept the government plans and the government declining labor's outlined policy for help.

Several parades of unemployed, carrying red banners, marched through the streets yesterday and today. One group invaded the west end shopping district. It was preceded and followed by mounted police.

In the cotton and spinning trades alone a hundred thousand workers are receiving unemployment aid from the cotton reconstruction committee.

Coal production has dropped from 5,400,000 tons on Dec. 18 to 3,000,000 tons last week. Two hundred thousand miners are out of work.

May Forbid Smoking in White House, Capitol

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—The president and even senators and representatives might have to take to the streets to enjoy cigar, cigaret, or a pipe if a bill offered today by Senator Smoot becomes a law. It forbids smoking in government departments or "any independent establishment of the government" as a fire protection measure.

Its language was held to include the White House and capitol.

A recent fire which destroyed census bureau records, attributed to a cigaret, prompted the Utah senator's proposal.

Five Cent Loaf Is Back; Welcome, Little Stranger!

New York, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—The 5 cent loaf of bread, which disappeared early in the war, returned today with a new bakery. And it is here to stay, say the makers. Furthermore, they boast that even at this price they are able to make a profit of 1½ to 2 cents on each loaf. The loaf is standard size.

EVANSTON MAY NEVER LEARN "WHAT'S WRONG"

Chesterton Lecture Is Canceled.

Gilbert K. Chesterton, celebrated English writer, will not appear on the public platform in Evanston during his tour of the middle west, as far as could be learned last night. If the "Chestertonians" in that cultured community wish to hear him answer the question "What's Wrong With the World?" or discuss any of his other works, they will have to journey to Chicago.

Evanstonians were expectantly awaiting the arrival of the British writer and critic when it was learned that his managers had broken their contract with the Rev. Dr. George Craig Stewart, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church in Evanston, a trustee of Northwestern university and president of the alumni association of that institution. Dr. Stewart explained last night how the contract was broken.

Signed Contract for $750.

"A representative of his managers came to me in October," he said. "I contracted for his appearance in Evanston for $750, with the stipulation that he was to visit Evanston before he spoke in Chicago.

"I did not sign the contract with the idea of making money. That would be impossible, for there is no hall in Evanston large enough. I did it merely that members of the various clubs of the church and other admirers of Chesterton might hear him without having to go to Chicago.

Does Not Blame Chesterton.

"A week later the woman informed me that the management of the tour had broken the contract. They offered me another contract for $1,000 with no provision for priority rights in Evanston, but I refused to sign. No blame should be attached to Mr. Chesterton personally."

Mrs. G. W. Kaufman, president of the Evanston Woman's club, said that organization does not intend to invite Chesterton there. Neither will the Drama club of Evanston, according to its president, Mrs. H. W. Atwater.

Medical Discovery May Bring Back Herb Doctor

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

PARIS, Jan. 15.—A discovery that may revolutionize medical science and bring the old fashioned herbalist back into the limelight has been made after twenty years' research by the French biologist, Prof. Emile Bourquelot, who has succeeded in isolating the active principle of many plants formerly considered of curative value, but discarded by modern practice.

AVENGERS KILL WIFE SLAYER AT MOUNTAIN TOP

Hot Springs, Ark., Jan. 15.—G. N. Burkhart was at his camp fire on the summit of Pigeon mountain early this morning. Some men approached and asked to be allowed to warm themselves. He drew a revolver and warned them back. They told him to throw up his hands. He fired.

The revolver was shot from his hand. He stooped to pick it up. He was riddled. A few days ago he shot his wife to death, then crushed her head with a club.

Her body was found near Womble, Ark., and the posse had been looking for him since then. He had written to the woman's brother admitting the killing and saying he would kill himself.

Prohibition Has Ruined One Good Old Church Day

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—An incident of "the good old days" was recalled today by Miss Alice Robertson, representative elect from Oklahoma.

During a talk with newspapermen at the capitol prohibition came up.

"Things are different now," Miss Robertson said. "When my great-grandfather was ordained for the ministry such a big crowd gathered for the ceremony that he had to open three barrels of whisky."

PREMIER CALLS BRITISH ENVOY TO U. S. HOME

Geddes Sails to Talk of Naval Plans.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15—Recalled to London for the announced purpose of consulting with Premier Lloyd George and Earl Curzon, secretary for foreign affairs, Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador, slipped away from Washington last night and sailed today from New York for England. He was accompanied by H. V. Tennant, his private secretary, who came with him to Washington when he assumed his office less than eight months ago. Present plans are for him to return in February, the embassy stated.

Lady Geddes remained here with the children, thus bearing out an embassy statement that, according to present intention, the ambassador would return to Washington next month.

The departure of the ambassador was announced from the embassy here today in the following statement:

"Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador, sailed for England today from New York. He has been summoned to London to confer with the prime minister and the secretary of state for foreign affairs. According to present intentions, he will return to Washington in February."

Trip Stirs Conjecture.

No statement having been made as to the purposes for which the ambassador had been summoned home, there is much speculation here regarding the purposes of the conference.

In some quarters it was rumored the Irish situation was the main reason for the ambassador's call to the foreign office. In other quarters, however, this was not regarded as probable. It was stated that the ambassador's departure would delay negotiations between the treasury department and British government on the subject of funding Britain's debt to America into long time notes, a matter concerning which Lord Chalmers of England was assigned to take up with the secretary of the treasury. His departure from England on this mission, it is understood, will be delayed.

Oil Situation Important.

Another important issue between the United States and Great Britain is the oil situation. This country has protested against the British-French agreement as to development of oil in the Mesopotamia oil fields. Great Britain never has replied to Secretary Colby's note on that subject.

The other questions that may come up are disarmament, the negotiations between the United States and Japan, the disposal to be made of former German cables, and the probable policies of the Harding administration.

Pending tariff legislation in congress and the Mexican oil situation in which Great Britain is heavily interested also were suggested as matters which the British foreign office might desire to discuss with Ambassador Geddes.

TO DISCUSS NAVY PLANS.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The question of the naval policies of the United States and Great Britain will be one of the principal subjects discussed at the forthcoming conferences here between Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador to the United States, the prime minister, David Lloyd George, and Earl Curzon, the foreign secretary, it was stated in authoritative quarters today.

"Burglaress" Uses Jimmy; Fails to Obtain Loot

A fur coated woman burglar, who is an adept with a "jimmy," attempted to break into the apartment of W. E. Johnson at 5433 Greenwood avenue yesterday. When Mr. Johnson reached home he was informed by a neighbor that a well dressed woman, about 25 years old, had been seen leaving his apartment a few moments before. Investigation disclosed that a "jimmy" had been used on the door, but the "burglaress" evidently was frightened away before she obtained any loot.

Physician Victim of Auto Thieves for the Sixth Time

"This is my sixth automobile stolen in three years. Only two of them were recovered," said Dr. Henry L. Baker, 3860 Lexington street, yesterday in reporting the theft of his automobile. Fourteen other automobiles were reported stolen.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 15.—Seven landlords were ordered to make rent reductions averaging about 20 per cent by the local rent bureau.

U. S.-Britain Insure World Peace—Sims

New York, Jan. 15.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, addressing the Allied Loyalty league tonight, said that the future peace of the world depended on the English speaking people. He emphasized the necessity for naval preparedness.

"If you ever get into trouble again, and your navy is not ready—not in a month, or a week, but at once—you are going to be defeated, and you will pay something in an indemnity which will make you pay attention to a prepared navy in the future," he said.

"I don't want to pretend that all of our allies were the loveliest things there ever were," he continued. "Take the Britishers, for example. Their manners were not much better than our own. We liked the British because they believed in personal liberty. It will be a long time before you see prohibition on the other side.

"Many of our differences are mere pin pricks, but pin pricks sometimes result in blood-poisoning."

BANDITS SLAY 2 IN $4,350 RAID ON BANK IN BAY CITY

Masked Men Flee in Stolen Motor.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—L. M. Persons, 45, insurance agent, and Martin L. Debats, 60, prominent grocer, were killed at 9 o'clock tonight by four masked bandits, who robbed the Broadway branch of the Bay County Savings bank. Both men were shot without warning.

The robbers got away after ransacking the teller's till and securing $4,350 in currency.

The bank was about to close for the day and Debats and Persons were at the teller's window talking to the manager, Fred Loll, when the four entered.

"Throw up your hands," they ordered, and without further warning started shooting, each man having two automatics. Persons was shot through the heart and head and Debats through the chest. Both died instantly.

Keep Up Stream of Bullets.

Loll threw up his hands, and his assistant, William Grimmer, dropped down behind the counter. The robbers continued shooting. Three of them rushed behind the counters and ordered the bank employés to lie face down on the floor.

As they ran out the back way they met several people on the stairs. They ordered them back and fired. Several others started into the street from a poolroom across the way, and these were dispersed in the same way as the bandits jumped into an automobile they had stolen earlier in the evening.

The driver, who had waited at the wheel, started down a side street, the passengers firing through the curtains at the crowd. The car zigzagged in several directions and was finally abandoned back of a church at Columbus and Monroe, two miles from the scene of the crime.

Shoot Man for $6,000 Payroll.

New York, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Automobile bandits shot Carlos Gunther, paymaster of the Manhattan Brass company, and stole a satchel containing about $6,000 today. Gunther was on his way from a bank to the company's plant with the payroll. He was reported dying tonight.

Richard Schminke, Gunther's bodyguard, was knocked unconscious with a monkey wrench. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

$250,000 Loot Recovered.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 15.—A robber was killed, another injured, and about $250,000 in cash and Liberty bonds was recovered by police investigating the robbery of a postoffice substation here reported last night. Patrick Murphy, one of the robbers, lost his life when the robbers' auto overturned.

W. S. Scrivner, another member of the outlaw band, was injured in the accident. Pursuers found him pinned under the wrecked car. He led them, they say, to a caché, where $200,000 in Liberty bonds and $46,000 in cash—proceeds of other robberies—had been hidden.

16 U. S. Seaplanes Finish California-Canal Flight

BALBOA, C. Z., Jan. 15.—Sixteen United States naval seaplanes arrived at the Pacific entrance to the Panama canal late today from San Diego, Cal., after a flight of more than 3,000 miles.

Weston, Neb., Jan. 15.—Eight year old Adeline Fisher is dead as a result of injuries received when a 300 pound bell fell upon her as she was ringing for recess at school.

M'GOVERNS GET 2 YEAR TERMS FROM LANDIS

15,000 See Raid at Rainbo Gardens.

What the federal officers termed a "gentlemanly raid"—carried out so quietly that not one of the 1,500 patrons at the tables and on the dance floor knew what was taking place—was made on the Rainbo Gardens, Clark street and Lawrence avenue, at 10:30 o'clock last night.

The raid was still in progress at an early hour this morning as a dozen agents, under the leadership of Prohibition Agent Mark Potter, searched every nook and cranny from garret to cellar. No "hip" liquor was molested. One waiter was arrested and a truckload of alleged real beer found in the basement was seized.

Prohibition agents also were investigating last night the origin of a $100,000 stock of liquor which thieves attempted to steal from the residence of State Senator Albert C. Clark, 7139 Euclid avenue, yesterday morning.

John and William McGovern, proprietors of the "Liberty Inn" café at North Clark and Erie streets, were sentenced to serve two years each in the house of correction and fined $2,000 by Judge Landis yesterday on two charges of contempt, for violating a federal injunction issued four weeks ago, restraining them from selling liquor. The sentences take effect tomorrow, unless stayed by an appeal.

An action brought to close the saloon for a year as a public nuisance was continued until Judge Landis returns from La Crosse, Wis., where he will hold court three weeks. The judge was preparing to try the latter case when McGovern's attorney objected, on the ground that they had had no notice.

"The evidence is all here," said Judge Landis. "You've just heard four witnesses, two for the government and two for the state. They have testified that whisky has been sold in the cabaret. There's only one answer to that, but I'll continue the matter three weeks."

Grows Out of Raid.

The prison sentence is the outgrowth of a raid made by agents from the office of Frank D. Richardson two months ago. They seized a truck load of liquor. An order restraining the proprietors from further sales was immediately issued.

Two weeks later Lieut. Bart Fleming and Detective Sergeant Louis Klatzco entered the cabaret as Fred Norling and Fred Gustafson of Rockford were protesting against the price they were charged for whisky. Their evidence resulted in Myer Linker, assistant district attorney, asking that the McGoverns be taken before Judge Landis for contempt. Later Attorney General Brundage sent agents to the cabaret. They purchased liquor and another action for contempt started. Both cases were heard yesterday. In each case the limit, a year's imprisonment and a fine of $1,000, was imposed.

Twenty-five Saloon Men Enjoined.

In addition to hearing the McGovern cases, Judge Landis granted injunctions against twenty-five saloon owners making further sales and sentenced five violators of prohibition laws. He also granted a change of venue to Mike de Pike Heitler and his thirty codefendants and transferred a petition attacking the sufficiency of a search warrant to Commissioner Mason.

The warrant attacked was the one used by prohibition officers to search the Green Mill Gardens on New Year's eve. Roy D. Keehn, attorney for Tom Chamales, owner of the gardens, asked that the warrant be quashed on the grounds that the address written in the warrant specified the United Cigar store at 4800 Broadway and not the Green Mill. He also charged that the sale of whisky on which the warrant was based was not made.

These Draw Sentences.

Others sentenced yesterday by Judge Landis were:

John Winnicki, arrested after his wife complained of his keeping a still; sent to the house of correction for three months.

Elmer Lynch, a bartender at the "Merry Widow" saloon; sentenced to six months in the house of correction when he confessed that he had sold whisky, and poured out drinks, himself, for the customers.

Bruno Tomashafeski, sentenced to one hour in the custody of the United States marshal.

Stephen Sirovica, fined $200.

Frank Crossek, fined $10.

ROBBERS IN CLARK HOME

A bandit dressed in woman's clothes and three confederates nearly succeeded yesterday in a bold attempt to steal $100,000 worth of liquor, the private stock of State Senator Albert C. Clark, 7139 Euclid avenue.

The four men, with four others implicated in the crime, were arrested after the Clark home had been surrounded by policemen called by neighbors. The senator's private stock, with the exception of that consumed by the bandits in an early morning jamboree, is still in his cellar.

At 7:30 o'clock Friday night the doorbell at the Clark home rang twice. Harry Nelson, a servant, went to the door.

"Woman" Asks About Senator.

A woman—apparently—stood outside.

"Is the senator at home?" "she" queried.

"No, he isn't," replied Nelson.

"Well, then, stick up your hands!" the "woman" gruffly ordered.

Three men followed her inside the house. They forced Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Catherine Nagleford, the two other servants, and Albert C. Clark, Jr., son of the senator, into an upstairs bedroom. Two of the men, with drawn revolvers, stood on guard outside. The others, with keys to the liquor lockers taken from the servants, went to the basement.

From that time until 1:30 a. m. the bandits carried liquor out of the basement. Then neighbors became suspicious at the activity and noise and phoned the police. The house was surrounded. The bandits surrendered. They gave the names of:

Howard West, 32 years old, 1333 East Sixty-ninth street. Police say he was the "woman."

John F. Haynes, 4611 Emerald avenue.

Frank J. Smith, 226 East Superior street.

Frank Ropke, 1379 East Fifty-third street.

Truck Found at Garage.

Information obtained by the police led them then to the Grand Crossing garage. They found the whisky truck there and four other men. These gave the names of:

Thomas McGowan, 7251 Maryland avenue.

Edward Durking, 525 West Twenty-fifth place.

Arnold Bloom, 7615 Dobson avenue.

Alvin Ogren, 7509 Drexel avenue.

Two others said to have been in the robbery plot escaped.

Smith is said to have confessed to the police shortly after his capture.

Chief of Police Fitzmorris highly complimented Capt. Fred Gurney of the Grand Crossing station and his men.

"This is the kind of police work that will rid Chicago of its criminals," he said.

Young Clark and the servants were not injured in any way. Senator Clark is in California.

RAID ON CLUB'S CELLAR STORES IS THWARTED

What is believed to have been a second attempt to rob the Lake Shore Country club, between Glencoe and Highland Park, of its cellar stores, was thwarted yesterday afternoon by Mrs. James Shaw and her sister-in-law, Miss Sara Shaw, caretakers.

Five Negroes drove up to the club in a new automobile without a license plate and asked to be admitted, as "Mr. Boynton" had told them to "measure a room for a rug." Mrs. Shaw knew there was no member named Boynton and refused them admittance. They drove away.

The club cellars were raided last Saturday by five men, who locked Mrs. Shaw and her sister-in-law in a room. The loot was valued at several thousand dollars.

W. C. T. U. TO MARK DRY ANNIVERSARY BY CIGARET WAR

Today, one year after the ratification of the eighteenth amendment by the state of Nebraska, which made national prohibition the law, the Women's Christian Temperance union will launch a new prohibition campaign—this time against cigarets.

News from Evanston yesterday was that Marcy union of the W. C. T. U. had adopted a resolution aimed at cigarets, and would start a campaign against all Evanston merchants who sold cigarets to persons under 21.

As an official observance of the "first anniversary of prohibition," the W. C. T. U. will conduct special services tonight in Covenant Methodist church, Evanston. A feature will be the recitation of the eighteenth amendment by Miss Alice Hansen.

Support was given yesterday by the W. C. T. U. to the Evanston Township High school students who are prosecuting several cigaret dealers alleged to have sold to minors. The W. C. T. U. "resolved to stand by the boys with prayers and aid." The case, dismissed last week by Judge Samuel Harrison, will be reheard Tuesday.

Tax Forms on $5,000 Incomes Are Delayed

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—The sending out of income tax forms for incomes of less than $5,000, a job requiring distribution of more than 5,000,000 copies, has been delayed. It was expected to begin mailing them today, treasury officials said, but probably they will not be ready before Jan. 25, leaving forty-three days for filling out and filing.

BURGLARS STEAL $3,000 CLOTHING NEAR CO-ED HOME

Burglars operated within a block of Willard hall, the principal co-ed dormitory at Northwestern university in Evanston, early Friday morning. Smashing the window in the clothing shop of McFarland & Ehman, Church street and Sherman avenue, they hauled away eighty suits of clothes, valued at $3,000. A porter found the front door smashed down and called the police. The clothiers believe autos were used to haul away the loot.

As the scene of the robbery is within a few hundred feet of several co-ed dormitories, the young women students are alarmed.

Chief Charles W. Leggett has switched a majority of his men into plain clothes and most of them patrol the city on foot and by auto throughout the night. During last week no suspects were arrested, but the number of attacks on women by morons decreased to two. The police department is being equipped with an alarm system costing $16,000. It is expected the police committee will have a report to give the city council Tuesday night.

TRAILING AUTO FOILS ROBBERS OF BOOZE TRUCK

Two automobile bandits who tried to hold up the driver of a truck load of liquor early yesterday failed to notice an escorting automobile, and as a result fled in a hail of bullets without obtaining anything.

The attempted holdup occurred in West Roosevelt road, between Morgan and Sangamon streets, when the men leaped from their machine and ordered John Thomas, driver of the truck, to stop. He tried to ram their car, but they foiled him and were about to climb to the driver's seat when Emmanuel (Manny) Goodman, a whisky wholesaler at 1234 Roosevelt road, owner of the truck and its contents, drove up in his automobile and opened fire on the bandits. They fled, while he riddled the back of their car, emptying two revolvers.

300 SUSPECTS TAKEN IN RAIDS ON VIEW TODAY

One of the biggest "showups" in the history of the police department will be held at the Desplaines street station at 3 o'clock this afternoon, when nearly 300 suspects will be lined up to be viewed by victims of recent burglaries and holdups. More than 260 suspects were under arrest by midnight and raids were continuing in various parts of the city. More than seventy-five of those taken were found to have police records.

Fifty-five were gathered in after 8 o'clock last night by raiding squads headed by Lieuts. John W. Norton and William Schoemaker and Detective Sergeants Charles Gratton and George O'Connor.

The prisoners, scattered among the various stations, will all be brought to the Desplaines street station today and patrolmen ordered to notify persons who have made "squeals" recently to appear there in an effort to identify them.

Capt. Moffett to Become Chief of Naval Aviation

Capt. W. A. Moffett, formerly commander at the Great Lake station, who has been appointed director of naval aviation with headquarters in Washington, D. C., will leave Lake Forest for his new post today. His wife and six children will accompany him.

DRY ENFORCERS CAUSE 24,469 TO BE ARRESTED

Internal Revenue Chief Reports on Work.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—"On the whole, I feel that the accomplishments of the prohibition enforcement forces are satisfactory," Commissioner Williams of Internal Revenue bureau declared tonight in a statement reviewing the first year of national prohibition.

"The Volstead act has not yet had a fair trial," he said.

From Jan. 16, 1920, to Nov. 30, 1920, the commissioner said, there were 24,469 persons arrested for violation of the national prohibition laws, and 23,959 recommended for prosecution.

Results of Bureau's Work.

There were 136,608 gallons of spirits seized and destroyed and 161,834 gallons seized but not destroyed. During the five months ended with Nov. 30, 1920, taxes collected by the bureau amounted to $540,889, while from Jan. 1 of that year to July 1 a total of $641,029 had been collected.

The permit system has given the bureau considerable difficulty the commissioner said, especially as applying to the withdrawal of liquor from bonded warehouses and distilleries. Many permits were forged, he declared, and the liquor obtained was diverted for illegal purposes.

"Nevertheless we feel that this situation is well in hand," Commissioner Williams said.

Both Commissioner Williams and Commissioner Kramer will quit their posts March 4. They will offer their resignations to President Harding.

At End of "Hang Over."

Prohibition Commissioner Kramer declared the American people were rapidly recovering from their "hang-over," and in the future, enforcement of the law should become increasingly easier.

There were more than 70,000 permits in existence the last year, but there will be perhaps not more than half as many next year. The bureau has been busy culling out the "undesirables" for several months and the new list will be held to the strictest minimum, the commissioner declared.

During the first ten months of constitutional prohibition, 35,569,000 gallons of distilled spirits were withdrawn, tax paid, from bonded warehouses. On this basis, it was officially estimated that withdrawals for the year ending tonight would exceed 43,000,000 gallons. Such withdrawals are permitted for nonbeverage purposes.

In the "Good Old Days."

Internal revenue records show that for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1919, the last full year before prohibition, withdrawals for all purposes aggregated 81,600,000 gallons. The records also show that withdrawals for nonbeverage uses during the months of that year averaged only about one-fourth of the amount taken out of bonded storage for drinking purposes.

Mr. Kramer said many manufacturers of patent medicines refuse to believe their product has become a popular prohibition beverage. They attribute the increase in sales to an awakening of the people to the formula's medicinal value.

"But we know differently here," the commissioner declared. "The alcohol and not the medicinal portion contained in those bottles is the reason for their popularity."

ANTI-CRUELTY SOCIETY TELLS OF YEAR'S WORK

More than 8,000 stray animals, including a coyote, a lion cub, a carrier pigeon with a broken leg and two sheep in addition to the usual assortment of dogs and cats, were cared for last year by the Anti-Cruelty society, according to the report of Secretary H. L. Roberts made public yesterday.

"We cared for 8,049 small animals last year," said Mr. Roberts. "Some of them were ailing and we cured them if possible. The good ones we found homes for. More than 600 dogs were placed as every one seems to want dogs, but no one wants cats, so these were disposed of painlessly."

The society held its annual meeting yesterday and the following officers were elected: John J. Abbott, president; George W. Dixon, first vice president; Mrs. Norbal H. Pierce, second vice president; Mrs. George M. Wisner, third vice president; directors, E. J. Baker, Howard Gillett, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, J. J. Roberts, A. R. Brunker, Mrs. J. 4 DOCTORS LOSE 'OLD HOMESTEAD' IN LEASE WAR

Furniture Tossed Out of Loop Offices.

Four Chicago specialists, Drs. H. W. Allport, world war veteran; David G. Marks, P. H. Welch and L. Conklin, came down to the suite of offices they have held in the Mallers bulding for more than five years, to find the doors locked and their office furniture and equipment piled in the hallway.

"What is it," they demanded, "a housebreaking?"

"No," replied two husky watchmen. "You're out in the street, that's all. You're evicted."

Due to War Over Lease.

Further inquiry on the part of the doctors, who were gently but firmly restrained from even touching their goods or opening their desks, brought the information that dispossession notices had been served by the building management as the last step in a lease war that began when office rents started to climb.

"I can understand how people feel now when the villain grabs the old homestead," said Dr. Allport last night. "After one day trying to treat patients on stairways and in the street I can fully sympathize with Belgium.

"We signed a lease for the suite in 1917. It covered five years and called for renewal each year. Rents were down then and the management was very friendly.

Returns from War; Rents Up.

"I went into the army, and when I came back found rents sky high. Mr. Mallers told us he could get three times what we were paying. Things came to a head when we applied for our fourth year renewal and on the first of last May we were served with a notice to get out at once. We got an injunction for protection, but later withdrew from the suit when Dr. Welch took the case before a jury and won out, the court declaring his old lease valid.

"In the meantime the management had been holding a new annual lease which the rest of us had signed. We did not think this latter document could counterbalance the court decision, and declined to honor it. The eviction is the result."

J. B. Mallers Jr. could not be reached last night.

Gets $15,000 More in Will Because She Didn't Wed

Because she was not married at the time of the death of Mrs. Augusta E. Underwood of Lake Forest, Nov. 28, Miss Caroline E. Kimball of San Francisco, Cal., a niece, was given $15,000 in addition to jewels and $12,000 in cash in the will of Mrs. Underwood, admitted to probate yesterday at Waukegan. The will disposes of an estate valued at $220,000. Miss Florence Maude Underwood, a stepdaughter, received the bulk of the estate.

POLICE CHECK LONDON ARSON PLOT BY IRISH

Attempt to Burn Big Oil Tanks Foiled.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Jan. 15.—An armed gang, which Scotland Yard declares to have been Sinn Feiners, attempted early this morning to set fire to 2,000,000 gallons of oil in the Vacuum Oil company's tanks at Wandsworth. Wilfred Bernard Kenny, an Irishman, living on Mathew road, Battersea, was arrested and arraigned on charges of attempted murder and arson in connection with the affair.

Shortly after midnight a policeman saw three suspicious looking men crossing Wandsworth bridge. He followed them to the Vacuum plant and then summoned assistance.

Fire at Police.

The three men discovered they were being watched and fled, firing on the police as they ran.

The gang left six quart bottles of gasoline, several large pads of cotton wool, a carpenters' brace, a number of drills, a rope ladder, and two loaded revolvers behind on the Vacuum company's wharf.

Kenny was later taken into custody while loitering around the plant. When arrested a loaded revolver and letters and newspapers regarding Sinn Fein activities were said to have been found in his possesion.

MURPHY GETS STAY

BY JOHN LESTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, Jan. 15.—The execution of Joseph Murphy, sentenced to hang on Monday, has been postponed until Wednesday by Gen. Strickland, in command of the Cork martial law area, because of habeas corpus action in the Dublin courts. Murphy was convicted of being a member of a force which attacked the military. His counsel claims there is a defect in the evidence regarding his identification.

An attack on Dundrum police barracks at Tipperary last night is said to have failed after an hour's fight. No casualties were reported despite a heavy rifle fire and bombing.

TELL OF BRITISH LOSSES.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—A communique issued by the British war office today announced that during December fifty-two officers and men were killed in Ireland 118 wounded, and 5 reported missing.

Tragedies Are Common.

DUBLIN, Jan. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The period of comparative quiet which began in Dublin at the Christmastide proved short lived. During the past week there was a continuous succession of tragedies in which crown forces and persons identified with the Seinn Fein movement appeared to have suffered about equally.

According to one report ambuscades against crown forces, which previously have been staged chiefly after the curfew hour, will take place at daylight in the heart of the city, regardless of the risk of such attacks to pedestrians, for the purpose of forcing an extension of the martial law to the metropolis.

That martial law will be instituted generally is credited. The belief prevails in some quarters that it will be put into effect in the next few days and be accompanied by the changing of the curfew hour from 10 o'clock to 8 o'clock.

Irish Complain of Camps.

Condition in British internment camps in Ireland are terrible and should be investigated, it was charged in a Sinn Fen communique made public today.

The announcement said that 1,298 internments had been ordered so far, and that 800 of these men had not been given a trial and that they had not even been advised of the charges against them.

The Sinn Feners in the Ballykinlar camp are underfed and are living in insanitary surroundings, it was alleged. They have no enough shelter, they suffer from cold and many of them are barefooted, it was asserted.

To term the present situation in Ireland as anything but war is futile, but it is war of a sort different from anything in history, with roadsides, homes, and streets as battlefields, and a conglomerate series of ambushes and assassinations as battles.

Almost daily a lorry load of auxiliaries will be proceeding along a street. The crowds will hear the explosion of a bomb and perhaps a few passersby and one or two auxiliaries will be wounded.

Another phase of this unique picture is that of the daily raids by soldiers and police in search of conspirators.

De Valera Is Kept Busy.

Eamonn De Valera is said to have spent a busy week conferring with his associates and attending at least one cabinet meeting, at which the heads of all the principal departments of the Sinn Fein government were present. It is stated that the Republican government will continue to function without interruption.

Regarding De Valera's delayed manifesto, it is said that it may not be issued until the end of the next week. It is undertsood it will contain a review of the situation as De Valera found it on his return from the United States and perhaps deal with the results of the recent attempts to bring about peace negotiations.

Four Wounded in Cork.

CORK, Jan. 15.—Two detectives in plain clothes were wounded here today. The police later drove through the street, firing two shots. Two civilians were wounded.

"Black and Tans" Paid with U. S. Money, Charge

Lawrence Ginnell, member of the "Irish republic parliament," said yesterday that American money was financing the English "black and tan" military forces in Ireland. He addressed the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel La Salle. Moving pictures showing much of the recent destruction in Ireland taken by Capt. Edwin F. Weigle of THE TRIBUNE, were shown.

HOOSIERS ELECT HAYS PRESIDENT; PICK CABINET

Hear Harding Lauded by G. O. P. Chief.

Strains of a well known Hoosier tune pervaded the east wing of the Drake hotel last night. They smote the auditorial protuberances of Detective Paddy Nolan and inspired corrugations in his brow.

"What's this Wabash they're always singin' about?" re finally inquired.

"Wabash?" repeated Buddy Loftus, sparring for time. "Don't you know what the Wabash is? Why—er—it's a sort of La Salle street, with lots of banks on it."

"La Salle street nothin'!" sniffed Charlie McShane. "Can't you hear 'em singin' about moonshine?"

Ten the Chief Arrived.

Into the hallway, past a couple of butleresque traffic cops, stepped Chief Charles Fitzmorris—and the three detectives from the bureau adjourned suddenly and went their separate ways. Adorned were their persons with the festive habiliments of society, and no one, gazing upon the sartorial splendors of Mr. Nolan, would suspect that a homicidal gat lurked under the full dress coat. But when the Hoosier comes to our crime bound metrop, you know, the least we can do is offer police protection.

It was the sixteenth annual dinner of the Indiana Society of Chicago, with several hundred "senators" meeting in extraordinary session to count the electoral vote. With much pomp and food the parliamentary proceedings were prosecuted. When finally the music and the tumult had subsided and the canape cardinale and the medallion of whitefish had lifted from the political horizon, the chairman, disregarding the ballot box, reached into a vest pocket for a memo and declaimed:

"No votes for Will H. Hays of Sullivan, Ind. Will H. Hays is declared elected."

Hays Rises to Speak.

A blare of trumpets from the gallery, a flare of drums, an unfurling of flags—and the chairman of the Republican national committee rose to the plaudits of the assemblage. A moment later Fred Landis was declared v. p. of the Hoosier republic.

Praise for the president elect of another well known country, the United States of America, was the theme of Mr. Hays' response.

"Mr. Harding will make a great president," he said. "The country will love him, trust him, and follow him—just as all who know him love and trust him—and the world will honor him.

"He is no longer the candidate. He is in no sense a partisan president. He is to be the leader of us all—with enough Democrats voting for him to give a 50 per cent equity in him—and we may look with the most complete confidence to his performance. He means very, very much indeed to the country's welfare."

The senate convened early, and it was nigh the witching hour when the electoral college was adjourned and the scholars scampered across the campus toward home. The early proceedings were gastronomical and musical, with waitresses supplying the former and comely pages, dressed in the raiment of heraldry, serving the latter in voices pleasantly treble. Praise of Mr. Hays was the theme of their several lays. As an example:

When Bill was a lad he served a term
As office boy to a political firm;
He printed ballots and counted votes.
And he dusted off the candidates' overcoats.
He printed and he counted so carefullee
That now he is the ruler of the G. O. P.

Bill Hays, however, had a rival in the person of Hoosier beef. Ere the blue ribbon quadrupeds, skillfully dissected and ensconced upon numerous platters, were brought into the senate hall, a lyrical pæan of praise sounded from the pulchritudinous throats of the page folk.

"Bring on your bull," muttered Paddy Nolan to the waitress. "I've thrown 'em before, and I wield a mean fork."

The next instant he was en rapport at Chief Fitzmorris' introduction as one of the new cabinet members. Others to be named for portfolios were former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Gov. W. T. McCray of Indiana, James P. Goodrich, his predecessor, Senator William B. McKinley of Illinois, Federal Judge Albert B. Anderson, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Julius Rosenwald, Judge Francis E. Baker, Col. R. R. McCormick, Sidney Smith, "father of Andy Gump and granddad of Chester Gump," and John T. McCutcheon. Judge Landis, also chosen, was not present. Ten year old K. M. Landis II. sat in his place instead.

The hour was growing late and the league of nations had not yet convened.

"The sergeant of arms will set the clock back sixty minutes," announced the chair, and then Mr. McCutcheon, member of the committee of domestic relations, took up the gavel.

"A delegation from the league of nations is without," came a shout.

"Without what?" inquired the chair.

"Without reservations."

Amid fanfare and Nipponese melody, Baron Hoyto Kingo, emissary of Japan, marched up the aisle. Mr. Buckingham, acting as interpreter, informed Mr. Hays that the cherry blossoms bloom and the geisha girls sing only for the baron.

"Give him the $50 prize for politeness and ask him what is really on his mind," demanded the chairman.

"He wants universal disarmament, especially in the honorable United States," said the interpreter.

With ambassadorial pomp the representatives of Italy, France, Turkey, Spain, Chile, China, and England came before the senate.

"Sir George Why-For, emissary of King George the Fifth and Queen Mary the Four-Fifths," was the British announcement.

"I've just popped over from Blighty, and the bloomin' bounder's getting us all balled up," Sir George exploded.

"Will the interpreter please translate the gentleman's remarks?" requested Mr. McCutcheon.

"Pussyfoot" Stirs Protest.

"He's protesting against the invasion of England by 'Pussyfoot' Johnson. He says England wants to take it or let it alone, that every man's home is his castle, and every castle should have a cellar. He says a nation should keep its powder dry, but that's no reason why the cellar should be dry."

With wig and gown, marching to somber strains from the gallery, came the supreme court. There was one vacancy to fill, and Miss Helen Gordon—demure maiden of Wabash, Ind.—tripped up the aisle to fill it.

"The lady can have my seat," volunteered each of the bewigged judges, suddenly losing their judicial calm at sight of the comely face.

"She can have all I got," sighed Sergt. Nolan admiringly. "Where is this Indiana place, anyway? I think I'll move out there if it ain't too far away."

O'CALLAGHAN IS ADMITTED TO U.S. BY LABOR RULING

Secretary Wilson Ignores State Department.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—Ignoring the state department's order of deportation, Secretary of Labor Wilson today granted Lord Mayor O'Callaghan of Cork, who arrived in Newport News last week without a passport, permission to land as seaman.

According to the ruling, the lord mayor is permitted to land "for the purpose of reshipping on board any vessel bound for any foreign port or place unless the secretary of state directs that he be kept on his vessel."

Davis Asks Legal Opinion.

Surprised at the failure of the secretary of labor to recognize the formal ruling of the state department, Acting Secretary of State Davis tonight announced he would order an immediate investigation by the solicitor for the state department.

Until an opinion is received, Secretary Davis said, he would take no action toward directing that O'Callaghan by kept on the vessel upon which he arrived.

Will Complete His Testimony.

Secretary Wilson directed that the parole granted the lord mayor by the immigration authorities be cancelled and he be surrendered "promptly" by his attorney, Judge Lawless, in whose custody he was paroled, but Judge Lawless said he had no intention of surrendering O'Callaghan until his testimony had been concluded before the commission from the committee of one hundred investigating Irish conditions. It was for the purpose of testifying before this commission that O'Callaghan said he had come to the United States.

PEGGY MARSH'S SON REACHES U.S.; HIS MOTHER ILL

New York, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Conspicuous because he was the smallest voyager, Tony Marsh, the 4 year old son of Peggy Marsh and the late Henry Field of Chicago, arrived today on the White Star liner Adriatic. The real name of the youngster is Henry, according to Olive Sheringham, who brought him over.

She said Miss Marsh was to meet her little son when the ship arrived at the pier and was surprised to learn that Miss Marsh was in the hospital suffering from appendicitis. A man, who described himself as "an uncle," but who, it is understood, is the legal representative of Miss Marsh here, came on board and claimed the child.

The little boy wore a beaver skin coat over his knickerbocker suit and a beaver cap. He had a "scooter" and a big "Teddy Bear."

CHADBOURNE AND MARJORIE CURTIS WED IN GOTHAM

New York, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—The marriage of Miss Marjorie A. Curtis, only daughter of the late Dr. H. Holbrook Curtis, to Mr. Thomas L. Chadbourne, well known in Chicago, took place late this afternoon at the apartment of her mother at 500 Madison avenue. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Fagnani of the Union Theological Seminary, and was witnessed by a small gathering.

The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. W. E. Curtis, but she had no bridal attendants. Mr. Leroy Chadbourne served as his father's best man. Mr. Chadbourne and his bride will go to Miami, Florida, where they will board his house boat. After a month there they will go to Palm Beach, and on their return to New York will live at 520 Park avenue.

NAMES "RIVAL"

Coal Man's Wife Who Seeks Divorce and Gives Name of "Other Woman" in Bill.

MRS. ROBERT ABBOTT.

[Koehne Photo.]

ROBERT EDWARD ABBOTT, president of the Liberty Fuel and Material company and part owner of the Abbott-Erwin Coal company, was named as defendant yesterday in a divorce suit filed in the Superior court.

A story of an alleged infatuation for another woman, hilarious parties, and a mysterious trip to California is told in Mrs. Abbott's bill of complaint. She charges her husband had been spending portions of his $18,000 income on a Miss Marge McCollough and has told her he "will never give Miss McCullough up."

The Abbotts were married on March 4, 1916, at Waukegan. Mrs. Abbott asserts she was compelled to leave her husband on Dec. 10 of last year.

According to Attorney Wilson L. Kline, counsel for Mrs. Abbott, his client and her son, Robert Edward Jr., 3 years old, are now living at the Edgewater Beach.

NURSE BEATEN TO DEATH IN NAVAL ACADEMY PARK

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—No serious clew to the identity of the murderer of Miss Harriet M. Kavanaugh, 35, naval nurse, has yet been obtained, it was stated tonight. A board of officers and civilians is investigating.

A Negro mess attendant, stationed on the ship Cumberland, attached to the academy, was under suspicion today, but he was soon able to prove an alibi and was released.

During the day it developed that the crime occurred about 9 o'clock or shortly after she left her companion, Miss Oblender, also a nurse, near the northern gate of the naval academy.

Pharmacist's Mate Kenneth W. Riley, passing the bridge about 9:45 o'clock, heard groans and at the bottom of a steep bank on the road near the creek he found Miss Kavanaugh. She had been hit three blows on the head, and a piece of iron pipe about two feet long, covered with blood, was found near her body.

MAN, 82, SAVED FROM GAS DEATH.

Overcome by gas when a rubber tube became disconnected from a stove in his room, August Bradtke, 82 years old, a widower residing at 1443 Cleaver street, was resuscitated yesterday after rescuers had worked over him for an hour and forty minutes with a pulmotor.

'LOST' HUSBAND WINS AS WIFE CEASES FASTING

She Eats and He's Still Out of Her Church.

Danville, Ill., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ernest S. Harrington, who claims to have fasted for forty-eight days, has today ended her hunger strike.

Mrs. Harrington began her fast to compel her husband to join her church. He has steadfastly refused to do so, in spite of his wife's claims that she "saw visions advising her to continue the fast until he yielded."

Doctors Differ with Her.

For nearly forty days she continued her alleged fast, supported in her purpose by the advice of religious zealots. Meanwhile doctors said they could find no evidence of starvation. Her answer was that the "Lord was taking care of her."

A week ago a nurse was employed. From that time Mrs. Harrington—according to the nurse's statement—has taken no nourishment.

The nurse also says the patient showed symptoms of starvation. Meanwhile she had a "vision in which God promised to tell her when to end the strike."

Yesterday plans were made to take the woman into custody as insane. At the same time it was announced the grand jury would be asked to investigate the activities of the zealots encouraging her fast. They ceased to visit the Harrington home.

You Eat, Preacher Advises.

Today the Rev. G. S. Payne of Eldorado advised Mrs. Harrington to take food. Mr. Payne is head of the Penticostal Church of God, of which she is a member. He explained that the "Bible did not approve of such methods of forcing persons to join the church."

She took the minister's word for it and drank some milk. Then she went to sleep.

"I said she'd eat when she got hungry enough," was the comment of her husband. "I'm not going to join any church until I get good and ready."

Dr. W. C. Dixon, city health commissioner, who examined her, declared she had not fasted more than a week—expressed doubt as to whether she had been absolutely without food for that long.

DEMOCRATS WILL FIGHT TO HOLD SANBORN IN JOB

Senator Hughes Takes a Firm Stand on Proposal.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The Democratic minority in the Illinois state senate goes to Springfield tomorrow to fight to a finish for the confirmation of Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn as state tax commissioner. It is prepared to go the limit, even to the extent of breaking with the senate organization for the remainder of the session, in insisting that the hero of Chipilly Ridge be retained in his present post.

This was announced yesterday by State Senator Edward E. Hughes, Democratic leader of the senate. Senator Huges' declaration of war was one of the day's developments, indicating the popular outburst of indignation that has met the exposure of the city hall plot to dismiss the former colonel of the 131st infantry.

Respond to Public Sentiment.

"The citizens in my district will not stand for any such treatment of Gen. Sanborn," Senator Hughes said. "I have had scores of telephone calls, telegrams and letters urging me to stand out against the threatened decapitation of Sanborn. With a single exception each of my Democratic colleagues informs me that the same situation obtains in the various districts. There is no question as to our course. We are on our way to Springfield ready for a fight to the finish for Sanborn's confirmation."

News has trickled out that a new scheme is being evolved by the Lundin lieutenants, in conjunction with the state administration managers downstate.

The proposal, it is understood, is to displace the Democratic member of the commission, former Justice Charles C. Craig of Galesburg, with a Republican from downstate, have Capt. Percy B. Coffin, the Lundin candidate, made chairman of the commission in place of Frank F. Noleman, and permit Gen. Sanborn to remain in his preesnt place. By this move they would transfer control of the body to the state administration and stop the flood of criticism that would be aroused were the original plan to oust Gen. Sanborn carried into effect.

SENATORS GIVE VIEWS

That some indication of the sentiment of the state senators toward the confirmation of Gen. Sanborn as tax commissioner might be obtained, THE TRIBUNE on Friday afternoon, sent the following telegram to each member of the senate:

"Will you vote for or to reject the confirmation of appointment as tax commissioner of Gen. J. B. Sanborn, hero of Chipilly Ridge? Kindly wire answer our expense.

"CHICAGO TRIBUNE."

Replies had been received up to the hour that this edition went to press, as follows:

Henry W. Austin, Oak Park, Twenty-third district—I will vote for the confirmation of the appointment of Gen. Sanborn and for those of all the other appointments made by former Gov. Lowden.

Frank [illegible]. Sadler, Chicago, Eleventh district—There is not the slightest doubt of my course. I shall vote for the confirmation of Gen. Sanborn and will be proud to do so. I also favor the confirmation of the other appointments made by former Gov. Lowden.

High Regard for Sanborn.

W. H. Cornwell, Chicago, Thirty-first district—I shall vote to confirm the appointment of Gen. Sanborn, and can see no reason why any member of the senate should do otherwise.

Herbert S. Hicks, Rockford, Tenth district—I expect to vote for confirmation of Gen. Sanborn's appointment.

Martin B. Bailey, Danville, Twenty-second district—Telegram of fourteenth just received. Will gladly vote for Gen. Sanborn's confirmation as tax commissioner.

A. S. Cuthbertson, Bunker Hill, Thirty-eighth district—Cannot state how I shall vote on appointment, but expect to follow recommendations of the governor as far as possible.

Nathan E. Smith, Albion, Forty-eighth district—Under present understanding will vote for Sanborn. Open to conviction.

John D. Turnbaugh, Mount Carroll, Twelfth district—Am not prepared to say.

Richard R. Meents, Ashkum, Twentieth district—Replying to your telegram, I will vote to confirm Gov. Small's appointment of tax commissioners.

Martin R. Carlson, Moline, Thirty-third district—Not opposed to Sanborn but reserve my decision on vote until executive committee reports on recess appointments.

Otis F. Glenn, Murphysboro, Forty-fourth district—I am for confirmation.

Dailey Will Support Governor.

John Dailey, Peoria, Eighteenth district—Gov. Small is directly responsible to the people for his administration. All appointees should be of his own choosing and in harmony with his administration. I shall support the governor.

William S. Jewell, Lewistown, Forty-third district, president pro tem of the senate—I know of no reason why I would not vote to confirm appointment of Gen. Sanborn, but reserve positive decision until Tuesday.

J. G. Bardill, Highland, Forty-seventh district—If Gen. Sanborn is the governor's choice for tax commissioner and his name is sent to the senate for confirmation, I see no reason for not voting for his confirmation at this time.

William S. Gray, Coatsburg, Thirty-sixth district—Unless good and sufficient reasons can be shown why his nomination should not be confirmed, I shall vote for his confirmation.

James J. Barbour, Chicago, Sixth district—I certainly am opposed to the rejection of the appointment by Gov. Lowden of Gen. Sanborn as tax commissioner.

C. C. Pervier, Sheffield, Thirty-seventh district—Will support Gen. Sanborn.

Tinkle of Coins in Bank Replaces Clinking of Glasses in Old Saloon

The new Devon Trust and Savings bank, which occupies the site of the old "Last Chance Saloon," a B. P. landmark at Devon and Clark.

Evolution

THE evolution of the American saloon under the benign effect of the eighteenth amendment has resulted in drug stores, soft drink parlors, tearooms, candy shops, and what not. But it remained for Sheriff Charles W. Peters and a number of associates to transform an old groggey into a bank.

Their work was completed yesterday when the "Last Chance" saloon at Devon avenue and Clark street was reopened as the Devon Trust and Savings bank, with Sheriff Peters as vice president and H. C. W. Laubenheimer, his chief deputy, a member of the board of directors. Charles W. Willner is president.

The "Last Chance" was a landmark. Opened nearly thirty years ago by George Wilson, it offered for a number of years the "last chance for a drink" between Chicago and Waukegan.

John M. Erickson, the sheriff's grandson, was the first depositor at the new bank.

"Not bad," the sheriff mused; "from messenger boy to banker in one lone lifetime."

The first depositors—Jane Josephine Erickson, John Magnus Erickson, and their grandfather, Sheriff Charles W. Peters, vice president of the bank.

TRIES SUICIDE 4 TIMES; FAILS.

Mrs. Mary Welies, mother of two children, made a fourth unsuccessful attempt to end her life last night by inhaling gas. Her husband, John, found her unconscious on the floor with a gas tube in her mouth. She was revived. Welies told the police she had twice attempted suicide by gas and once had swallowed nearly a pint of wood alcohol. He could give no reason for her act other than she seemed to be suffering from melancholia.

15 JUDGES OPEN "QUICK JUSTICE" DRIVE ON CRIME

Beginning tomorrow, the Cook county jail will cease to be a residential hotel, "The Greystone," as it is known among criminals, is to be strictly a hostelry for transients.

Fifteen judges, an addition of eight from the appellate and civil branches, will sit in the criminal court until its calendar of more than 2,000 cases is cleaned up.

There are 788 prisoners awaiting trial in the county jail. There are 4,000 persons accused of crime roaming the streets on bond. Six months continuous grind of the wheels of justice may reduce the criminal docket to a point that will mean a trial for each criminal case within thirty days from the date of the crime. That is the objective. Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald and State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe estimate it may take a year to reach that goal.

How Judges Will Work.

Chief Justice McDonald will have charge of the grand jury and the new automobile court. Others who will hear cases in the criminal court building on the north side are Judges George Kersten, Hugo Pam, Frank Johnston Jr., John J. Sullivan, Francis S. Wilson and Hugo Friend.

Judge Joseph Fitch will continue to hear criminal court bail bond cases in the county building. Judges Martin Gridley, Jesse Holdom, John M. O'Connor, Charles M. Thomson, Thomas Taylor Jr., William E. Dever and Albert C. Barnes will also hold court in the county building, principally in bail cases.

Twenty-two hundred veniremen summoned for jury service will begin to report tomorrow.

State's Attorney Crowe has assigned his most experienced trial lawyers as prosecutors. Every application for a parole in major felonies is to be resisted.

Blow at Organized Crime.

"This increase of judges in the Criminal court is the hardest blow organized crime in this city has suffered in years," said Robert H. Hunter, chairman of the crime commission's committee on courts and prosecutions. "As the automobile is the chief accomplice of the modern criminal, establishment of the special automobile court is also a step in the right direction."

As a forerunner of the new policy, twelve defendants were sent to either Joliet penitentiary or Pontiac reformatory yesterday by Judges McDonald and Johnston. They included the "Lovers' Lane bandits" and the highwaymen who had robbed elevated railway cashiers. The Ashland drug store bandits will be tried tomorrow.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In reporting the recapture of James Probasco, a prisoner who escaped from the detective bureau, THE TRIBUNE stated he was taken in the apartment of Mrs. Josephine Wheeler, 3728 Rokeby street. The name should have been Miss Josephine Wheeler. It was also stated Probasco was traced through her photograph found in his flat. Miss Wheeler says Probasco was entirely unknown to her prior to his renting a room under the name of "Powers," and that he never possessed her picture.

THE TRIBUNE of Jan. 14 reported a victory of the Austin High school basketball heavies over Waller by 27 to 8. Austin defeated Tilden High, not Waller, in the game referred to.

A photograph of Miss Helen King of 731 Simpson street, Evanston, published in THE TRIBUNE of Jan. 15, was erroneously captioned Helen Krug.

Chicago Deserter Must Serve Term in Prison

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—President Wilson has approved the verdict of the court martial finding James D. Nolan, second lieutenant, air service, U. S. army, guilty of desertion at Chicago last July and of embezzling $4,929 of government funds. Nolan was sentenced to dismissal from the army, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and to two years at hard labor in the United States penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas.

BLOOD FLOWS IN BERLIN STREETS AT RED MEMORIAL

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—Blood flowed in the Berlin streets this afternoon, when, without warning, the police fired on the crowds celebrating the anniversary of the murder of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

Twenty thousand persons, mostly Communists, gathered before the palace, the same as last year, when there was bloodshed. The demonstrators headed toward the Brandenburg gate. The crowd broke the police barriers, whereupon the state police stationed in Wilhelmstrasse opened a fusillade.

Tribune Employé in Peril.

Miss Sigrid Schultz, a Chicagoan, secretary of THE TRIBUNE Berlin bureau, had a narrow escape. Hugo Stinnes, Germany's iron and coal king, was motoring towards the Adlon when the rioting began. The party quit their automobile and pushed their way into the crowds, saving themselves from possible harm.

The Communists rushed a state police patrol of three men and seized their rifles and revolvers. The police called for help. Fist fights followed. Later truck loads of police arrived, but the crowds refused to disperse, and the police fired in the air unavailingly, and then fired into the crowd.

"Sworn to Avenge Rosa."

The rioting was caused by 250 members of the Communist Labor party which quit the crowds of thousands in the Lustgarten and marched towards the reichstag, which district was roped off. They sang the "Internationale," and also the Ruhr district warfare song:

"We are sworn to be true to Karl Liebknecht,
We've sworn to avenge Rosa
Luxemburg."

When the rioting began the shooting caused a panic and many Communists took refuge in the shops.

HOMER SAMUELS.

MUSE IS SILENT AS GALLI-CURCI BECOMES BRIDE

Diva's Public Gets No Bid to Wedding.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 15.—From the footlights, Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci loves the public and is generous—but from her wedding bower she is selfish.

"I'm so very happy, and am deeply touched by the warm welcomes I have received since my engagement was announced—but my wedding—ah, that's so intimate a thing I cannot talk about that, even to my dear public," she said. "I must admit I am selfish with my great happiness."

In becoming Mrs. Homer Samuels at high noon today, the Chicago Opera company prima donna also becomes an American citizen.

The wedding day was the bridegroom's birthday aniversary. It is also the thirty-sixth anniversary of the wedding of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Samuels.

Divorced a Year Ago.

A year ago Mme. Galli-Curci Samuels took out her first naturalization papers, but by her marriage she does not need to apply for second papers. Also, a year ago, she was divorced from Luigi Curci in Chicago.

"I shall continue to sing, and Mr. Samuels will continue to compose and play, so long as we can be fair to ourselves and to the public. We have bought a home in Minneapolis and shall return here in June. We expect to spend our vacations at our cottage in the Catskills, where we study and work on new programs."

"Honeymoon in June."

The diva wore pearl gray taffeta with a silver lace apron and kolinski tails—her own idea of a wedding gown.

She carried orchids. Dr. H. P. Dewey, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational church, performed the ceremony. Dr. Harvey C. Samuels of Minneapolis, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

"There will not be much of a honeymoon," said the bride. "Our real honeymoon begins in June."

No Music at Services.

There was no music at the ceremony. Without any attempt at pomp Mr. Samuels and the diva walked to the altar of flowers and ferns built in an archway between the music room and the parlor of the Samuels home. They recited their vows solemnly and retired to the dining room, where an old fashioned turkey dinner was served.

Tonight Mr. Samuels and his bride will depart for Indianapolis, where they appear in concern Monday evening.

CANADA NATION WITHIN EMPIRE, OFFICIAL SAYS

New York, Jan. 15.—Canada, although part of the British empire, is a nation in itself and its spokesmen represent only the Canadian people, C. J. Doherty, K. C., minister of justice of Canada, declared on his arrival here today from the meeting of the council of the league of nations at Geneva.

"I have the utmost confidence that the empire will hold," he said, "but the empire members stand together on a basis of agreement and not a basis of control. To get the voice of the empire it is necessary to get the voice of all the nations that compose it.

"We reserve the right to our expressions of independence when we differ with those sent out from Downing street."

THE BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw a Check on It for the Unfortunate.

BY REV. G. A. MacWHORTER.

FROM a long list of church contributions to the Hoover fund [European relief council], the following are gleaned, other churches being mentioned as the work goes on:

Hyde Park Baptist	$2,006.37
Winnetka Congregational	1,838.75
First Presbyterian	1,131.50
St. Chrysostom's Episcopal	898.18
Union Church of Hinsdale	788.65
Sinai temple	778.75
Swedish Evangelical mission	757.41

About seventy-five churches in and near Chicago have contributed nearly $15,000. Send your contributions to Gen. Charles G. Dawes, treasurer, Central Trust company, Chicago.

In these days of the high cost of living it does not seem possible that one dollar would be sufficient to sustain a life for fifty days. Such, however, is the case in China, where 15,000,000 men, women, and children are starving to death. One hundred dollars will provide food for 5,000 Chinese for one day.

The situation is desperate and calls for immediate relief. A good organization has been effected in China by the Americans, British, and French to procure the wheat, corn, and beans that will sustain life and distribute them to the starving. John Jay Abbott is treasurer of the Chicago fund.

The "statement" of the Bank of Kindness for its first week, Jan. 9 to 15, inclusive, is as follows:

HUSBAND TELLS HOW WIFE LURED MEN HE ROBBED

Business Men Victims of Beautiful Blonde.

A chance arrest by the police yesterday led to disclosure of the activities of a comely woman, known as the Beautiful Blonde, who within the past six weeks has lured dozens of Chicagoans—many of them prominent business men—to apartments, where they have been strong-armed, deprived of their clothing, and robbed. Few of them have complained.

She operated as a lure for Kurt Hurtzman and Joseph T. Brown, who were arrested as they were entering the rooming house conducted by Harry Kleinow at 1113 West Madison street. They made complete confessions, the police say, and named many victims.

Says "Lure" Was His Wife.

Hurtzman said the lure was his wife and that her full name is Cleopatra McCorey Brown Hurtzman of Wichita Falls, Kas. He said they had been living at 4537 North Racine avenue. Mrs. Hurtzman was not there and evidence indicated a hasty departure. The police hope to have her in custody by tonight.

Many odd robberies, in which the victims told conflicting stories but in most instances did not mention the blonde, were solved through the confession.

Mrs. Hurtzman always posed as a woman with a jealous husband. They made it a point to get one good victim a night. They would scan the for rent columns of the newspapers and select each day an apartment in some distant part of the city. Then they would pay a small deposit. The trap was set. Mr. Hurtzman and Mr. Brown, who used to deliver beer barrels, were the strong arm men. They would greet the victim as he entered with a revolver and a gag.

They Kept a Diary.

Mr. Hurtzman keeps only a notebook, but Mrs. Hurtzman has a diary with the names of all her victims, he said. Some of the names with dates of the robberies, obtained from his notebook, were:

Nov. 27—William Lowenstein, the Surf apartments; met by Mrs. Hurtzman at Madison and Clark streets. Brought to a room at 63 West Schiller street, robbed of $300 in jewelry, $16 cash, his overcoat and shoes.

Dec. 9.—George Graham, 2114 North Clark street. Taken to 841 Fullerton avenue; $15 and coat, vest, trousers and overcoat.

Dec. 23.—B. A. Wechsler, jewelry salesman of 32 West Thirty-second street, New York; taken to 411 South Ashland avenue; $800 in jewelry; $100 cash; overcoat, tie, shirt, trousers, half hose.

Beat Up a "Bearcat."

Dec. 11.—Samuel Altman, 64 West Chestnut street; taken to 3861 Washington boulevard; $400 in jewelry, $30 cash.

Dec. 19.—R. T. Zacks, 1423 North La Salle street; taken to 1433 North La Salle street; $10 and an overcoat.

Dec. 22—Richard Jacker, 533 Gunderson avenue, Oak Park; taken to 2300 West Monroe; $10 and watch.

They beat up Mr. Jacker, Mr. Hurtzman said, because he boasted to Mrs. Hurtzman that he was a bearcat around the gentler sex and was separated from his wife.

HARDING TO GET PRIZE TURKEY OF POULTRY SHOW

Warren G. Harding, president elect, was assured by a telegram sent to him last night by the officials of the National Poultry show, that he would be amply supplied with turkey next Thanksgiving. Mrs. Eli Fowler of Rochelle, Ill., owner of the big mammoth bronze turkey, Warren G. Harding, that was awarded the silver cup as champion of this year's poultry show, says she will fatten, crate and ship the big bird to the president in plenty of time for the holiday feast this fall.

In order to do this Mrs. Fowler refused two offers of $250 for the big gobbler, or approximately $6.94 a pound. The turkey weighs thirty-six pounds. Immediately after the judge declared the bird champion, the highest honors of the show, Mrs. Fowler announced that he would be sent to the president. "I refuse to sell Warren G.," said Mrs. Fowler, when the two poultry breeders made their offers of $250 for the "flame of bronze," as the poultry editors referred to the Thanksgiving bird.

HUNTLEY LEGION FORCES FARMER TO KISS FLAG

Tried to Halt a Military Funeral.

The tolling of the town fire bell at Huntley, Ill., yesterday afternoon, summoned the 2,000 residents to the central square to witness the "administering of a lesson in patriotism."

August J. Jester, a farmer, 54 years old, was accused by the American Legion post of Huntley of disloyalty. He was made to kiss the flag after marching around the square five times with an American flag pinned on his coat.

Opposed Military Funeral.

According to members of the post, Jester, who is of German blood, had been disloyal during the war and recently tried to prevent the holding of a military funeral. As an official of the German Lutheran church of Huntley, he is said to have refused to allow the American Legion members in the church building, where part of the services over the body were to be performed. Jester's son claimed exemption from the draft as a farmer.

Jester drove into town about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Twenty-five ex-service men seized him and took him to the American Legion post, where he was questioned, but denied the allegations.

Jeered by Crowd.

The members then pinned a flag on his coat and solemnly warned him against further demonstrations of his alleged anti-Legion talk. He was then taken to the square and the inhabitants summoned by the fire bell. As the crowds looked on and jeered him, he was marched around five times, escorted by two squads of overseas veterans and then made to kiss the flag.

He was then allowed to go. Hastily he leaped to the seat of his wagon, seized the reins and left town in a cloud of dust.

PERU AND CHILE SEEK PEACE IN LAND DISPUTES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 15.—Diplomatic activities of the last few weeks indicate that Peru and Chile are trying to reach a peaceable and definite solution of the Tacna-Arica problem and are looking to Argentina as a possible arbitrator.

The state department's declaration that it will not endeavor to intervene unless it is invited by all the contenders has somewhat relieved the Chilean impression that America is prejudiced in favor of Peru. Dispatches from Santiago state that President Alessandri already is seeking a means for reaching an understanding with Peru.

Jose Carlos Bernales, former president of the Peruvian senate, is now in Santiago, following a visit to Buenos Aires, where he interviewed President Irogoyen regarding the Peruvian position. Senator Bernales is attempting to create interest in an international tribunal for the South American republics for the purpose of arbitrating their difficulties.

POLITE HAMMOND SALESGIRL WINS REWARD OF $50

Patience Without Limit Adorns Her Work.

Down in Hammond, Ind., it is known as "grzecznosc" in Polish, "artigkeit" in German, "cortez" in Mexican, and "[illegible]" in Chinese. But it all means plain, everyday politeness in English, the politeness pilgrim for THE TRIBUNE found yesterday when he dropped off in Hammond to award the $50 prize.

It seems that in Hammond they learned long ago to be polite and patient. The three great railroad trunk lines that run through the city have exacted this from its people. As the long freight trains roar past, sometimes for fifteen minutes, the citizens stand patiently by, commenting on the weather and the steel market. No one ever kicks.

Nary a Grumbler.

The politeness seeker visited one of these impromptu gatherings as a serpentine freight rattled across State street, thinking to find perhaps one person who would not be grumbling because of the delay. But, alas! In a dozen tongues seemingly only agreeable topics were exchanged. Nary a grumbler was to be found.

It was at the crossing that the politeness pilgrim realized it would take a linguist to award the prize. Not being one, he thought of a means of giving a fair deal to all. He pinned his muffler on the inside of his overcoat pocket, and, leaving a portion of it dangling, as though it was about to drop out, walked down the two main streets. No results. No one politely warned him he was about to lose his muffler.

A Street Chesterfield.

He retraced his steps in State street, the muffler still dangling. At the Erie tracks and State he met an old man standing beside a delivery wagon.

"Say, how much would it cost to haul four trunks to Chicago?" the pilgrim queried.

The man removed his ancient corncob pipe from his mouth. He replied: "Well, it would certainly cost a-plenty. Of course, I would be glad to do it, but it would take two days. The best way would be to send it by express. Now by express——"

And he went on to tell just how much it would cost by express. No one could have been more polite, especially as it was cold.

But down the main street continued the seeker for Hammond's politest. Into the federal building he wandered, and there came upon the stenographer for G. J. Simons, prohibition group chief for northern Indiana. She was especially polite.

Courtesy Under Difficulty.

Back down State street—Hammond's pride—walked the courtesy seeker, and into the department store of the E. C. Minas company. Through aisles of silks, toys, shoes, carpets. He was about to wander out again when a discussion at the table cloth counter stopped him. A plump woman with a red face was saying:

"In Germany a yard is 39 inches. They call it a meter. Here your yard is only 36 inches. I bought this cloth yesterday and find I have lost three inches on every yard. I want a full yard—a German yard."

"But, madam," said the clerk evenly, "we sell 36 inches to the yard. I cannot give you 39 inches. If you wish I will be glad to return your money."

"Yes, give me back the money," exclaimed the lady.

The saleslady made out the credit slip and politely directed the woman to the cashier.

Patience Without Limit.

"How much are these towels?" asked the politeness quester.

"Thirty-eight cents each; two to a customer," replied the saleslady.

Two were wrapped up. The change from the $1 bill was brought back.

"But I gave you a $2 bill," said the pilgrim.

"No; I'm sure you didn't," said the girl. "However, I'll see."

While she was on her way to the cashier's desk the string on the package was loosened. The clean towels fell on the floor.

"Gee, that was wrapped badly," the girl was told.

"I'll fix it at once," she said, smiling.

In exchange for the freshly wrapped package she received the card awarding her THE TRIBUNE'S $50 politeness prize.

"No, I never get irritated," explained Mrs. Helen De Camp Hofmann, the saleswoman. "Lots of the foreigners cannot understand some things, but I treat them all alike."

Mrs. Hofmann is 25 years old and lives at 286 Truman avenue.

Milwaukee High School's Pupils Fired for Frat Hop

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 15.—Eighteen pupils of the Riverside High school were suspended today for an indefinite period by Principal George Chamberlain for attending a fraternity dance Dec. 23. It was said fifty pupils of other high schools face a similar fate. Officials of the school board said pupils were required to sign pledges to refrain from joining secret organizations.

AMERICAN POLES HELD IN RUSSIA TO BE RELEASED

Warsaw and Moscow to Exchange Prisoners.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 15.—The Polish mission here announces that an agreement was reached at Riga with the bolsheviki for the repatriation of prisoners of war. The prisoners will be exchanged at the rate of 5,000 weekly, beginning ten days after the treaty covering the matter is ratified.

Capt. Merion Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla., a member of the Kosciusko squadron, who was shot down by the bolsheviks last summer, and several hundred Polish-Americans belonging to Gen. Haller's army, will be among the first to be exchanged.

Demands Czar Boundaries.

The Russian constituent assembly, in session here, this afternoon unanimously resolved not to recognize the states carved from the Russian empire. The resolution provides that Finland, Esthonia, Lithuania, Latvia, Poland, and the Caucasus states shall form a part of the Federated United States of Russia.

Today the foreign office announced the presence of forty identified bolshevik regiments between Smolensk and Mohilev. On the Minsk sector alone eighteen regiments are located preparatory to a drive on Vilna if the league of nations army occupies the plebescite zone as M. Titcherine, the soviet foreign minister, threatened. All the male adults in the Minsk region are mobilizing.

Second Army to Georgia.

The Russian soviet officials have just ordered a second Red army to the Georgian front and its troops are now on the way to the Caucasus.

Suspicion has been voiced that the Red activities are directed by German militarists, who are eager for the adoption of Gen. Hoffman's plan for utilizing German troops to crush the bolsheviks. It is realized that since the allies cannot send troops against the Russians the danger of a Red invasion may force the acceptance of German troops.

President Millerand wants to win the solidarity of France, Great Britain, and Italy and to win the friendship of the rank and file of the Germans in order to present a solid front against the Prussian militarists.

City Finds Way to Compel Payment of All Licenses

At last the city believes it has devised "an unbeatable system" to prevent its licenses—drug stores, cabarets, workshops, cigar stores, grocery stores and a hundred other lines of business—from doing business without paying the annual license fee required. Ald. Anton J. Cermak is the father of the new plan, which consists of an ordinance requirement that boiler inspectors, plumbing inspectors, the electrical bureau, building inspectors and the city sealer require that a city license be exhibited before issuing permits for the use of buildings, boilers, scales, plumbing or electrical installations.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

What public improvement should Hammond have next?

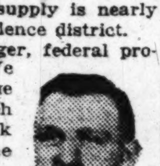
Where Asked.

Hammond, Ind.

The Answers.

Eleanor McClair, waitress — We should, first of all, have more movie theaters and more good places to dance. Then, too, we should have a subway under the railroads. The roads are right in the middle of the city and the long freight trains block important crossings and make it dangerous for Hammond workers.

H. O. Reissig, secretary, American Trust and Savings bank—We should have a better water system. The town has outgrown its water works. We need a subway under the railroad tracks. I think the water situation is most vital. Sometimes when the streets are sprinkled the water supply is nearly exhausted in the residence district.



Edward P. Berwanger, federal prohibition agent—We need better car line service about as much as anything I can think of now. The tax on the service is too much for the good of the community. Heavy trucking and the constant stream of automobiles passing through Hammond all through the touring season make street improvements imperative.

Letitia McWilliams, department store picket—We have been on a strike for eighteen weeks against three department stores here, which are unfair to organized labor. What we need here is department stores that are more fair to labor and a better relationship between labor and capital. Hammond should think more about the good will of its workers.

Adelaide R. Mayer, bank clerk—We need more places of amusement. There should be more parks for the benefit of inside workers. There should also be more good theaters and places to dance. The social side of Hammond needs to be added to first of all, and that goes for every business girl who finds it difficult to spend her spare evenings profitably.

Over 100 Negroes Held as Rotstein Slayer Suspects

More than 100 Negroes were taken into custody late Friday night and early yesterday as suspects in the murder of Hyman Rotstein, who was shot down in his grocery store at 2816 South State street by two robbers who escaped with $13. Eight were arrested in the Douglas hotel at 2906 South State street. All were viewed by Doris Smith, a 13 year old boy, the only eyewitness to the killing.

NO ONE ALLOWED TO SEE SCHWARTZ IN RUSSIAN JAIL

Soviet Order Isolated U.S. "Delegate."

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—G. S. Zinovieff, member of the central committee of the Russian soviet, upon whose orders M. Schwartz, an American Socialist of San Francisco, and his wife were imprisoned at Moscow, issued instructions to the other delegates to the Third Internationale to hold no intercourse with Schwartz, and to decline to listen to him. Arthur Crispien, one one of the four German delegates, so informed Schwartz today.

Wife Dies in Prison.

Herr Crispien said this order followed a discussion between them and Schwartz, whose opinions they had asked because he spoke Russian and had had an opportunity for investigation without government conductors.

Shortly afterward Schwartz disappeared. As a matter of fact, he and his wife were thrown into prison, remaining there for several months, Mrs. Schwartz dying from a hunger strike.

Received German Delegates.

In speaking with Schwartz today Herr Crispien explained:

"When we missed you we went to Zinovieff and asked what had happened. Zinovieff assured us that you had gone home. Later we heard you were in jail, and again visited Zinovieff, who said: 'O, he is all right; he will go out with the other American delegates.'"

The German delegates did not know that the other Americans had already left Russia. "Had we known you were still in prison," said Herr Crispien, "we would have started an agitation over all Germany for your release."

DRESSEL GIVEN WEEK TO WIND UP AN ESTATE

Judge Henry Horner of the Probate court yesterday gave Andrew H. Dressel, head of the defunct Dressel Commercial and Savings bank at 2322 West Roosevelt road, one week to wind up the affairs and make a report of the estate of the late Maximilian Bauman, of which he is the administrator. If the court order is not obeyed, the jurist asserted, he would commit Dressel to jail for contempt.

Dressel was in court yesterday attempting to straighten out the tangle in which he had gotten with William H. Fish, assistant to Judge Horner. The latter said that a number of court orders had been disobeyed by the banker.

The latter pleaded for more time. He told the court he was "cleaning up the estate" as quickly as possible.

Sell 700,000 Pounds of Burley Tobacco in Week

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 15.—More than 700,000 pounds of tobacco were sold on the Huntington burley market this week. Prices were steady, ranging from $1 to $69 a hundred pounds. An average of about $22 a hundred was maintained during the week.

How One Bright Girl Increased Her Salary

When Miss Boyd graduated from High School she "took the first thing that came along."

But now she was beginning to find herself and to look ahead. She knew there wasn't much future in the work she was doing. And so many untrained girls were losing their positions!

It occurred to her that what she needed was a profession—a line of work requiring expert knowledge and therefore something safe even in bad times.

One day she mentioned her ambition to one of the girls who came to see her quite often.

"Why don't you take up filing?" asked her friend. "I think you could learn it quickly and once you do there is a good position waiting for you at a good salary. Run in to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to tell you about the course."

So it was that Miss Boyd studied filing at night, graduated as "one of the brightest girls in the class" and got a position immediately.

Today she is getting $20 a week and is in line for another raise!

To every girl and woman who wants to better her position we offer these three words of advice—"Take up filing."

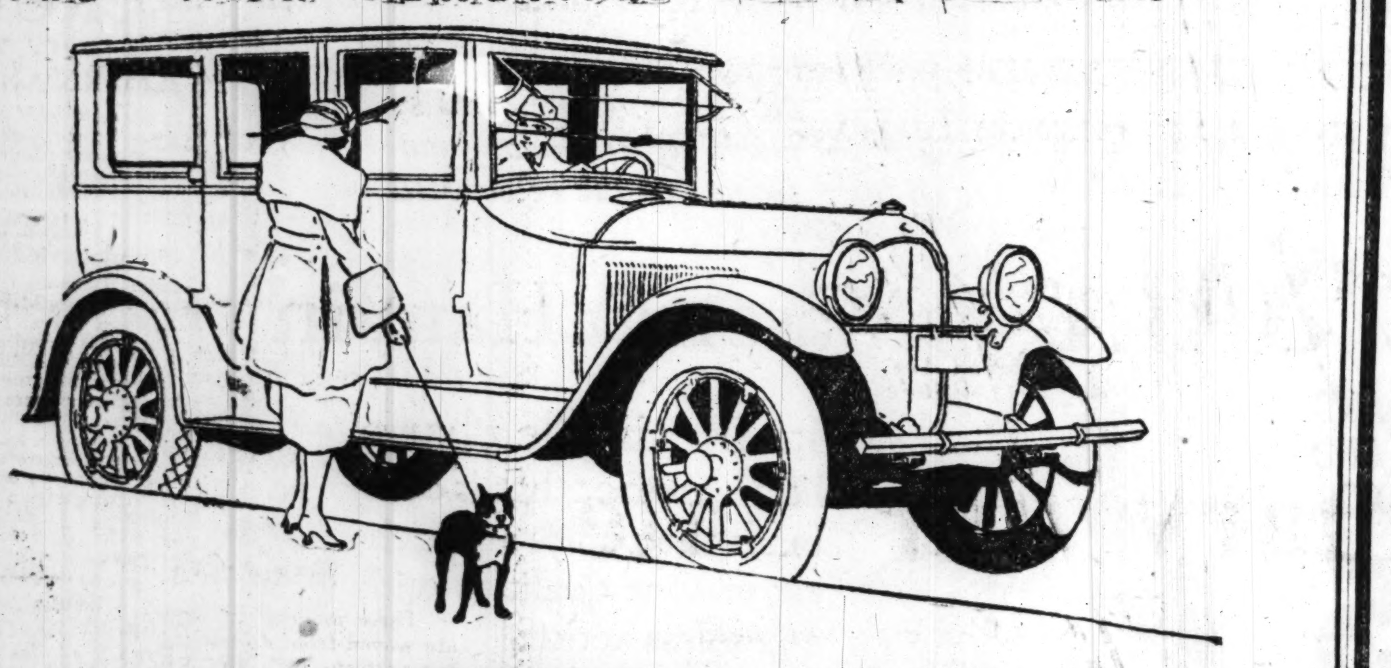
THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



PAIGE

Will You Accept This Invitation?

The new Paige seven-passenger Sedan is equipped with a power plant that is exclusively a Paige product, not available in cars of any other make.

We could tell you in glowing words that this Paige Sedan, by virtue of its extraordinary performance, is sweeping the country.

We would be telling nothing but facts.

We could tell you with earnest conviction that now, for the first time, maximum motoring qualities are obtainable at a popular price.

Such is the truth, for the new Paige "6-66" is a car without a legitimate competitor.

But we want you to know this for yourself and only a demonstration can accomplish this for you. Then, and only then, will you know in terms of power, speed, flexibility, comfort and easy-riding qualities why the new Paige "6-66" models are masterpieces of automotive engineering and the greatest values on the market today.

INDUSTRY TAKES UPWARD TURN; TEXTILES REOPEN

Survey Shows Signs of Business Revival.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

American industry, with the smelling salts under its nose, is starting to come out of it. Signs are growing that it is making ready to get on its pins again. It's a slow process, but the significant thing is that during the first half of January the movement of industry, by and large on a country-wide scale, appears to have been upward. In some regions the last week in particular has indicated that readjustment is actually beginning.

A survey of industrial centers shows that the textile mills have registered the largest resumption so far. Thus the revival starts where the depression began, for the textile industry was among the first to be knocked into a cocked hat when economy first inundated the country last spring and the public, overburdened by excessive prices, refused to stand the gaff any longer and started its "buying strike."

Textile Mills Resume.

With consumers refusing to consume and prices dropping, orders were canceled down the line until the mills closed down. They have been slowly starting up, here and there, on part time for a month or so past, but last week saw a pronounced revival.

New London, Conn., reported a general reopening of its factories, mostly on full time. Philadelphia reported its textile mills were resuming, most of them at full time. At Fall River, Mass., 5,000 workers went back to the looms, and the resumption throughout New England was reported quite general. At Altoona, Pa., the silk mills reopened at 50 per cent capacity; at Asheville, N. C., cotton mills employing 5,000 went to full time; at Lafayette, Ga., cotton mills reopened at full time; at Biddeford, Me., mills with 6,000 workers went to four days' operation a week where they had been running three.

Wage Cuts All Along Line.

Similar reports might be multiplied from nearly all textile communities. With the resumption there were wage cuts of 15 to 25 per cent. In the New England mills the general cut was 22½ per cent, and the United Textile workers have asked congress to investigate, arguing that the manufacturers acted in concert and by pre-arrangement.

What started the fabric factories going, however, was the fact that the garment trade came to the conclusion that prices of cloth at the mills had about reached a stabilized price level. As pointed out two or three weeks ago, this led to the placing of spring orders and an abatement of the cancellation fever. Then the mills started up, and the caves of industrial gloom in the mill cities of the east got the sun. It all hammers home the idea that the faster the industries get prices down to a "stabilized" level, the quicker will resumption resume.

Auto Factories Starting Up.

In the automotive cities, factories are slowly starting up. Many of the reopenings at New Year's indicated little or nothing because many shops of various sorts closed down for a week or two at Christmas time for inventory and repairs. But in the last week or so, several plants have reported a real quickening of activities.

It's slow but gradual—Detroit still reports some 100,000 unemployed—but the automobile business looks for a large resumption within a few weeks, and by February or March manufacturers expect factories to be hitting a good speed. They look for a big replacement business.

One large tractor maker said that his present business is comparable with 1919 at this time of year. His books show that on Jan. 14 of this year, his goods sold for next season's delivery, every machine with an actual deposit of $50 paid down, amount to $2,046,000. On Jan. 14, 1919, the figures were $2,094,000, about the same, and at that he was handicapped for the start of 1921 by the fact that last October, after the regular season closed, he sold $1,200,000 of tractors which had been held back by car shortage in the summer.

Other Lines Erratic.

Thus it goes for the first fortnight of 1921 in textiles and automobiles, the two industries first hit and hardest hit by the depression.

Other lines are still jumpy; one factory closes and another opens up, but when the situation is stripped of the cheer-o stuff of the professional optimist who refuses to admit much of a slump has occurred and of the gloom of the chronic pessimist who sees nothing but a world headed straight for the demnition bow-wows, it looks to the hard boiled observer no worse than it was at New Year's but a trifle improved.

SNAKES—THEY'RE STILL TO BE SEEN!

CHARGES CASH OF U. S. SUPPORTS 'BLACK AND TANS'

That American money is being used to support England's policy in Ireland is the charge made by Lawrence Ginnell, member of the Irish parliament from County Westmeath, who has been in the United States since last June. He addressed the Irish Fellowship club of Chicago yesterday at Hotel La Salle.

"I do not believe that the ordinary American citizen is at all aware that he is helping to maintain in Ireland a black and tan army of ex-convicts, released from prison for this purpose," said the speaker. "The pity of it is that England, now reeling after the war, is able to carry on this thing called government in Ireland and England by means of American money lent to her free of interest.

"We do not believe that America approves of the use of American money to arm the black and tan army with rifles and dum-dum bullets to shoot down men, women, children, and even priests."

Mr. Ginnell refused to explain his presence in America other than to say that only imprisonment awaited him in his own country.

And No Snakebite

NOT the least of the attractions at the Elks' circus, held last night at the clubhouse, 170 West Washington street, was a box of snakes. Prohibition having been more or less firmly established, the snakes proved universal favorites. And [a distressing oversight, as one or two of the members remarked sotto voce] not a case of snakebite developed. The snakes, you see, were entirely tame.

Seven Tenants Buy Flat Building for $900,000

Seven tenants have purchased an eleven story apartment building at 232 East Walton place, it was learned yesterday, for a consideration of $900,000, subject to an incumbrance of $600,000. Among the new tenant owners are E. O. Ellsworth and Paul Ellsworth, formerly of Milwaukee; Hugh McLennan of the McLennan Construction company, and Perry M. Shepard and Louis R. Wasey, who recently purchased the Granger Farwell place in Lake Forest.

A corporation has been formed which holds title to the land, and the tenants own the stock and the building. The tenant owners rent the other fifteen apartments in the building, and the income thus derived reduces their rent and accumulates a fund to meet the ten year mortgage.

STUDENTS AGREE WITH PROF.; ASK NO MORE EXAMS

Encouraged by the declaration of Prof. Frank A, Bernstorff that "university examinations are ridiculous survivals of the dark ages," Northwestern university students yesterday started a movement for the abolition of all "exams." President Walter Dill Scott intimated, however, that the movement might as well not start.

"There is no doubt members of the faculty dislike examinations as much as the students," he said, "but it is imperative that records be kept. While we have no intention of doing away with examinations, it might be possible to abolish them in some courses, such as public speaking and modern languages. It would be impossible, however, to run a university without records."

Prof. Roy Flickinger, dean of the college of liberal arts, said he did not believe the student body would petition for the abolition of examinations, but Prof. R. O. Curme expressed the belief examinations might find a substitute in daily reports in the language courses.

MEREDITH ASKS BUSINESS MEN TO AID FARMERS

E. T. Meredith, secretary of agriculture, told a group of Chicago business men at the City club yesetrday that the farmers' problem demanded the attention and support of the entire American public.

"The farmers' credits need immediate attention," he said, "yet some business men are objecting. The farmer is protesting against the sand that has been put in the gear box of the loan machine. He is now facing a situation which may have serious consequences, immediate and remote, to our agriculture and to the nation."

The secretary pointed out how the lack of success on the part of the framer directly and indirectly effected the business men in Chicago and elsewhere, and whether the business men in cities realized it or not they should be vitally concerned in the present unstable condition of agriculture.

5.6% DECREASE IN LIVING COSTS; MORE COMING

New York, Jan. 15.—The cost of living decreased 5.6 per cent in the four months from last July to November, and the decline was brought about by drops in the average prices of a number of important food and clothing articles so great as to offset concurrent increases in many other items, the national industrial conference board reported today.

This four months' decrease, however, left the cost of living higher than in July, 1914, immediately before the war, by the following percentages: Clothing 128, fuel and light 100, food 93; sundries 92, and shelter 66.

In its eighth report on living costs the board let a ray of hope shine on its assertions by stating that merchandise dealers seemed to expect a further drop in prices early in 1921.

"The average price of food dropped nearly 12 per cent between last July and November," the report said, "but the average price of eggs rose 51 per cent.

"The drop in clothing prices from last July to November was over 14 per cent, but average prices of many items fell more than this.

"Hosiery, men's shirts, women's blouses, muslin underwear, and men's coats fell 20 to 25 per cent. Shoes, men's and women's suits, and women's coats, knit underwear, and hats decreased less than 20 per cent.

"Rent increases continued to appear, but for the first time in many months decreases were reported.

"The average cost of all sundries rose slightly between July and November. Practically no decreases in car fares were reported. Occasionally newspapers advanced their prices. Church and organization budgets were increased. Decreases were reported in the cost of furniture, house furnishings, and supplies."

"FROZEN" TRADE IS THAWING OUT, NORTHWEST SAYS

Business Revives as Wheat Moves.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Business in the northwest has taken a turn for the better. The bank credit situation is easing, farmers are again selling grain, railroad business is picking up, and there are evidences at every hand of revived activity in the industrial and commercial field of the Twin Cities and the northwest.

Delayed for four months, the "frozen" bank loans of the northwest are beginning to be liquidated. There is a noticeable easing of money, though rates may not soften for some little time.

Manufacturing firms report fewer cancellations and more orders on the basis of new 1921 prices.

In short, many business leaders are confidently of the opinion that the opening of a new period of sound business prosperity is virtually at hand.

Wheat has rallied to more than $1.70 cents a bushel, a full 30 cents above the low mark in the fall. The present price is attractive to farmers, apparently, and there is a new movement to sell.

Kewanee Shows Spurt.

Kewanee, Ill., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—The Kawanee Boiler company announced today its plant, closed for inventory the last three weeks, will reopen with full operation in all departments Monday morning.

Longer Working Day.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—The Wood Newspaper Machinery corporation announced today that beginning Monday the plant would be operated on a schedule of forty-eight hours a week instead of forty-four.

Alma Plant to Reopen.

Alma, Mich., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—The Republic Truck company inc., which closed temporarily today, will resume operations in some departments within two weeks; and all departments within thirty days.

Editorial writing and policy—Tiffany Blake, chief editorial writer CHICAGO TRIBUNE, supervisor; Prof. James Weber Linn, chief editorial writer Herald-Examiner, and Baker Brownell, editorial writer Chicago Daily News.

Law of the press—Prof. A. W. Bays.

News writing and reporting—Walter A. Washburne, city editor Chicago Evening Post, supervisor; George P. Stone, assistant city editor of the Post.

Organization and administration—W. A. Curley, managing editor Chicago Evening American; Eye Witness, CHICAGO TRIBUNE; Walter D. Strong, Chicago Daily News. Under this head lectures on all phases of newspaper making will be given. This will be a course of unusual latitude and will afford the school opportunity to invite the coöperation of many leaders in journalism, not only of the Chicago field out of the middle west.

Broad General Courses, Too.

Concurrently with these courses on daily journalism by daily journalists, the following subjects will be taught by teachers recruited from the College of Commerce and the College of Liberal Arts of Northwestern university:

Advertising—James H. Picken.

Economics—Prof. F. S. Deibler.

English—Prof. Walter K. Smart.

Government—Prof. P. O. Ray.

American history—Prof. W. V. Pooley.

European relations—Prof. A. G. Terry.

Psychology—Profs. D. T. Howard and Louis Webb.

Sociology—Prof. A. J. Todd.

Enrollment for the first semester's work in the Joseph Medill School of Journalism will begin tomorrow at the building housing the Chicago departments of the university, southeast corner of Lake and Dearborn streets. The first semester will close May 28 and will comprise fifteen weeks' instruction and a final week of examinations. Classes will be in session on the first five evenings of each week between the hours of 5:15 and 9, and on Saturday afternoons from 2:15 to 4:15 o'clock.

Diplomas for Students.

The schedule of tuition fees, which is notably moderate, fixes a charge of $20 for the special student desiring to take one lecture a week for the period of the semester; $32.50 for two lectures a week, and $40 for three lectures. Full details as to fees have been issued in leaflet form.

Studies covering three evenings a week for four years in the downtown or "Chicago departments" headquarters of the university will lead to a diploma (not a degree) in journalism. The student can obtain the diploma in three years by taking four evenings a week, but that procedure is not advised either by President Scott of the university or Dean Heilman of the university's College of Commerce, who for the present will exercise a general direction of the machinery of the new School of Journalism.

In due time announcement will be made of the name of the dean who will be permanently intrusted with the work of the school. In the matter of that appointment the officials are frank to say that they are feeling their way.

Degree Course Also Offered.

Also in the future, but with plans of organization well in hand, is the opening of the full-time courses of the Joseph Medill School of Journalism at the university's parent foundation in Evanston. Those are the courses that will lead to the collegiate degree of B. S. It is expected that the opening of the next autumn's semester at Northwestern will see the Evanston department of the School of Journalism ready to receive students.

Prospective students in the School of Journalism who already hold university degrees in the liberal arts will note with satisfaction that presentation of such credentials will reduce to two years the time required for obtaining the diploma in the part-time school and the degree in the full-time school.

Glimpse at Studies.

As to intentions and methods in cultural and technical instruction, nothing can more succinctly and strikingly give the trend of the new school's policy than the following outline of the four years' work which will be inaugurated on Feb. 7 in the part-time or downtown department:

First year—First semester, economics, English, reporting and news editing; second semester, economics or psychology, English, reporting and writing news.

Second year—First semester, contemporary Europe, advanced English, news editing, including copy reading, headline writing, rewriting, proofreading, etc.; second semester, American history, news editing, newspaper law, libel, copyright, etc.

Third year—First semester, national and state government, sociology, special feature writing; second semester, city and local government, principles of advertising, newspaper organization, departmental organization, administration, etc.

Fourth year—First semester, editorial writing, advertising copy, trade journalism; second semester, business and government, editorial writing and policy, advertising layout, color, typography, etc.

PRAISED FOR NABBING GANG

Left to right: Detective Sergeants Walter K. Pelletier, Edward Smale, and Edward J. Mitchell, who were commended by their captain for efficient work in running down and capturing band that attempted loan bank holdup.

JACOB MATKOWICH.
[TRIBUNE Photos.]

Police Work Fast

Four robbers entered the loan bank of Matkovich Brothers, 2319 South Wentworth avenue, yesterday, and ordered Jacob Matkovich to throw up his hands. He ducked behind the counter, grabbed a gun and sprayed lead through the boarding. The robbers fired twice and fled in an automobile. A police alarm brought Lieut. Dubach and Detective Sergeants Smale, Mitchell, and Pelletier, who within forty minutes after the robbers appeared at Matkovich's place had the gang under arrest.

A bystander took the number of the automobile and the detectives traced it to the saloon of John Genero, 2713 Wentworth avenue. In the saloon they arrested Larry Walsh and Benjamin Williams.

The telephone rang. Smale answered it. One of the gang was on the wire. Smale learned he was at a saloon at Taylor and Wood streets. There the detectives nabbed Edward Novak and Joseph Kritsch as they were changing their clothes.

Capt. Gallery congratulated the detectives and said he would ask Chief Fitzmorris to reward them.

WAGNER HERE TO CONFER ON OPERA WITH 'OUR MARY'

May Be Business Chief for Miss Garden.

The man whom Mary Garden probably will name as her right hand in business affairs during her régime in Chicago opera is Charles L. Wagner, now a New Yorker but for fifteen years a Chicago concert manager.

It is understood that Mr. Wagner reached Chicago last night and that a conference today will determine whether he is to have the position of executive director under General Director Garden. Miss Garden said the question may be settled today, but there will be no announcement until tomorrow.

Mr. Wagner was born at Charleston, Ill., Sept. 20, 1868, and after graduating from the public schools entered the insurance business there.

He was 28 years old when, in 1896, he opened a concert bureau in Chicago.

Managed John McCormack.

His rise to prominence in the musical world came ten years later when John McCormack came over from Covent garden, London, to Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera house in New York City and appeared with Melba and Tetrazzini in the Italian operas of the old school. Mr. Wagner recognized the talent of the Irish tenor, engaged him and has managed his concert affairs ever since.

The success of the combination has led Mr. Wagner's friends to refer to him as "the man who discovered and made John McCormack"; but it is admitted generally that the singer was not the only one who benefited from the arrangement, for the two are said to have "split" about $200,000 a year between them in good seasons.

Handled Galli-Curci Concerts.

Later he became manager for that other Chicago favorite whose name enters so frequently into Mary Garden discussions—Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci. He had charge of her concerts until less than a year ago, when there was a disagreement which is understood to have been patched up completely. He also has had under his management Mme. Frances Alda, Rudolph Ganz, and other celebrities.

Mr. Wagner is a bachelor. He lives with his sister in a beautiful country home near Belleville, Conn., where he indulges in his hobbies of golf and thoroughbred dogs. Since 1911 his offices have been at 511 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Will End Friday Performances.

Miss Garden stated yesterday that she intends to put an end to Friday night performances. She said that night will be reserved for rehearsals and not made the occasion for presenting special programs. Her objection to this arrangement was that the regular box holders are put on the same footing as the casual public on Friday nights.

Instead of "Salome" next Thursday night, "Carmen," with Miss Garden and Muratore, will be given. The change was ascribed to the impossibility of preparing for "Salome" before Thursday.

MILLERS URGED TO SHIP FLOUR IN AMERICAN SHIPS

Resolutions urging every miller in the United States to pledge himself to use American ships wherever possible for the transportation of flour abroad were adopted yesterday by the emergency defense committee of the Millers' National federation.

The resolutions point out that the shipping board has reaffirmed its differential of 5 cents per 100 pounds in ocean freight rates on flour and wheat, that it has expressed a desire to develop port and mechanical freight handling facilities, and that the millers owe the board their united support in the development of an American merchant marine and in the rehabilitation and extension of the export flour trade.

A. L. Goetzmann is chairman of the committee.

DENTAL SOCIETY PLANS CRUSADE TO SAVE TEETH

At its annual clinic, beginning Jan. 27, the Chicago Dental society will inaugurate a nation-wide movement for the promotion of mouth hygiene.

The object of the movement is the improvement of mouth conditions among children by means of school instruction including practical demonstrations of the proper use of the tooth brush and other methods of cleaning the teeth, with emphasis upon the relation of mouth health to general health.

It is expected there will be several thousand dentists present and clinicians from other cities, where mouth hygiene is taught, will be on hand to make clear the different phases of the work.

Tells of Advantages of Plan.

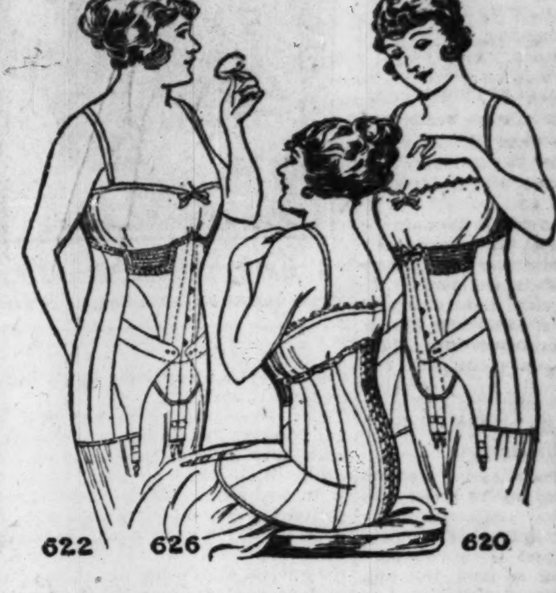
"Statistics have proved conclusively," said Dr. D. U. Cameron, representing the society, "that proper care of the teeth has raised not only the physical efficiency of the child, but the mental capacity as well.

"It is safe to affirm that a campaign of systematic mouth hygiene in our public schools would reduce to a large degree the number of 'repeaters'—those pupils who fail in their classes and must take their grades over again. This would result in an immense saving to the city and the state."

The clinic will be held at the Auditorium and Congress hotels. On Thursday, Jan. 27, there will be an evening meeting in Orchestra hall before which Dr. Ernest E. Irons of Chicago will read a paper.

Public May Hear Addresses.

At the Friday afternoon meeting Dr. Wallace Sercombe of Toronto will read a paper on "The Relation of Diet to Oral Hygiene," and at a session in the Auditorium theater there will be two addresses, one by Dr. Albert C. Fones of Bridgeport, Conn., on "Mouth Hygiene in Our Public Schools," and one by Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, on "Child Health in Relation to Adult Health."



Stout Women Everywhere Are Talking About the New

$5.00 Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets

These women refuse to wear any others, because the invaluable hygienic features of Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets have benefited their health, reduced their size and lightened their weight to a marked degree.

Added to these merits is the assurance that they will wear twice as long as other corsets and retain their shape as long as they last. At $5.00 they set a new standard of value for high grade corsets.

Only the united effort of the manufacturer and retailer has made possible this Economy Sale of Nemo Nos. 620, 622 and 626 in all sizes at

DOOMED TO DIE, ART LURE MAKES SAVANT A THIEF

Counts Heartbeats, Steals for Love of Beauty.

For Dr. Rudolph Albert Gries the moving finger writes a living death. He confronts it, fortified by the knowledge that he sacrificed himself for science and humanity.

His strange story was revealed yesterday when he was arrested in a State street department store for shoplifting. Under his ulster was found a piece of handworked linen which he had removed from the counter, he said, because the beauty of the design constituted for him an irresistible appeal.

Beauty and morphine dominate him. In his eight room apartment at 673 Sheridan road Detective Sergeants William Crot and Michael Johnson of the bureau found a collection of stolen replicas of classical sculpture, the originals of which are beyond price.

All Loot from Stores.

One by one he had taken them from various State street department stores, choosing each with the loving discrimination of a connoisseur. Among the statues were "The Satyr," "The Wrestlers," "The Winged Victory of Samothrace," "The Dancing Faun," "Psyche," and "A Woman," by Seyes. Other articles of virtue include Japanese handiwork—a bronze dancing elephant, a group of fishermen, a candle holder of the French empire period, teakwood statuette bases, rare laces and Persian table throws.

Dr. Gries, for years one of the most prominent north side physicians, holds diplomas from the University of Illinois College of Physicians and Surgeons, Bennett Medical college, and the Universities of Freburg, Halle, and Greifswald in Germany.

Counts Heartbeats to End.

After his arrest he talked freely. His attitude is one of philosophical detachment. He remarked once in a casual way that sometimes in the long watches of the night he counts his heartbeats, "and I like to speculate on how many more there will be before the end comes." It was while experimenting in the chemical department of the University of Chicago that he says he contracted the disease which he now finds to have reached an incurable stage.

"I had always been interested in the experiments of Dr. Erlich and other scientific investigators," he said. "I felt that if I could benefit the world with supplemental discoveries I would have performed a noble work."

Pin Wound Spells Doom.

A pin puncture on the finger, he believes, caused the infection. He suspected nothing for some years, then certain symptoms alarmed him. Infection developed in his teeth. To obtain surcease from the pain he took morphine.

"The rest you may easily surmise," he said. "I knew my case was hopeless. Under the influence of morphine I could enjoy respite from my thoughts. Death always menaced me like a Damoclean sword.

"I used to study astronomy, fancying it was the most fascinating of the sciences. But now I find that God is as beautiful in the wings of a butterfly or the petals of a rose as in the rings of Sirius or the moons of Saturn."

"Beauty, Drugs and Doom"

Detective Sergeants Frank Tremoni and William Crot viewing some of the replicas of art masterpieces stolen from loop stores by Dr. Rudolph Albert Gries, who ascribes his acts to love of beauty and morphine. He told the detectives that an infection he received from a pin while conducting scientific researches has doomd him to death and that while he counts his remaining heart beats he steals to gratify his worship of the beautiful.

IS YOUR HUSBAND CRANKY? SPARE THE ROLLING PIN!

Prof. Gault to Talk on This Problem.

Perhaps you have been in error, madam—perhaps, after all, you should not have resorted to the rolling pin so often as perchance you have.

Prof. Robert H. Gault, head of the department of psychology at Northwestern university, is prepared to teach every wife that there are times when she should refrain from chastising the party of the second part, her husband, even though the latter may seem to be courting trouble.

How should a wife treat her husband when he is cranky? Prof. Gault, in a course of lectures he is scheduled to deliver in Harris hall beginning Feb. 5, will undertake to supply plausible and workable answers to this and even more knotty questions.

Prof. Gault gave a few hints last night as to what his lectures may reveal.

"If nervous exhaustion superinduced by business worries or other troubles has made a husband irritable, the wife, instead of undertaking to 'cure' him by more direct action, should call in a nerve specialist," he said. "In other words, she should be sympathetic.

"Or, perhaps, indigestion has contributed to the deplorable condition. In which case, the remedy is simple: Mrs. Housewife should spend a little more time in her kitchen; she should 'brush up' on her cooking.

"But, on the other hand, there is the case of the husband who is irritable not for any reason other than pure 'cussedness.' Dishwater, in pansful, is an excellent remedy for this boor."

Australian Railways Strike Wins 8 Hour Day

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The strike that has paralyzed the whole railway system of West Australia for some time has been settled, says a dispatch to the London Times today. The men were granted an eight hour day.

DELAY ON ROADS REAL BLESSING, McDONALD SAYS

Conditions which have retarded the building of good roads during the world war and the subsequent period of reconstruction have really been a blessing in disguise, in the opinion of Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads.

Mr. McDonald, who will discuss "Our National Road Problems" at the opening session of the Good Roads congress and National Good Roads exposition at the Coliseum Feb. 9 to 12, believes the future stability of the road building program is assured by the fact that, while actual construction work has been held up for various reasons, the engineering phases have now been thoroughly worked out, much more so than would have been possible had the various states rushed pellmell into a heavy construction program.

HOUSEWIVES' UNION TURNS ON "HIRED GIRL"

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 15.—It's the time clock now for Maggie, and she'll have to punch it on the dot or "hit the pavement" for another job. So say those who compose the Housekeepers' Club of Pittsburgh. The housekeepers, at a meeting in the Hotel Chatham, stuck together in deciding that their hired help must be on the job at 8 o'clock sharp in the morning and stick until 5 o'clock p. m.

And take $3 a day stipend, instead of $3.50, as of old.

And pay their own carfare to and from work.

And clean up the laundry after the washing is done.

These are just few of the new rules that the housekeepers have laid down for their servants by the day. A resolution providing for the changes was passed unanimously.

THERE'S AN ERROR IN HARTMAN'S PAGE AD

In setting the page advertisement for the Hartman Furniture & Carpet Co. that appears in another section of this paper, the composing room made a mistake. The copy shows a Chifforette at $16.43, and shows a lamp which is called a $138 value for $98.75. The descriptions were transposed—the copy should show the

Lamp Complete at $16.43
$138 Chifforette at $98.75

Errors of this kind are bound to occur in a busy composing room and we make this announcement so that the customers of the Hartman Furniture & Carpet Co. will not seek the $138 Chifforette for $16.43 and be disappointed.

PEOPLE GAGGED BY MAYOR'S PLAN, MERRIAM HOLDS

Points to Vast Powers of Board of Trustees.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Prof. Charles E. Merriam believes that a muffler is being put on "the people" in the "Mayor Thompson plan of people's ownership and operation of street cars at a 5 cent fare."

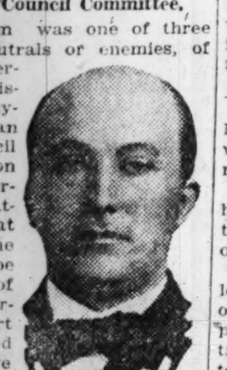
JOHN TOMAN.

"The people" can look on and pay the bills as their principal privileges, if they approve of a district under the bill as now worded. In the professor's opinion, the trustees will have the power. They can issue $80,000,000 in bonds without a referendum and "the people" can be denied any information regarding what they will get for that sum.

The trustees can lease the elevated roads for ninety-nine years under any terms and conditions they see fit without even listening to "the people." They can lease the surface lines or subways for ninety-nine years and deny "the people" even the courtesy of listening to the proceeding.

They can levy and collect any tax to meet deficits regardless of any objection from "the people." After doing these, and perhaps other things, the trustees do not have to make any report to anyone this side of the moon.

Talks Before Council Committee.



TOMAZ F. DEUTHER

Prof. Merriam was one of three friends, not neutrals or enemies, of municipal ownership who discussed the mayor's tration plan before the council transportation committee yesterday. After repeatedly saying that he would like the bill in such shape that friends of municipal ownership can support it, he expressed views of the above tenor.

The two other M. O. advocates were A. W. Stanmeyer of the Cook County Real Estate Board and Tomez Deuther of the Northwest Side Commercial association. Miss Edith Rockwood of the Woman's City club and George M. Tobey of the Association of Commerce also spoke.

Stanmeyer, while awaiting action by his organiaztion, said that he favored the mayor's plan. Deuther offered a number of suggestions.

After listening to Deuther for some time Ald. Toman arose and almost shouted:

"I object to listening to that dirty little rat any longer unless you read what he had to say about the aldermen."

Toman handed over a clipping which he said was from Deuther's publication, in which aldermen were accused of being bribe takers.

Prof. Merriam made a statement at length. He pointed out that the mayor's plan did not contemplate a comprehensive transportation with rapid transit. He said that it was impossible to acquire the surface and elevated roads with the bonding power of $80,000,000.

Adds a New Government.

"That does not give a real sound financial basis for a comprehensive system," he went on. "This plan contemplates a new government, fitted down upon the twenty-three or twenty-four now existing in Chicago. It has been the policy here to get rid of some of these governments instead of adding more. This plan will add to the confusion and complexity of local government.

"Instead of a new governmental agency, municipal traction lines should be governed from the city hall.

"I suggest that the city council ask the legislature for a constitutional amendment which will permit the city to increase its bonding power. If there were a limit of 10 per cent on full valuation that would give $300,000,000, which would probably be sufficient to swing a complete transportation system."

Merriam criticized a board of six trustees, suggesting five instead and a term of four years instead of six.

Voters Have Right to Know.

He switched to the power to issue bonds without a referendum and continued: "You would permit the trustees to issue bonds and give the people a dinky or comprehensive subway. The principle is settled in Chicago that the voters shall have the right to know for what they are to be taxed."

Special Counsel Cleveland explained that the people are given a referendum when the district is adopted.

THE POISON MYSTERY

Mrs. Selma Nordstrom Pierson of Princeton, Ill., held in connection with her husband's death by poison.

ANALYSIS of a package of "rough on rats" by Chicago physicians is expected to add the final link to the chain of circumstantial evidence involving the young widow of Harry W. Pierson, wealthy Princeton, Ill., farmer, and her farmhand sweetheart, Arthur Shipp, in the murder of Pierson.

Pierson died in convulsions on Oct 21 after eating the breakfast his wife had prepared for him. Her conduct with Shipp after the funeral led to an investigation and when the body of the farmer was exhumed traces of arsenic and strychnine were found. It is now believed an analysis of the "rough on rats" will show arsenic and strychnine were the basic poisons.

The investigation showed that Mrs. Pierson and Shipp carried on a clandestine love affair both before and after the death of Pierson, testimony being introduced showing that she sat in Shipp's lap kissing and hugging him. Since the death of Pierson the couple have kept up a correspondence, their letters to each other being deposited in a henhouse on the Pierson farm.

ALDERMEN CALL DEFICIT BONDS 'POOR FINANCE'

Payment of the 1920 and 1921 city deficit by a bond issue of $12,500,000, as proposed by the city administration, would be "poor municipal finance," in the opinion of members of the council finance committee who were interviewed yesterday.

However, the proposal that the voters be given a chance to decide the question at the February aldermanic election probably will be indorsed by the committee next week, sentiment among the members indicated.

Richert Gives Views.

"It is extremely doubtful whether the voters will stand for payment of current expenses by means of a bond issue," said Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the committee. "The question is simply whether to pay the two year deficit by increasing taxes enough to raise $12,000,000 or by issuing $12,000,000 worth of bonds, which by the time they are retired will have cost the taxpayers $18,700,000.

"To my way of thinking, the administration's proposal is based on poor business policy. But the voters should be permitted to decide. I am informed the real estate boards and the Association of Commerce are in favor of the bond issue."

Ald. Capitain declared the voters will not indorse the plan.

"Though I will not vote to submit such a bond issue, I would like to see the question go to a vote," he said. "The taxpayer and the rent payer both realize bonds mean higher taxes and will doom such an issue to defeat. However, we will find out whether the voters approve of the city administration's financial policies."

Seeks People's Mandate.

Ald. Cermak said that in submitting the bond question the voters should be asked to pass directly on the question: Should the city reduce its expenditures by curbing its activities or increase its activities even though it has to go in debt to pay the bill?

"We will have a clear cut mandate from the people if this question goes to the voters," he said.

Half a dozen other finance committee members declared the administration policy was "unsound as a policy," but added that "there can be no harm in letting it go to the voters."

Ald. Louis B. Anderson, the administration spokesman on the council floor, alone was noncommittal.

"If it's an administration measure I'll be for it," he said.

Ald. Richert said the bond issue proposal will be considered at a special meeting of the finance committee next week.

ONWENTSIA BIDS BIRDS TO FEAST OF MOSQUITOES

In the years that have passed since the members first hied them to the Onwentsia Golf club at Lake Forest there has been only one fly, or rather insect, in the ointment of their content—the pesky mosquito.

The club grounds being contiguous to the home of Mr. Anopheles and his large family in the Skokie marshes, there never has been a dearth of swatting exercise for the golfers.

The club members oiled pools. They covered ponds and low spots with kerosene. They built smudges. But it was of no use.

Recently a conference was held and one of the directors had an idea.

Yesterday a bulky crate was tipped from a train at the station. In it were 100 plain and fancy bird houses, baths, beaneries, obesrvation posts, and other shelters dear to the heart of the more or less feathered songsters.

There are houses of all styles and periods, colonial mansions for the martens, Queen Anne residences for the wrens, sexangular ones for the flickers, and others for the bluebirds and swallows. There are concrete baths, sheltered and open feeding platforms, and troughs. So declares E. G. Lee, manager of the club.

The Onwentsia members hope the birds will like the homes so well that they will gratefully annihilate the mosquitoes.

BATTLE AVIATOR TAKES POISON TO ESCAPE ARREST

Seized for Bogus Check, Courage Breaks.

Capt. Anthony Aub, scion of a wealthy New York family, during his war service with the 505th aero squadron was wont to climb casually into his plane, fly over the lines and meet the Germans more than half way. Enemy machine gun bullets were things of no particular consequence, and all in the day's work.

But his courage broke last night when detectives trailed him to an apartment at 4220 Sheridan road, arrested him and told him to put on his hat and coat. He shook his head rather sadly.

"No," he said, his voice husky. "There is no use trying to take me out of here. I can't face it—I'm too big a coward."

And before Detectives John Carton and John Quinn of the bureau could interfere, the former air service captain had swallowed five bi-chloride of mercury tablets.

Snared for Bad Checks.

Aub, wanted on a charge of having passed a worthless check for $300 on an Oakland, Cal., bank a few weeks ago, was rushed to the American hospital and thence to the county hospital, where he was placed under police guard. He will recover. Detectives said he admitted cashing the check.

"I needed the money," was all he would say in explanation.

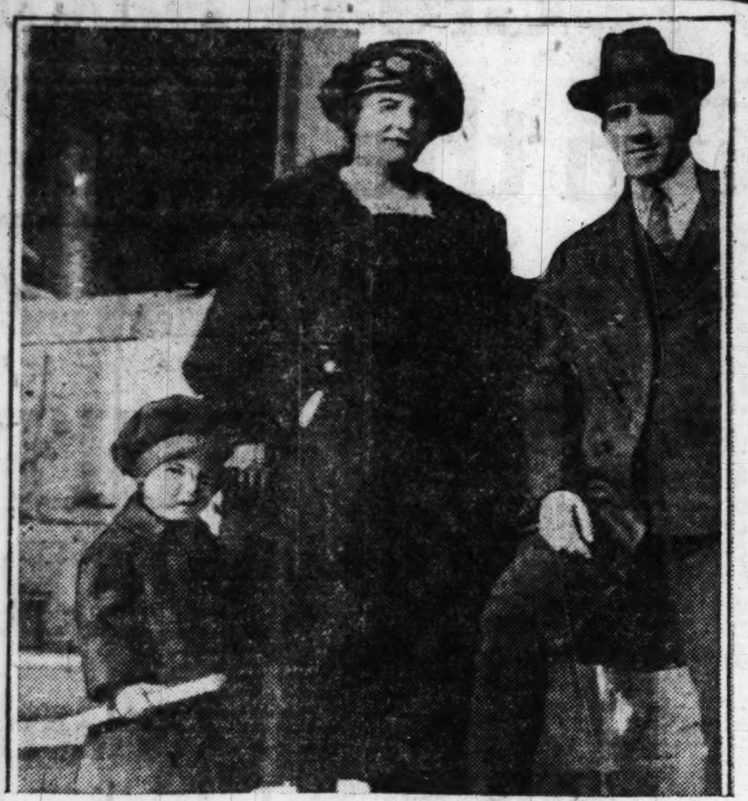
Among his effects were found a telegram from Gen. R. L. Bullard, U. S. A., letters from Thomas B. Wanamaker post, American Legion, New York, of which he said he had been commander, and a letter from Armour & Co. rejecting an offer of the captain to do "stunt" flying as an advertising novelty. There also was a picture of his wife and little son and a copy of an "agreement" under which he and his wife separated last June.

Lieut. Locklear's Successor.

Capt. Aub said he had been flying for the Lasky motion picture corporation in California, performing aerial feats like those of Lieut. Locklear, who was killed while engaged in this work last spring.

The captain came to Chicago on Jan. 2, and registered at the Congress, where he remained until a week ago. Checking out, he gave the Hotel McAlpin, New York, as his forwarding address. Detectives from the Burns agency, however traced him to the Sheridan avenue address. His mother lives in New York.

A CLEW TO TRAGEDY



This photograph was found on the person of Capt. Anthony Aub, scion of a wealthy New York family and a war aviator, last night after he had swallowed poison to escape arrest on a charge of passing a bogus check for $300. The picture shows Aub, the wife he separated from by written agreement, and their little son, Anthony Jr. Aub, it is said, will recover from the effects of the poison.

BAND WAGONS TO ENLIVEN "CARRY LUNCH" CRUSADE

A doughboy's complaint that many restaurateurs have not heard the call of reduced meat, butter, and vegetable prices caused the council committee on living costs to declare a new war on high priced meals yesterday which, if necessary to awaken public sentiment, is to be featured by band wagons in the loop displaying "Carry Your Lunch" slogans.

"I have been delegated by a number of fellow members of the A. E. F. to appeal to you to curb the profiteering of so-called popular priced restaurants," John Russell, the complaining doughboy, wrote to Ald. Max Adamowski, chairman of the committee.

"'Get the money' seems to be the slogan of most of these foreigners. Newspaper reports say that living costs have declined, but when you mention it to these restaurant keepers, who have done nothing for their country, they laugh.

"Many of us are out of work, and the prospect of getting any this winter is uncertain, and when our small savings are gone I don't know what we are going to do."

Ald. Adamowski asserted that only a comparative few of the restaurants reduced their prices at the request of the committee three months ago and added that certain restaurant owners double crossed the aldermen by raising their prices again a few weeks later.

"Next Monday a carry your lunch campaign will be inaugurated against profiteering restaurants and will be continued until prices and portions are normal," the alderman said. "I appeal to the public to support the movement by bringing their lunches to work for ewo weeks."

SHRINERS MEET TO PLAN MILLION DOLLAR HOSPITAL

F. FREELAND KENDRICK.

Chicago today is the mecca towards which the highest officials of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine are making their pilgrimage. By night most of the high officials of the imperial council and members of the hotel and hospital committee will be assembled here.

The Shriners will be in session two days. Two big questions will be up for consideration. One is the proposed new hospital for crippled children and the other is the meeting place for the 1921 imperial council session.

More than $1,000,000 already has been raised for the hospital. The question which the hospital committee, of which Samuel P. Cochran of Dallas, Tex., is chairman, will decide is whether the money should be used for one large hospital or for several hospitals in various sections of the country. It is believed most of the members favor the several hospital plan.

The next meeting place will be decided by Imperial Potentate Ellis L. Garrettson of Tacoma, Wash., Imperial Treasurer William S. Brown of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Imperial Recorder Benjamin W. Rowell of Boston, Mass., constituting the hotel committee.

Several cities, including Portland, Ore., Savannah, Ga., Houston, Tex., and Indianapolis, are bidding for the honor, which always brings more than 100,000 visitors to the city. It is known that Chicago can get the meeting if an invitation is extended. If it goes elsewhere Savannah or Houston probably will get it, it was said last night.

SHOE BUSINESS GETS $3,000,000 ORDER IMPETUS

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 15.—Orders approximating $3,000,000 were placed during the four days this week of the Milwaukee convention of the National Shoe Retailers' association, according to James P. Orr, its president. It has about 6,000 paying members and nearly as many more associate members.

"Retailers," Mr. Orr said, "will anticipate their requirements and shoe factories will open up. Steady employment for workers will result. Retailers will now average their losses, as tanners and manufacturers have done, and business will proceed on an even keel."

COMMITTEE OF SENATE TOO KIND TO TARIFF BILL

Passes It Loaded Down with Amendments.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—After adding a number of amendments the senate finance committee today approved the emergency agricultural tariff bill and will report it to the senate on Monday. The measure is so loaded down that the chances of its final enactment into law are even more remote than before.

Besides dairy products and hides and an increased duty on wheat which were added yesterday, the committee today put into the bill duties on sugar, frozen meats, tobacco, apples, and cherries.

Making Sure of Defeat.

In adopting the various amendments the Democrats, who are anxious to insure the defeat of the bill, joined with the Republicans who happened to favor the particular proposition because of some local interest.

The bill will be reported "in the form it is to be defeated," said Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah. He added that "about everything anybody asked for was put in." Several other supporters of the measure also expressed dissatisfaction with the result of the committee work.

Seek Sugar Price Stabilizer.

The amendment relating to sugar, which was added at the instance of Louisiana senators, provides a basic duty of two and thirteen-one-hundredths cents per pound. A proviso is included to the effect that if the duties result in an increase in the cost of raw Cuban sugar at American points above a total of 8 cents a pound or in the price of refined sugar above 10 cents per pound, then the emergency duties shall automatically be decreased to the amount necessary to keep the prices down to the maximum named.

The sugar amendment includes also a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem on molasses of a certain grade, and specific duties ranging from 6¾ cents per gallon to 13½ cents per gallon on other grades.

The amended bill also contains a duty of 2 cents per pound on fresh or frozen beef, veal, mutton, lamb and pork and a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem on meats of all kinds, prepared or preserved, not specially provided for.

Tobacco Provisions.

The amendment relating to tobacco contains the following duties: Wrapper tobacco and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per cent of wrapper tobacco, and all leaf tobacco, $2.85 per pound; if stemmed, $3.50 per pound; filler tobacco, not specially provided for in this section, if unstemmed, 35 cents per pound; if stemmed, 50 cents per pound.

A duty on apples is fixed at 20 cents per box. It is provided if at any time a tariff on apples imported in Canada from the United States shall be greater than 30 cents per box, then the American duty shall be increased so as to be equal to the Canadian duty. The duty on cherries is fixed at 4 cents per pound.

Other amendments provide:

Reduction of the staple length of cotton from 1⅜ inches to 1⅛.

Exemption of cattle and sheep for breeding purposes from duty.

Adding of dairy products to the list with a duty of 8 cents a pound on butter and cheese.

PREPARING FOR THE BIG JOB

Rose Herrick and Jerry Bresnihan correct the addition of some big figures at the city's commercial continuation school.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

TRUANT officers have cut one Chicago public school from their visiting list. It's the Commercial Continuation High school at 218 South Wabash avenue, where every one of the 1,400 students figures the minutes spent in the classes in actual dollars and cents.

Jack Van Emden, 13, a part time pupil, cashed his classroom "checks" yesterday when he walked into the office of J. L. Goss, where he is employed, and submitted a detailed sales comparison sheet. His salary was raised at once and he went back to school to exhibit the substantial results of specialized education.

Little Jerry Bresnihan and Catharine Hickey are working hard to finish their elementary classes and step into the good office jobs waiting for them. Theresa Neudecker and Estelle Aronson have never missed a class since they heard of the school and their employers consented to pay them for the part time they spend in school.

Mrs. Margaret Babcock, the principal, pointed out that instead of the 1,400 students now served more than 15,000 young people working in the loop should be enrolled. She urged the board of education to increase the teaching force—now twelve teachers—and to put the continuation school in a centrally located building.

"CHURCH, STATE, SHOULD TEND TO ITS OWN AFFAIRS"

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—Sunday blue laws are described as encroachment of civil power into the spiritual realm in a memorial adopted by the general conference committee of Seventh Day Adventists. Opposition to all Sunday laws is declared, particularly to proposed federal enactments.

Asserting that the complete separation of church and state was essential to the country's well being, the memorial declared that failure to recognize this distinction in the past had been the primary cause of religious persecutions. The present "strong organized effort" to secure blue law enactments, it added, "is destructive both to the church and the state."

"Sabbath keeping is not a civil but a religious duty," the memorial declared. "Congress, therefore, has nothing whatever to do with the question."

MAN DIES OF POISON.

Joseph Hadle, 32 years old, 427 South Morgan street, died yesterday morning, supposedly of the effects of strychnine poisoning.

RAILROADS CAN'T PAY U. S., SO THEY ASK MORE FUNDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—[United Press.]—The railroad problem, which congress thought quieted with passage of the Esch-Cummins act about a year ago, is bobbing up in so many governmental quarters that it probably will be one of the most important questions facing President Elect Harding.

At present the roads are trying to force payment of all government funds due them on the ground that railroad finances are in a precarious condition and that this is making unemployment and the present business slump more acute. Hundreds of millions which the roads owe the government under guarantee provisions of the Esch-Cummins act cannot be paid for fifteen years, it is claimed.

Recent statements of railroad executives indicate the lines may appeal to President Elect Harding for more government loans to bridge over the readjustment period, some members of congress believe.

LLEN TRAVELS FAR FROM FACT, FRAZIER REPLY

Dakota Governor Defends Townley League.

smark, N. D., Jan. 15.—Gov. Lynn Frazier in a statement tonight, rged Henry J. Allen of Kansas "has parted widely from the truth in at- acks in the Nonpartisan league."

attention has just been called," Frazier said, "to an attack made . C. Townley [President] and the partisan league by Gov. Allen." Allen leaves the field of opinion pretends, at least, to state facts, he declares that Mr. Townley his tribe fought every war drive, osed the sale of liberty bonds, re- contributions to the Red Cross, ouraged the selective service law voluntary enlistments, and so on.

Fears Misunderstanding.

"When he departs so widely from truth, many people will jump to the clusion that Mr. Allen, for some son, fears the truth about the gue, and perhaps the effect the ption of the league's policies would e on the railway, milling and bank- interests of Kansas and the polit- l condition of the state."

The Nonpartisans were in control the North Dakota government dur- the entire period of the war, the atemen said, adding:

"North Dakota oversubscribed every berty loan—the third by 100 per cent nd the second by the highest percent f any state. The Red Cross allot- ent was oversubscribed 288 per cent, tanding seventh in all the states. The Y. M. C. A. allotment was doubled.

North Dakota at Bat.

"Far from opposing the selective raft, the per capita cost of inducting en was lower than in any other state t ond, and in one county not a man as drafted, the entire quota being led by volunteers.

"In Attorney General Palmer's 'red' ids, not an arrest was made in North akota. This state was one of the w to protect absent soldiers by a mor- orium and was the first state to pass soldiers bonus law and its figure of for each month is the highest nus in the nation."

Commenting on "Kansas," failure reward service men, Gov. Frazier d, "Is loyalty a matter of action merely of words?"

on's Wife Asks $75,000 of Film Theater Magnate

Leopold Oesterreicher, owner of a ain of motion picture houses on the st side, his wife, one son and two ughters were named as defendants a $75,000 damage suit filed in the rcuit court yesterday by Mrs. Helen Oesterreicher, a daughter-in-law. e charges the affections of her hus- nd, John, have been alienated by s relatives.

SHIVER WALTZ

Originator of "Shimmy" Springs New Dance When Writ Perils Her Entire Wardrobe.

BEE PALMER.

Miss Bee Palmer, the Chicago stage beauty who originated the "shimmy," added a new dance to her vaudeville repertoire last night. She called it the "shiver waltz." Folks in front of the footlights at a downtown theater probably wondered where she got the idea. But her friends behind the scenes didn't wonder—they knew.

They were in their dressing rooms when Attorney T. S. Blumenthal and a deputy sheriff served Miss Palmer with a writ of attachment for her trunks, her scenery and her clothes. The reason, so the writ averred, was some $6,000 owing a certain Max Hart.

"This is horrible, unthinkable, too bad for words," Miss Palmer said. "Hart was until recently my booking agent. Naturally I have some of his property—a dress or two, a little scenery. But he told me to use it. Owe him $6,000? Why he must be crazy."

Optimism---Hoover

A smile, a pleasant word, a hopeful view and a prayer of thanks for all our blessings.

In these days of readjustment, let us resume as nearly normal conditions as possible, avoiding waste and avoiding pessimism. At the same time—be rational and unselfish.

With a sincere feeling of interest and a just solicitude for the other fellow's problem, we shall get through the period of reconstruction and readjustment with credit to ourselves. In doing this, let us not hurry, worry, get angry or aggravate others, individually or collectively. Just stay put, without excitement; placing our trust in benefits which shall surely come if we evidence a helpful spirit.

Heed this admonition, and the American nation, now standing so high in the eyes of the world, will furnish another splendid example—that of serene ability to face and make the very best of any situation, though seemingly fraught with great difficulty.

Help HOOVER to help the helpless, and as we generously continue to help the world, we shall help ourselves.

BRIAND BEGINS FORMATION OF FRENCH CABINET

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Choosing between Reds, white Socialists, reactionaries, conciliatories, and militarists, President Millerand has gone to the left. Following abandonment of a plan for formation of a cabinet by former President Poincare, M. Millerand confided selection of a cabinet to Aristide Briand.

M. Poincare, through powerful support from the senate right, wrecked the ministry of Raoul Peret as it was officially constituted. Friends of Poincare warned Peret this morning they could not support him. Prefering his present post as president of the chamber of deputies to an ephemeral premiership, Peret quit.

Poincare Bars Briand.

Piqued by Millerand's selection of Peret as premier instead of himself, Poincare first declined the finance portfolio and then the foreign ministry when Briand offered exchange, finally refusing any post in a cabinet containing Briand. In the selection of Peret instead of Poincare to form a cabinet. Millerand was influenced largely by reports that the former president intended to occupy the Ruhr, make Foch war minister, and include Barthou in the cabinet.

Tentative Selections Made.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Former Premier Aristide Briand will form a new ministry to succeed the Leygues ministry, which resigned Wednesday. He has secured the collaboration of Laurent Bonnevay, one of the chief leaders of the National bloc, who led the attack on M. Leygues. M. Briand has had interviews with numerous leaders, who apparently insure him the support necessary to constitute a cabinet. A forecast of the new ministry gives M. Bonnevay the post of minister of justice; Louis Barthou, war; Paul Doumer, navy; Louis Loucheur or Charles Dumont, finance.

The ministries of pensions and hygiene will probably be eliminated and the number of under secretaries of state reduced.

Russian Forts Will Fire on Any of Allies' Vessels

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 15.—All vessels flying allied flags which approach within twelve miles of the Russian Black sea coast will be fired upon by land batteries and be subject to attack by submarines, it is indicated in a message received here from Moscow.

TALK OF DAVIS RESIGNING POST BRINGS DENIALS

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15.—[Special.—Officials at the state department here today denied stories that John W. Davis, American ambassador to Great Britain, was threatening to resign before March 4, owing to pique because Secretary of State Colby had gone over the ambassador's head in presenting this government's note on the Mesopotamia oil question to the British foreign office, and, further, because Ambassador Davis was not received by President Wilson when he was on a visit to this country last fall.

Wants to Quit March 4.

Ambassador Davis does desire, it was stated, to get out of the service, but for purely personal reasons, and not because of any disagreement with the policies of the state department or its method of handling the Mesopotamia oil notes. Mr. Davis will remain at his present post, according to present plans, it was said, until after March 4, although he wishes to be relieved as soon as possible after that date.

When he was in the United States some months ago he made it known to some of his friends that he wished to be relieved, but it is understood this was due to the fact he was spending three or four times his salary, and that he felt he could not afford to retain the post much longer.

Personal Note to Curzon.

As to the Mesopotamia oil question, it was said that Ambassador Davis, when he was here, conferred with state department officials over the matter, and that he was in agreement with the government's view point. It was pointed out by state department officials today that the oil note in question was addressed directly to Lord Curzon for special reasons, as had been done with a number of notes to foreign powers during the war period, and that Ambassador Davis had not expressed any disgruntlement over the state department's action.

Ambassador Davis did not see President Wilson on the occasion of his visit to Washington last fall, but it was stated by officials here today that the ambassador had not asked to see the president, and it was thought there was no desire on his part, owing to the president's health, to have a conference with him.

PRINTERS HONOR BEN FRANKLIN AT ANNUAL BANQUET

The thirty-sixth annual banquet and ball of the Old Time Printers' association was given last night at the Hotel La Salle. There were 1,100 persons present to celebrate the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, accepted by the printers as their patron saint.

Mrs. Cameron White, daughter of A. C. Cameron, the orator of the first banquet, held in 1887, was present as guest of Clara Jane Shepard, chairman of the hostess committee.

Charles L. Estey was chairman of the evening and toastmaster. The Rev. Herbert W. Prince, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, gave the invocation and Michael Colbert the address of welcome. "Ben Franklin" was the subject of an address by S. J. Duncan-Clark.

Portuguese Deficit of $132,500,000 by Budget

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Portuguese minister of finance has presented to parliament the budget for 1921-'22, in which it is estimated the deficit will be approximately 265,000,000 escudos (nominally $132,500,000), says a Lisbon dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph today under Friday's date.

Gentlemen:-

Last June I wrote you about your Higher Accountancy Course, and you sent me some literature. I did not see my way clear to take the course then, but I have now decided to take it.

One of my friends, who is only about half through the course, told me yesterday he is now getting $80 a month more than when he started studying, so I have made up my mind not to put it off any longer.

I have lost the enrollment blank you sent me; so please send me another blank and let me know if the price is still the same and how much is the down payment and the monthly terms. Please answer at once, as I want to get started as soon as possible.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen:-

I was discharged from the army last July and was recommended to take your course in Higher Accountancy. The most money I had ever made before I took up this course was $25.00 per week, but I felt sure from what my friends told me about it that I could do much better by putting in a little time on study, so I enrolled.

I know you will be glad to learn that I am now independent, as I do auditing work - opening and closing books - which nets me an average of $70.00 per week. I expect to double this income during the next year.

You may be sure I shall be only too glad to have you use my name.

Yours very truly,

Facts About LaSalle Training

Business is a real game for real men, and LaSalle training equips a man to play the game for high stakes. You progress the only way a man can progress in business—by solving actual problems, lifted bodily from business life. You are counseled and directed by some of the ablest business minds in America.

LaSalle training is not merely for younger men just starting in business life. LaSalle has hundreds of members who are past 40—Sales Managers, Auditors, Traffic Men, Credit Men, and others holding equally responsible positions. Whatever your business need, there's a LaSalle course that fits it.

You can begin to "cash in" on LaSalle training almost immediately. For instance, Joseph Louden, of the Booneville Banking Company, Booneville, Miss., under date of December 31, 1920, writes as follows:

"I sent you my application for placement several days ago, but will request that you please discontinue any effort on your part to place me.

"My bank refunded me the price of your course in Banking and Finance, raised me $25 per month, gave me $25 per month back pay for all of 1920, and a bonus of 10%. In view of this I could not leave them under any conditions.

"I attribute this to a large extent to your good institution. I am indeed grateful to you for all you have done for me and thank you very much for your willingness to help me secure a better position."

FUGITIVE OFFERS LIBERTY TO BARE BRIDEWELL ILLS

Aldermen Weigh Proffer of Hunted Man.

John Shure, a fugitive from justice, who escaped from the bridewell a week ago, is willing to serve the rest of his sentence if given an opportunity to expose "deplorable conditions," which he says exist at the institution.

As a result of Shure's offer, made to THE TRIBUNE and turned over to Ald. Walter P. Steffen, chairman of the council committe on police, the aldermen probably will witness an unusual scene—an escaped prisoner telling his story before the police committee while policemen wait in an antechamber to take him back to prison.

Shure, who was a trusty or "runner" at gate No. 2 of the bridewell, escaped with John Harmon, John McCormick, and Robert King, after overpowering a guard, taking his keys, and unlocking the gate. King, McCormick, and Harmon were captured after a revolver battle among the rock piles along the canal bank.

Three Beaten, Charge.

THE TRIBUNE withholds the names of bridewell officials and guards against whom Shure makes charges until the police committee has an opportunity to establish their truth or falsity. Among the charges made by Shure are:

That the north cellhouse is "filthy enough to drive any man to try for his liberty."

That certain guards are brutal, use clubs and black jacks freely and without cause, and after administering beatings leave prisoners in the clay hole for long periods.

That after their capture Harmon, McCormick, and King were beaten, and that the night captain of the prison had their cells whitewashed to cover up bloodstains.

That socks given the prisoners to wear have neither toes nor heels.

That "pets" of the prison officials are given plenty to eat and others are given little food and that of an inferior nature.

That one prisoner is permitted "leave" to go automobile riding.

Shure asks for an investigating committee which will hear the stories of himself, McCormick, Harmon, and King.

Warns of "Prison Pets."

"The committee should ask each prisoner just what treatment he gets," his letter says. "The superintendent should not be permitted to pull the wool over the investigators' eyes by having all his pets before the committee.

"I will gladly give myself up if I am assured that the investigating committee is on the square. I will willingly go back in the clay hole for nine days to air the conditions of the house of hell, not the house of correction."

Aldermen Accept Offer.

When Shure's letter was shown to Ald. Steffen, he said:

"I know of nothing to substantiate Shure's charges, but the committee stands ready to sift them fairly and squarely. We will hear both sides and decide whether Shure's charges are true on their merits alone."

So there, Mr. Shure, is your chance to make good on your offer.

106 in Four Bureau Cells!

One hundred and six men were jammed into the four cells—thirty-two in a cell whcih measures 14x14 feet—of the detective bureau on Friday night. Chief of Police Fitzmorris yesterday appealed to the council finance committee to make provision for immediate improvement of conditions.

Vincent Powers, a graduate of the University of Illinois, was one of the men crowded into the place. He was arrested in a raid on the Lake Shore hotel at 720 North Clark street. When released he complained to Chief of Detectives Hughes that most of the prisoners were obliged to stand all night and that one man, a victim of tuberculosis, endangered the health of the others.

300,000 GIVEN VACCINE; HEALTH CHIEF JUBILANT

Approximately 300,000 Chicagoans have been vaccinated in the last six weeks, according to Health Commissioner Robertson, who declared yesterday that the spirit of coöperation among the city's business firms is the greatest in the city's history.

"Chicago is in the middle of a nest of smallpox—East Chicago, Blue Island, Oak Park, and Rockford have many cases," Dr. Robertson said. "Vaccination is saving us. Let the good work go on."

Hundreds of letters from business houses, theaters, hotels, the packing firms and factories are being received daily by Dr. Heman J. Spalding, head of the bureau of medical inspection, announcing that all employés had been vaccinated.

"Paddy" Driscoll Leads in K. of C. Ticket Sale

"Paddy" Driscoll, the man who put Northwestern university back on the college football map, now is appearing as a speaker before various councils of the Knights of Columbus. Young Driscoll is introduced as "John Leo Driscoll," member of Newman council of Evanston. He is leading in the ticket sale for a dance to be held Tuesday night at Arcadia hall, Broadway and Wilson avenues, when a fund for the building of a K. C. club house in Evanston will be established.

SOCIETY LEADER OF AURORA CANDIDATE FOR CITY OFFICE

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 15.—Mrs. J. H. Bliss, an Aurora society leader, who has held most of the offices in the gift of her fold, is the first woman in the history of this town to seek elective office. She is a candidate for city commissioner, a place paying $3,000 a year. Four city commissioners and a mayor, who will constitute a board to rule the city, will be elected March 8.

MRS. J. H. BLISS.

Under the commission form act the commissioners and the mayor must give a full day's work each day to the city. The minimum time they may put in is six hours. They are required to enforce laws and enact new ordinances deemed necessary.

Mrs. Bliss is not at all daunted by these formidable stipulations. In fact she welcomes them. She believes that in the multiple duties lies her opportunity for service. The salary is no lure, as she is the wife of a wealthy man.

Mrs. A. J. Hopkins, wife of the former United States senator, is directing Mrs. Bliss' campaign.

OBITUARY.

MRS. HENRY DE CLERQUE, formerly Matilda Diefel, wife of a well-known Chicago newspaper representative, died yesterday. She is survived by her husband and three sons, Harry H., Alvin W., and Elmer C. Following her marriage in 1881, she made Chicago her residence. The funeral will be held from the residence, 4516 North Ashland avenue, at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday, with interment at Rosehill.

ISAAC H. CLOTHIER, last surviving founder of the firm of Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia philanthropist and prominent member of the Society of Friends, died yesterday at Wynnewood, Pa., near here. He was 80 years old.

Knox College Alumni Here Raise $10,000 in 5 Minutes

Fifteen alumni of Knox college met at the Union League club yesterday afternoon, and in five minutes subscribed $10,000 of the $75,000 the college is raising from alumni in Chicago and vicinity.

The New DUO-ART Parlors

Assembled in especially furnished salons are shown the DUO-ART Reproducing Pianos. Beautiful settings enable you to visualize the DUO-ART in your own home.

This superb instrument brings to your own fireside the playing of the world's greatest pianists. Rolls of perforated paper to which have been transferred the mechanics of the human hand contain the true reproduction of the art of the great masters.

The DUO-ART is shown in both Upright and Grand models. It is made exclusively in the Weber, the Steck, the Stroud, and the Steinway.

Recent Price Reductions Give Added Significance to Our Display

Our action in lowering the prices on all pianos of our own make has won popular approval. The pianos offered for sale are at far lower prices than have been seen in a long time for pianos of equal quality. To gain an adequate idea of the remarkable character of our offering a visit should be made. We urge that this be done while our stocks are complete.

Our Terms: On any type of piano you can make a moderate first payment and arrange the remainder to suit your reasonable convenience

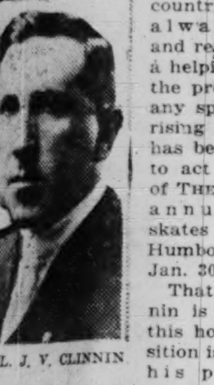
COL. J. V. CLINNIN WILL REFEREE TRIBUNE RACES

Booster of Sports for Young Athletes.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.



COL. J. V. CLINNIN.

Col. John V. Clinnin, one of the anchist advocates of amateur athletics in the country, who is always willing and ready to lend a helping hand in the promotion of any sport for the rising generation, has been selected to act as referee of THE TRIBUNE'S annual silver skates derbies at Humboldt park on Jan. 30.

That Col. Clinnin is fitted for this honorary position is shown by his past record. Last year he was president of the Central A. A. U. and at the present time is a delegate of the central association to the national convention. He has held various offices with the First Regiment A. A. and has been a judge in western conference track and field meets for years. Col. Clinnin acted as referee of THE TRIBUNE races last year and handled the situation in splendid fashion.

Praises Silver Skates Races.

"THE TRIBUNE is to be congratulated for staging the silver skates races which are the talk of our younger boys and girls," Col. Clinnin said. "If more corporations would do such things for the rising generation I am sure we would have less crime and fewer young criminals. I can remember, when I was younger, we would look forward to any event where we had a possible chance to win a trophy. With the entry list which should be received, I am sure the event will be the classic of the skating season."

Other men closely identified with ice racing and who have the interest of the "kids" at heart will be chosen to help make the derbies memorable events in the lives of those who compete. Playground directors are to be congratulated upon the interest taken and it only goes to show that Chicago in the near future will boast of champions in all divisions.

Entry of Miss Rose Johnson, international skating champion, has been received for the girls' silver skates derby. Miss Johnson has severed her connections with the Illinois A. C. and will race under the colors of the Northwest Skating club. Over fifty entries have been received for this race and it is expected the number will approach the century mark when nominations close Jan. 24.

Skating at All Parks.

With skating permitted at all parks, there is no excuse for skaters not preparing for the derbies. The senior silver skates derby is open to all skaters living in any part of the country. The girls' silver skates derby is open to all girl skaters, while the junior silver skates derby is open to all boys under 16 years of age. If a boy is 16 years of age he must race in the senior event.

No entry fee is required.

NONE OF "BIG 3" HAS OCT. 22 DATE FOR CALIFORNIA

Berkley, Cal., Jan. 15.—Neither Yale, Princeton, nor Harvard will be able to meet the University of California in a football game Oct. 22, according to a telegram received from their athletic authorities in response to applications for a game in the east telegraphed from the local institution this morning.

CATTON VICTOR OVER M'ANDLESS

Finishing with a total of 3,600 points for the week, Marcus Catton defeated Dave McAndless in their six day exhibition balkline tournament at Mussey's. McAndless had 3,176 for the six days' play. McAndless won both of yesterday's games, finishing 350 to 300 in the afternoon and 315 to 300 in the evening, but could not make up the lead Catton had gained on him in the early matches. Catton had high runs of 121, 130, 134, with a grand average of 25. McAndless had runs of 111, 92, 87, with a grand average of 20.

Kenosha Bout Coin Held by Boxing Commission

The Wisconsin boxing commission refuses to pay the money promised Sailor Freedman and Charley White for their work in the ring at Kenosha Friday night. This was the information brought to Chicago by Promoter Bill Frazier.

Manning Vaughan, secretary of the Wisconsin boxing commission stated over the long distance phone last night that the referee and the commission representative stopped the bout by disqualifying White and that there was no ruling that made it "no contest."

"It was believed that White was not doing his best, and for that reason the fight was stopped," said Vaughan. "Freedman apparently was doing his best, and if it was 'no contest' both fighters would have been ordered out of the ring. In this case White was the man that caused the halt."

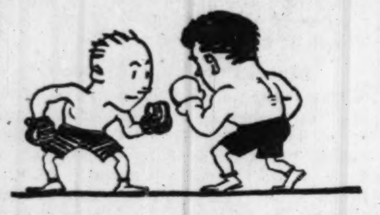
In the Wake of the News

JIMMY WILDE, Britain's flyweight champion, was stopped in the seventeenth round by Pete Herman of these United States in a London bout advertised as for the bantamweight championship of the world. What is now Jimmy Wilde's status?

Wilde clearly is not bantam champion, for he was beaten by Herman and even Herman was not our bantam champion for he recently lost to Joe Lynch. Is Wilde still flyweight champ?



According to reports, Wilde gave Herman, who was one and one-half pounds over the stipulated 118 pounds, a handicap of 15½ pounds which would make his weight 104, eight pounds below the now accepted flyweight limit. In our opinion, Wilde is still champion in his class, and able to defeat any man of his poundage in the world.

When Wilde lost a newspaper decision to Jack Sharkey in Milwaukee, The Wake expressed the opinion, also shared by Expert Ray Pearson for whose pugilistic judgment we have great respect, that Wilde could not give away eight and ten pounds to our tough rugged Yankee boxers and escape a knockout. And Pete Herman, who stopped him, is not considered one of our hardest hitting bantams.

Natural elation over the victory of an American is tempered, in Wilde's case, by our admiration for the little chap's sportsmanship and aggressiveness. He stood toe to toe with the heavier Sharkey at Milwaukee and gave the fans a run for their money. He allowed Herman to weigh 119½ pounds and the weight told against him over the long route.

Jimmy Wilde, even in defeat, merits our greatest respect as a clever boxer who is as game as they make 'em.

MARKET LETTER.

FOLLOWING their spirited advance with the advent of the new year, stocks showed an "easier" tendency at the weekend (technically easier, not easier for those holding them). The January rise usually is followed by a slight reaction, and then a more substantial reaction in February. Then if business regains its footing the scene is laid for a possible bull market, or at least a market with plenty of bull.

Bankers are fairly optimistic (continuance of 3% for deposits and 7% for loans) and that's the frame of mind we favor for them until all of us have reduced our debits. The chap who is paying 7% on loans to buy merchandise at much higher figures isn't so optimistic, but usually he's the bird who charged all the traffic would bear during the war, so what's the dif.?

In the specialties there was pointed buying of Atlas Tack. Holders of Case Plow wear furrowed brows. Am. Smelt still attracts a few fish. Gaston Williams is now Gas-on, having doubled in price within a month. Durham Hosiery is full of buyers on the lower extremes.

We counsel holding what stocks you have, unless they have experienced an unusually rapid advance, and bailing out a few more on the next big dip.

One of Life's Little Dramas.

Dear Wake of the World's Greatest Newspaper,
I'm even sore at your market caper.
I've tried trailing the wise birds, flocks of 'em,
The chart sharks have given me a trim;
Their statistics, plots, and curves
Have taken all but Wifey's nerves.
Harvey, we cannot dope 'em,
I'm offa them all for life,
In fact, the only way to beat 'em
Is to follow the "Hindsight of My Wife."

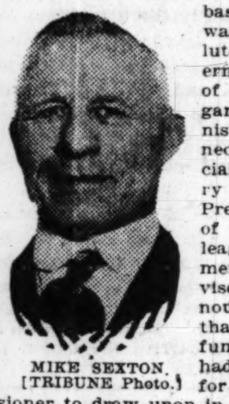
$10,000 FUND AT LANDIS' HAND TO KEEP GAME CLEAN

Emergency Purse Ready for Investigations.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Judge Landis, who last week took his place as commissioner of organized baseball, not only was voted absolute power to govern the operation of the national game but was furnished with the necessary financial means to carry on his work. President Heydler of the National league, who is a member of the advisory council, announced yesterday that a contingent fund of $10,000 had been provided for the commissioner to draw upon in order to carry on any investigation he may deem advisable.



MIKE SEXTON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"That simply means," explained Mr. Heydler, that the men in organized ball have provided funds to be placed at the disposal of the commissioner in the conduct of his work. If anything comes up regarding the conduct of some player, or any one else connected with the game; or something happens that needs looking into, the funds are right at hand. It is hardly likely that more than $10,000 would be needed at any one time.

Free Hand Guaranteed.

"There might be an occasion when a considerable sum was needed immediately, and it always will be there for him to use. If he wanted to hire a whole detective force on an hour's notice, he could do it. It's for him to use as he sees fit."

The judge sat in with President Heydler of the National, President Johnson of the American league, and President Sexton and Secretary Farrell of the minor leagues' association yesterday for many hours—formulating rules of operation between the major leagues and between the majors and minors. It is likely the task of forming a working agreement will not be completed until tomorrow.

Differences to Be Adjusted.

Inside of a month, the first official meeting of the advisory council, which consists of Judge Landis, and the two major league presidents, is likely to take place when the first baseball cases will be decided under the new plan. At the same time, there may be some differences between the majors and minors for the Judge to decide.

In the working agreement now being formed, it was written that the minor leagues shall have until Feb. 15 to declare themselves either in favor of or against the draft, the privilege of coming in or staying out, having been granted in the new agreement. It also was decided that in case drafted players are turned back, the minor leagues who accept the draft will have the chance to claim them, while those who have chosen to operate without the draft, will have no such opportunity.

Beneficial to Coöperators.

That means that in the future, if a major league club should draft a player from a small minor league, then decide not to keep him, the big minors who favor the draft will have a chance to claim him. If the American association and the International league refuse to accept the draft and the Pacific Coast, the other class AA organization, does accept it, the Pacific Coast would have a chance to grab any drafted player turned back by the majors, but the other two would not.

Judge Landis expressed no concern yesterday over the complaint filed at Washington against his holding his place on the bench and his baseball job also.

"Some people are afraid I will not attend to my duties on the bench," he said. "I guess they are more afraid that I will."

Sox to Start March 4.

Manager Gleason departed for his home in Philadelphia yesterday, and doesn't expect to return until shortly before the start of the training trip.

It is the plan to have the White Sox start for the Texas camp March 4, which will give him a week more of training than he had last spring.

Manager Evers of the Cubs will remain here for some time to confer with President Veeck on plans for next season.

LANDIS' POST CALLED TRIBUTE TO BENCH BY EX-HEAD OF STATE BAR

HIGH COMMENDATION for Judge K. M. Landis for assuming the complicated and taxing duties of baseball's high commissioner was expressed yesterday by Harry W. Standidge, for three consecutive terms president of the Lawyers' Association of Illinois. In a letter to The Tribune Mr. Standidge broke a lance for the jurist against those who criticised him for giving part of his time to the national game. Following is the letter:

Editor Chicago Tribune: Judge Landis is to be commended for remaining on the bench. In the capacity of a judge he earns many times his salary, for in his conduct he cannot be "handled," and he wonderfully exemplifies honesty, integrity, a square deal, and the highest principles of humanity. It can truly be said of any tribunal over which he presides that it is a court of justice.

It is a wonderful tribute to Judge Landis and to the legal profession that he has been appointed as head of the baseball commission for the purpose of placing the stamp of honesty and honor upon our national game.

HARRY W. STANDIDGE.

INSURANCE MEN TAKE NOTICE OF OUR RAY SCHALK

There's an old saying that baseball players seldom make good in business adventures, but it isn't always true, as is proven by Ray Schalk, star backstop of the White Sox, who in the off season, is a regular insurance man.

Ray has just landed Nelson Morris for an accident and health policy that has caused all the star insurance agents in town to sit up and take notice. It was so big an application that it was backed by several companies, the total figures going over the half million mark.

Ray goes after the big fellows the same as the little ones, and his commission on this big policy should amount to a neat sum. Mr. Schalk goes out and earns money. He never looks for it under his pillow.

NORWEGIAN ICE TEAM VICTOR IN SLEIPNER RACES

TABLE OF POINTS

Norwegian American A. A.	26	Lightning A. C.	4
Alverno A. A.	23	Mozart playground	3
Swift playground	11	Lemoyne playground	1
Northwest S. C.	10	Carter playground	1
Panther A. C.	9	Unattached	1

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Featured by the two mile relay race between Norwegian American A. A. and Alverno A. A. skaters representing the former organization yesterday carried off honors in the annual skating derby of the Sleipner A. C. at Humboldt park by securing 26 points. Alverno A. A. was second with 23 and Swift playground third with 14. The Alverno team was victor in the relay, but still was short enough points to capture the meet.

ROY McWHIRTER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Skaters who will compete in THE TRIBUNE Silver Skates derbies at Humboldt park on Jan. 30 were given the first opportunity to match skill with others, and from the manner in which the races were fought, some great racing will result in THE TRIBUNE classics.

McWhirter Wins for Alverno.

The relay race, which brought to the mark the two teams mentioned, was bitterly fought. On the first three relays the Alverno and Norwegian fliers alternated in the lead. Bill Steinmetz took up the skating for the Norwegians on the last relay, with Roy McWhirter, winner of last year's senior silver skates derby, a yard behind.

Steinmetz immediately slowed the pace and they raced stride for stride for two laps. As the fliers rounded the turn into the stretch on the last lap, McWhirter cut loose with a burst of speed and easily passed Steinmetz, who was unable to put forth his best efforts because of a strain in his side.

Summary of Races.

BROADWAY HEARS FALSE RUMORS ON DEATH OF MATTY

New York, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Rumors along Broadway that Christy Mathewson—"Big Six," as he is known to thousands of baseball fans—was dead at Saranac Lake, are unfounded, it was learned today.

The famous one time mainstay of the Giants is by no means in a serious condition, but getting along as well as could be expected.

Mathewson is at the Santanoni apartments, Saranac Lake, with his wife and son. His physician, Dr. E. N. Packard, reports he is doing well.

Sinai Swimmers Capture Meet in Milwaukee Tank

BIKE RACERS GET WORD TONIGHT ON SIX DAY CONTEST

With Mayor Thompson firing the starting gun, twelve teams, composed of the best riders in the country, will be sent away on the first lap of the six day bicycle race at the Coliseum at 10 o'clock tonight.

The riders had ample opportunities to test the track in last night's sprint races, and all agree it is one of the fastest ever constructed. The contestants were given instructions yesterday by the referees and judges, so that no hitches will arise during the contest.

RAY EATON.

Arrange Series of Sprints.

Officials in charge of the event have arranged for a series of sprints three times in each twenty-four hours over the track, which is ten laps to the mile. At 9 o'clock in the evening of each day there will be ten sprints of two miles each. At 2 o'clock in the morning a series of five sprints will be held, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon a similar number will be held. Team entries:

Ray Eaton and Fred Hill; Eddie Madden and Jake Magin; Arthur Spencer and Charles Piercey; Alex McBeath and Cecil Walker; Peter Drobach and Willie Hanley; Joe Kopsky and Tom Bello; Fred Weber and Willie Keller; Charley Osteritter and Ernest Kockler; Alfonse Verraes and Lawrence Gaffney; Walter Stein and Joe O'Shea; Martin Ryan and Frank Drobach; Harry Horan and Thomas Fitzsimmons.

Kockler Wins "Pro" Race.

In last night's sprints events, Ernest Kockler, local rider, won his first professional race by being teamed with Jake Magin of Newark in the unlimiteed Australian pursuit race. In the second heat of the half mile handicap for amateurs, Carl Stockholm of the Alverno A. A. had a bad spill on the second circuit. He was badly shaken up. Summaries:

Half mile, handicap, amateurs—Won by M. Damlos, Alverno A. A., 40 yds.; J. L. Pelsando, Alverno A. A., 65 yds., second; A. Benson, Alverno A. A., 35 yds., third. Time, 1:03.

Half mile, handicap, professional—Won by Martin Ryan, Newark, 70 yds.; Willie Keller, Newark, 45 yds., second; Walter Stein, Brooklyn, 50 yds., third. Time, :57 3-5.

Three mile, open, amateur—Won by A. Benson, Alverno A. A.; Carl Stockholm, Alverno A. A., second; Herman Hoffman, Franklin, third. Time, 7:22.

Ten mile, open, professional—Won by Walker, Australia; McBeath, Australia, second; Peter Drobach, Boston, third. Time, 23:51.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

By piling up a lead in the first ten minutes that was too big to be overcome, the University of Chicago basketball team, Big Ten champions last year, started the new season with a 39 to 27 victory over Wisconsin at Bartlett gymnasium last night. The Maroons sank six baskets before the Badgers warmed up, and their early margin allowed Stagg's team to breeze through without anxiety, although the Badgers played them even up after the spirited start.

Both teams were considerably weaker on defense than on offense, as the big score on both sides attests. Both, in flurries, showed flashes of fine scoring ability, with the veteran Maroon basket makers, Vollmer, Halladay and Birkhoff, a rifle more effective than the smooth working Wisconsin passing game.

Badgers' Passing Good.

The Badgers played the typical Meanwell game, controlling the ball far better than the Maroons, using a fast, short pass combination that repeatedly worked the ball through the ineffective Maroon five man defense under the Chicago basket.

The Maroon defense, as well as that of the Badgers, was weak in spots, and many of the baskets were made easy because the offensive stars were not closely covered. Chicago was guilty of numerous long passes that missed their mark, and these were easily intercepted.

Halladay Scores at Start.

"Death" Halladay put the Maroons ahead with three baskets at the start and Chicago rolled into an 18 to 5 advantage. Wisconsin braced and the half time score was 22 to 17, but Vollmer's famous double jointed shots under the basket kept Chicago ahead in the second half.

Capt. Taylor, Knapp and Williams shared the Wisconsin scoring with four baskets apiece, and Williams did some excellent dribbling and passing. Taylor had a bad night on free throws, sinking only three out of ten, while Birkhoff scored nine times on fifteen Wisconsin penalties. Ceasar and Tebell of the visitors were forced out on personal fouls. About 3,000 saw the game. Lineup:

Purdue, 34; Purple, 19

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Purdue defeated Northwestern in the season's first Big Ten game here, 34 to 19. The Boilermakers showed a marked improvement over their last few games and for the greater part of the contest outclassed the Purple.

Purdue held the advantage from the start and at the end of the first half led, 17 to 11. White, Coffing and Holwerda did most of the Boilermakers' scoring, while McKenzie and Capt. Saunders starred for Northwestern. Lineup:

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—The Minnesota basketball team won its first conference game by defeating Iowa, 24 to 19, when a rally swept the Hawkeyes off their feet near the close of the game. Capts. Oss of Minnesota and Shimek of Iowa were the stars, Oss throwing six field goals in the second half.

The Iowa team committed only one foul during the game, and Arntson missed his one chance for a free throw. Lineup:

Ohio, 22; Michigan, 10

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Ohio State defeated Michigan tonight, 22 to 10, outclassing the Wolverines at all stages. The Buckeyes assumed an early lead which they held throughout. Close guarding featured the first half which ended, 6 to 3, in favor of Ohio.

Employing a five man defense to good advantage the Buckeyes held Michigan to one lone field basket made by Karpus at the start of the second half. Blair was the star on the Ohio offense, dropping four field goals through the mesh, while Hoge Workman, who subbed for Greenspun, put up a strong game and accounted for two field baskets. Lineup:

RUSSET SHOES $2.25
No additional cost for rubber heels if preferred.

Field Shoes $3.50
Hob Nails $4.00

Everything Uncle Sam bought for the boys was inspected just like the boys. They had to meet the requirements. Renovated shoes mean shoes which were reclaimed and sterilized by the Government and in wearing value they are equal to new. We have put new half-soles and heels on them of Genuine Oak Leather and all shoes have been repolished. This is certainly the time to save while business is quiet.

If you had your shoes half-soled and heeled, either with rubber or leather, your shoemaker would charge you $2.50. Why not pay $2.25 for the half-soles and heels, and get a genuine pair of Russet Army uppers free that are guaranteed for two years.

Also
WOOL BLANKETS $3.35 COMFORTS $1.90
Army Socks, Sweaters and Underwear at right prices.

LANE TECH TANKERS OUTSCORED IN MEET AT PENNSYLVANIA U.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—Although Lane High school of Chicago scored only two points in the eighteenth annual interscholastic swimming championships held in the University of Pennsylvania pool today, the Chicago swimmers figured rather prominently in some of the events. Lawrenceville won the championship by a point from Girard college of this city, 21 points to 20.

The principal interest centered in the fifty yard dash, which resulted in one of the greatest races ever held in the Penn pool. The best scholastic swimmers in the country were entered in this race, and Bill Wright of Erie High school of Erie, Pa., was the winner in :25 1-5, which is a new American record for the event. To win Wright had to beat by the narrowest of margins Miller of Lane High, Chase of Berkeley-Irving High of New York, and Walsh of Lawrenceville.

Finish Practically Abreast.

There was nothing to choose between the four either at the start of the race or at any stage of the battle. They swam the two lengths of the short Penn tank virtually abreast. At the finish it was only a hairbreadth decision by Dr. O'Brien, the referee, which gave Wright the day's honors. Three watches caught Wright in :25 1-5. The other contenders tied for second.

In the 200 yard relay, won by Lawrenceville, Lane High finished fifth, the Chicago team being composed of Breyer, Miller, Drier, and Bradley. They swam the distance in 1:52, while Lawrenceville negotiated the distance in 1:47 2-5.

Miller Fifth in 220.

Miller finished fifth in the 220 yard swim, which went to James Hall of Brooklyn, who made a new scholastic record of 2:35 4-5. Miller's time was 2:42 3-5.

Breyer of Lane High won his heat in the 100 yard dash, but failed to place in the final, which went to Charley Crownover of Girard college.

N. Y. SUCCESS IN DECISION BOUTS SPURS RING FANS

Enthusiast Wants Same Feature for Illinois.

BY RAY PEARSON.

The success of boxing in the state of New York under the Walker law, which permits fifteen round bouts to decisions, has spurred a number of Chicago men, who are in favor of legalizing boxing in Illinois, to take a somewhat daring stand on the decision question. It is intimated, and there are many advocates of the plan, that bouts to decisions are far preferable to contests of the no-decision type.

SENATOR WALKER. [New York News Photo.]

The system used in New York is mighty hard to criticize. In fact, few things that turn out as successfully as the sport has done in New York in the few months it has existed under the Walker law can be criticized. Success is the knockout for criticism.

The fact that championships can change hands is in itself important, but it is just as important that decisions be rendered in other bouts. There is no discounting the fact that decisions as they are given in Madison Square garden and other big New York boxing clubs have made a hit.

Used in Toledo Fight.

The institution of the British system, which leaves the verdicts not to the referee but to the referee and two judges, was an experiment in American rings when the sport got under way after being legalized last year. True, it has been tried several times before, in various American arenas, but until the present time in New York it never was legalized.

Now that a bill is soon to go to the Illinois legislature, some of the enthusiastic fellows think that boxing would be far more successful if the measure called for ten round bouts to a decision by a referee and two judges. They point to the success of this system in the Empire state as one good reason why it should be adopted in Illinois.

It seems that everybody is satisfied with ten rounds, at least the writer has yet to find one man who wants boxing, who doesn't think that ten rounds is sufficient for a boxer to demonstrate his superiority.

We will make no effort here to combat the above mentioned view, but for the sake of argument will call attention to the fact that boxing in the state of Wisconsin has proved highly successful. When one gives consideration to the difference in size of New York and Milwaukee, which is Wisconsin's big fight town, it can be said that Badger state boxing has been just as successful as that conducted in the Empire state.

Proposed Measures Agree.

Judged by what is being done at the present time in drafting a bill for Illinois, we are certain that the Illinois measure, if it becomes a law, will more resemble that existing in Wisconsin than that which makes the operation of boxing possible in New York. In fact every measure that we have seen to date, and we have seen several, including the one drafted by the Chicago city council, calls for ten round no decision bouts. Most everybody seems inclined to go along with this plan at the present time.

RAISE IN PRICES NEEDED TO STAGE JACK-JESS BOUT

New York, Jan. 15.—Chances for the Dempsey-Willard bout scheduled here for March 17 hang on the result of a decision the state boxing commission is expected to make next week.

Commenting on the report that Jack Kearns, manager of the champion, would call off the fight since the commission passed its $15 limit ruling, Promoter Tex Rickard said tonight that nothing has been done as yet.

If the commission insists upon a maximum price of $15, it will necessitate a calling off of the bout or a reduction in the purse guaranteed Dempsey, as the Garden at its capacity under the new rates is not worth more than $125,000. Willard agreed to work on a percentage basis.

KILBANE EAGER TO DEFEND TITLE

New York, Jan. 15.—"I'm in New York lookin' for a fight. I'll give any boy in the class a chance at the championship," Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, said here today.

"They've been sending word out to Ohio that I was afraid of the eastern contenders. I'm here now and any promoter can talk to me."

Tex Rickard said today he had practically signed the Cleveland champion to meet the winner of the Andy Chaney-Charley Beecher fight, which is to be held Monday night in Madison Square Garden.

Prehn Takes Mat Match, Tom Ray Conceding Fall

Oskaloosa, Ia., Jan. 15.—Paul Prehn won from Tom Ray in their wrestling match here last night. Prehn took the first fall in 1:17 with a leg split hold. Ray conceded the second fall after a physician declared he was in no condition to continue the match.

INDIANA BOXING BACKED BY LEGION

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 15.—[Special.]—A resolution indorsing the proposed Indiana boxing bill, providing for a boxing commission to govern the sport in Indiana, has been adopted by the South Bend American Legion post. The measure was drafted by the Hammond Post and will be presented to the state legislature. It provides a commission to govern and regulate the sport.

If this bill is passed it will allow ten round decision bouts, make it necessary for promoters and boxers to obtain permits from the commission, and regulate the price of admission.

JAMES J. CORBETT—The Man Who Set New Style in American Fighting

IT'S A ROUGH NIGHT
FOUGHT AND BEAT JOE CHOYNSKI ON A BARGE
IN THE SULLIVAN FIGHT JIM DANCED AND SULLIVAN LOST HIS WIND CHASING HIM.
THE GREAT MOMENT IN JIM CORBETT'S LIFE WAS WHEN SULLIVAN WENT DOWN IN THE 21ST ROUND AT NEW ORLEANS, SEPT. 7 1892.

JIM JEFFRIES K.O.'D HIM TWICE IN TWO TRIES.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

JAMES J. CORBETT set a new fashion in American boxing when he beat Sullivan at New Orleans.

For years Sullivan had been considered absolutely invincible, in or out of condition.

Corbett was a swift, clever boxer. He was extremely hard to hit—a fleeting shadow in the ring, yet with plenty of courage. An inch over 6 feet, weighing 183 pounds, sinewy, built for speed rather than for strength, he never was a hard hitter. He won fights by wearing his rivals down, by making them miss until they were arm weary and discouraged.

Student of Boxing.

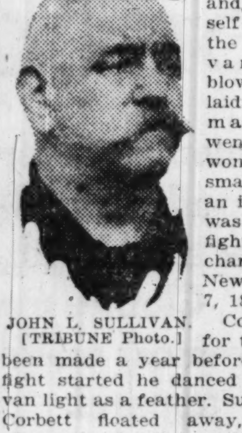
Corbett was a student of boxing, a keen fellow who set out to make science overcome strength. When he began fighting he was a bank clerk in San Francisco and boxing instructor at the Olympic club. At first he fought as if he were "giving a boxing lesson"—the origin, by the way, of that phrase.

Corbett boxed a dozen or so unimportant bouts before he found a real rival—Joe Choynski—whom he finally beat decisively on a barge in San Francisco bay, in twenty-eight rounds.

Going to New Orleans he outpointed Jake Kilrain in six rounds, and returning to California became famous by fighting a sixty-one round draw with the great Peter Jackson. Peter had a sprained ankle and couldn't move about much. Corbett danced around and around him endlessly, but would take no more than a long range chance until half of the weary spectators went home and the rest slept in their chairs, the referee finally stopping the bout.

Gets Match with John L.

A month later Sullivan arrived in San Francisco on an exhibition tour. Corbett boxed four rounds with him and, finding himself able to avoid the great Sullivan's swinging blows with ease, laid plans for a match. Corbett went east and won three or four small bouts, made an impression and was matched to fight for the championship at New Orleans Sept. 7, 1892.



JOHN L. SULLIVAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Corbett's plan for that fight had been made a year before. When the fight started he danced around Sullivan light as a feather. Sullivan rushed. Corbett floated away, barely out of reach, hardly striking a blow. Infuriated, Sullivan lunged and swung, and every miss weakened him, for missing continually is a heavier strain on a fighter than taking punishment. Frequently Sullivan stopped, dropped his hands, and dared Corbett to "come and fight like a man."

Corbett Bides His Time.

The crowd began to jeer. Cold, smiling, perfectly sure of himself and at ease, Corbett called to the spectators that they'd see fighting enough in good time, and went on with his work in his own way. He danced about, floated away barely out of reach when Sullivan tried desperately to catch him and knock him down; and now and then he jabbed Sullivan sharply. Sullivan, old, in no condition, with a roll of fat hanging over his belt, wheezing, reeling on unsteady legs, still charged, but was so weary now he could hardly raise his arms.

So Corbett increased his efforts little by little and began shooting over jarring rights. Sullivan was badly battered, his eyes puffed, his lunges were off line and he could hardly keep his feet under him. The crowd, that had been jeering Corbett, was at first silent in amazement that this unbelievable thing was happening before its eyes, and then, with a crowd's inconsistency, began roaring applause for the cub that was tearing the toothless old lion down. In the twenty-first round any one with half an eye could see Sullivan was done. His arms hung slack at his sides and his legs refused to carry him forward. In all his life, they say, Sullivan had not stepped back.

Finish of Sullivan.

Corbett knew his time had come. Throwing aside the defense he no longer needed, he ran in and rained blows on the tottering old champion until Sullivan slowly sank to the floor. And once down there was no struggling up again. The fight was over. The great Sullivan had been whipped without landing a single solid blow.

Those were great days for Corbett. He toured the country in triumph, great crowds meeting him everywhere. Papers printed pages about his cleverness, his swiftness, his amazing skill. Every young boxer in the country aped his "style" of boxing. Hard hitting was considered a joke before swift footed, light tapping skill.

And then Eddie Cook, or perhaps it was the versatile William A. Brady, thought of calling Corbett "Gentleman Jim." That touch made him a fortune on the stage.

Sixteen months later Corbett knocked out Charlie Mitchell in three rounds at Jacksonville, Fla., and one Peter Courtney, for the pictures, at Orange, N. J. Two and a half years elapsed, and the champion listened to public clamor and condescended to box four rounds in San Francisco with Tom Sharkey, a raw sailor who had beaten Joe Choynski and a few others.

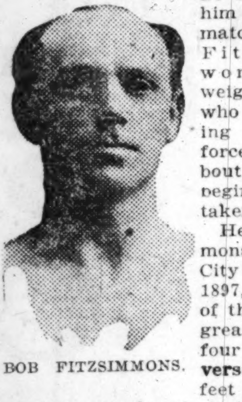
I watched Corbett's training at the Olympic club.

"I'll make a sucker of this sailor dub," said Corbett, smiling.

But he didn't. The sailor dub disregarded Corbett's science entirely, rushed and roughed him, and used him so hardily that the bout was stopped half a minute before the end of the fourth round to save the champion from a possible knockout and make the decision a "draw."

Meets Fitz and Defeat.

This was practically Corbett's end as a champion. A desire to get back public favor induced him to take on a match with Bob Fitzsimmons, world's middleweight champion, who had been trying for years to force him into a bout and who was beginning to be taken seriously.



BOB FITZSIMMONS.

He met Fitzsimmons at Carson City on March 17, 1897, and in spite of the date and a great collection of four leaved clovers and rabbits' feet sent him by admirers was knocked out in the fourteenth round in one of the most splendidly spectacular fights the world had seen, under surroundings rare in romantic interest.

In another year and a half Corbett fought Sharkey and was so nearly knocked out in the ninth round that one of his own seconds, Connie McVey, jumped into the ring to save him, forfeiting the decision on a foul.

Gentleman Jim Out at Last.

In another year and a half Corbett made a spectacular attempt to come back, fighting Jim Jeffries, who meanwhile had knocked out Fitzsimmons and became champion. This fight was at Coney Island. Corbett trained quietly for nearly a year and was in fine condition. Using all his skill, he danced and jabbed through twenty-two rounds, piling up points and keeping out of danger. Then Jeffries, aroused to the danger of losing Referee Charlie White's decision, rushed out, in the twenty-third, chased and caught Corbett in full flight, threw him against the ropes with a stiff left hander, and as he rebounded cracked him on the jaw with a crushing right and knocked him so cold that Gentleman Jim never moved until the ten second count was over.

A Bout with Scandal.

Corbett fought twice after that. Officially he "knocked out" Kid McCoy in five rounds. It is said McCoy went down not unwillingly. There was much scandal over that affair, so the less said about it as a fight the better.

Later he fought Jeffries in San Francisco and was knocked out in ten rounds. Jeffries could have turned the trick in one, but wanted to give the crowd "a run for its money."

SOUTAR TAKES 'PRO' COURT TENNIS FINAL; TO PLAY GOULD NEXT

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 15.—Jock Soutar of the Philadelphia Racquets club won the first professional court tennis championship of America today by defeating C. J. Fairs of New York, former world's titleholder, in the final match on the club courts, 6—5, 3—6, 5—6, 6—5, 6—2.

Soutar's victory qualified him to meet Jay Gould for the open championship of the United States at the racquet club next Wednesday and Friday.

Soutar started by winning four of the first five games, but Fairs, in the sixth, came to life, won two in a row, and though he dropped the eighth, came back and won two more, both keenly contested, with duece called three times. Fairs dropped the racquet at the critical moment in the final game of the set, however, and lost, this costing him the frame by a 6—5 score.

Fairs won handily in the second set, 6—3, and rose to his greatest heights in the third set, which he won, 6—5.

The fourth set was a dingdong affair. With the score 4 all, Soutar won the next two after a desperate grapple and the set by 6—5. Fairs weakened in the fifth and final set, taking only two games.

WOODS and WATERS

by LARRY ST. JOHN

GOSSIP OF THE OUT O' DOORS.

THE prohibition of spring shooting has already shown results far greater than were antcipated. There are more birds now than before the partially enforced migratory bird law was passed, and there will be a great many more under the workings of the present migratory bird treaty act. One more step needs to be taken to insure good waterfowl shooting on this continent for all time, and that is the establishment of permanent breeding grounds in the north, and rest and feeding places along the routes of migration and in the wintering grounds in the south.

LARRY ST. JOHN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The present—and we hope short lived—mania for drainage is the worst enemy of wild life with which we have to contend. If drainage in the United States and Canada continues at the present rate the best breeding and rest grounds will be lost forever. You cannot remake a marsh any more than you can unscramble eggs.

Our one hope is that the uniformly poor results of drainage, plus the prompt action of those who have charge of the conservation of wild life, will result in acquiring suitable marsh lands while they are to be had.

One does not have to travel far from home to see the havoc wrought by so-called drainage experts. Look at the Kankakee marshes in Indiana. They made a waterfowl paradise that would have insured good duck hunting in a thickly settled part of the United States; that would have brought thousands of dollars in revenue into the state.

It could have been a great recreation center and parts of it could have been set aside as rest and breeding grounds for wild life, a monument to the foresight of this generation of Hoosiers. Instead, a fine marsh was destroyed to produce land that is worthless, for the most part.

The Horicon marshes in Wisconsin present another good example of misapplied energy in reclamation. In northwestern Ohio a drainage project produced some good onion land. The whole region became infected with the drainage germ. One sizable piece of marsh was left, and last year the owners of this marsh took $50,000 worth of muskrats from their property, in addition to a good revenue in the summer for carp seining privileges, and in the fall for duck shooting.

If we cared to, we could say a few sarcastic things about the Klamath lake drainage fiasco, but it is unnecessary.

HOW ABOUT A FEDERAL LICENSE?

The American Game Protective association offers an excellent idea—at least we think it is an excellent idea—for raising funds to finance conservation programs by the government. They suggest a federal license fee of 50 cents for the privilege of hunting migratory birds, this to be independent of state licenses.

It is estimated that this plan would bring a revenue of at least $2,000,000 a year; that amount would buy a lot of marsh lands, and when these are bought it would provide ample warden service. We do not believe that many hunters would object to paying such a fee; the results certainly would be a big 50 cents' worth.

BENNY SAYS RICHIE IS TOUGHEST BOXER HE EVER MIXED WITH

New York, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—While the "I told you so" chorus was going strong, Benney Leonard contented himself today with an interview calling Richie Mitchell the "classiest lightweight I have ever met," the box office adding machine is still figuring the amount due the European relief fund, and the pickpockets who mingled with the fashionable folk are saying "Pretty soft!"

IS MY HAT ON STRAIGHT ?

Leonard's explanation of the fight last night by which he retains the title of champion reads:

"But that knockdown in the first round preached a real sermon to me. I realized that even though I was world's champion I was not immune to a knockout. I couldn't afford to become careless, particularly with such an opponent as Richie Mitchell facing me. From then on I attended strictly to my knitting.

Bout Fought on Merits.

"The knockdown also helped Mitchell considerably. His nervousness disappeared, and from then to the finish it was a case of a bout being fought on its merits. I feel better now, knowing that I beat the real Richie Mitchell instead of one whose work was affected by that 'psychological factor.'"

As for the Mitchells, it cannot be said truthfully that they are good losers. Orders were left at Richie's dressing room door to permit no one to enter. Not even newspaper men were given permission to interview the lad who handed Leonard the toughest opposition encountered by Benny since he ascended the lightweight throne.

$75,000 for France.

It will be several days before the exact amount of the receipts is known. The gate takings were estimated at close to $150,000, and it is expected with the premiums paid for tickets about $75,000 net profits will be turned into the fund for devastated France. Leonard received a guarantee of $40,000 and Mitchell a guarantee of $20,000.

About the pickpockets—Now with society taking up prize fighting as a refined attraction—Madison Square garden will become a popular rendezvous for the leather lifters, it was said today. Without exception no congregation of individuals is so susceptible of being frisked with ease and dispatch as are the spectators of a prize fight. Their whole attention is centered upon the two men in the ring to the complete effacement of everything else.

PURPLE TO MAKE STRONG BID FOR WATER HONORS

Last Year's Big Ten Swim Champs May Repeat.

Northwestern university, last year's swimming champion of the Western Intercollegiate conference, will have another first class team this season and has hopes of adding another title to the Purple water athletes' already long list.

Coach Tom Robinson looks for a big swimming year in the Big Ten with Minnesota, Iowa, and Purdue coming in for dual meets, and the strength of all the teams above that of last year. Robinson expects water basketball to take on a new lease of life, with seven teams in the race.

TOM ROBINSON.

Seek Chicago Dual Meet.

Keen regret is expressed by the Northwestern water tutor that no dual meet has as yet been scheduled with Chicago. "It is the hope of the Northwestern fans that a meet with Chicago be arranged," he said. "There is a keen spirit of rivalry between the two teams and it seems a shame that they do not come together in a dual meet."

Chicago and Northwestern again battled it out at the annual conference meet last year, each having come through the dual meet season without a reverse. Chicago placed second, Illinois, third; Wisconsin, fourth; Purdue, fifth; Iowa, sixth, and Minnesota last.

Capt. Hayford a Real Star.

"The Purple team has suffered a severe loss in the graduation of Capt. H. Grove and Milton Branower, and through Gerding's not returning to school this fall," said Robinson. "This year's team is led by Max Hayford, a junior of real ability in the 40, 100, 220, and 400 yard free style swims and conference champion at 220 yards.

"In Sid Huguenin, a senior, we have one of the best fancy divers in the conference, and in Paul Post one of the best plungers. Art Crawley, conference fancy diving champion, will be available again this year."

Coach Robinson said that Capt. Huguenin of the Purple's water basketball team will be well fortified with material.

The loss of Football Captain Graham Penfield, due to a wrestling injury, is regarded as a blow at the water basketball chances and the breast stroke contingent.

The Purple is considering an eastern trip from Jan. 30 to Feb. 7, possible teams to be met including Princeton, Columbia, Rutgers, Lehigh, Syracuse, Navy, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati.

EVANS EXPECTS JOHNSON TO STAR IN 1921 SEASON

Doesn't Think Ailment Will Affect Walter.

BY BILLY EVANS.
[American League Umpire.]

BILLY EVANS

What about Walter Johnson? Is he through or will he be able to pitch next year?" That query has been put to me many times since the close of the season.

Walter Johnson, one of the finest characters ever to grace baseball, is naturally the idol of fandom. His popularity is not confined to the city he represents in the major leagues, Washington, but extends over the United States. Wherever baseball is known, the name of Walter Johnson always arouses admiration. Hence, it is to be expected that fandom should be interested in his chances to regain his old time form.

The season of 1920 was an extraordinary one for Johnson in many ways. Although a veteran, he is always at the top of his game in the spring, an dit seemed last season was to be no exception. He looked good for a time, then contracted a cold that settled in his back and interfered with his work.

Pitches No Hit Game.

After a number of weeks in which he was considerably off his game, he seemed to get back into his stride. As a matter of fact, he celebrated his return by pitching a no hit no run game against Boston. If my memory serves me correctly only one man reached first, and he, through an error in the infield. It was a perfectly pitched and almost perfectly played game.

Shortly after his no hit feat, a performance which is the ambition of every pitcher, and which, by the way, was the first time for Johnson, he began to have a little trouble with his arm. The trouble seemed to increase, despite the usual treatments given to remedy such ailments. It was finally decided absolute rest was best, so Johnson was sent home for a long stay. I understand he felt so good near the close of the season that he was eager to return and give the arm a thorough tryout. However, it was deemed best that he reserve the test until 1921.

Doesn't Think Walter Through.

It is my belief that Johnson will win many a ball game for Washington next season. I cannot reconcile myself to the belief that he is through. Perhaps the thought that the game can so ill afford to lose players of the Johnson type makes me the more certain he is bound to do a comeback. I worked a number of ball games back of Walter last year, and he showed me too much stuff in those games to make me believe his good old right arm has lost its "swift," as Nick Altrock puts it.

No fan is pulling more for the return to form by Johnson than I am. I have always admired Johnson because he is a real man. His work has fairly teemed with color. I doubt if any pitcher ever performed more unusual stunts. In looking over my records I note the following feats: In 1913, between April 10 and May 15, he pitched fifty-six consecutive scoreless innings. In 1912 he won sixteen straight games, a record equaled only by Joe Wood.

VERSATILE CUE CHAMPION

PERCY COLLINS.
Golf and piano playing also accomplishments of amateur titleholder.

BY JOE DAVIS.

THE three diversions of Percy Collins, the national amateur billiard champion, are associated with ivory. Billiards and piano in winter time and golf in summer are the mediums through which he keeps his eye clear and his brain free of business cobwebs. Whether manipulating the spheroids on the green cloth table, tickling the ivory in flatter form on the piano, or sending the golf ball flying from his ivory faced club, Percy is always a keen student of cause and effect.

His feats as a billiard player are well known, years of persistent practice being rewarded last year when he won the national amateur balkline title at Boston. As a follower in the footsteps of Paderewski, Chopin, McDowell, and other class A players of the pianoforte he is not quite as well known, but it generally is conceded he is better on the piano than on the golf course. His répertoire ranges from classic to jazz and he has the same delicate touch which enables him to make his big runs on the billard table.

Percy was snapped by the photographer near the water's edge of the swimming tank at the Illinois Athletic club. He was rendering a piece descriptive of strife among the grand opera stars, which is a tough piece to execute.

State-Wide Play Begun for 3 Cushion Honors

The second annual tournament for the three cushion amateur championship of Illinois is now under way, games to determine the winners in ten districts having started. Five of these are from downstate points and five from Chicago. Winners of district gold medals will compete in the state finals at Mussey's Monroe room Feb. 22 to 24. The three top men then will play off with George Sunde, present champion, for the championship diamond medal, given by the Illinois Billiard association.

BENEFIT TO GAME IF BALL PLAYERS 'CUT OUT' CARDS

Majors Need Divorce from Poker and Dice.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

I. E. (Sy) SANBORN.

It's a grand old idea to eliminate gambling among ball players during the playing season, but they are going to have a helova time doing it, because it is a tough job to break any fixed habit, and gambling is so fixed it is ingrowing.

Card playing for money is so general it is almost unanimous in the professional baseball world. There are a few players who do not sit in at any kind of a card or dice game, but they are scarce. In the majority of teams the card playing is reduced to a minimum of injury by the enforcement of a low limit. In some teams there is no limit, and it becomes a dangerous disease. Most team managers forbid dice, others permit the Seminole dominoes to roll if not too conspicuously.

Starts Sore Feeling.

Even when restricted to a quarter limit in poker, players who think they can play the game, but can't, frequently have lost too much money for their own good, or for the good of the team, because of the feelings engendered. Where there is no limit poor players sometimes have lost a month's salary in a couple of hours. "Soreness" is bound to result from these expensive bouts, and frequently "debts of honor" are contracted which never are paid, and that increases the trouble.

The monetary element, however, is not the worst part of card playing in baseball. It has become so constant as to take the minds of the performers off the real game too much of the time. Instead of spending their mornings or evenings while on the road in discussing their mistakes of the previous game or their plans for the coming game, the players dive for their rooms right after breakfast to play cards until time to leave for the ball park.

Late Hours Also Bad.

If there is a game the players get into the dining room as quickly as possible and demand perfect service from the help so they can get back to their rooms to play more cards. The games last as long as the managers will permit, sometimes until 11 o'clock, sometimes until midnight, and occasionally a long time after, if the manager happens to be away.

South secured five tricks. If at trick six west had discarded the knave of spakes north would have thrown the nine of diamonds.

The key to the problem was the discard of the nine of clubs at trick one. East would have allowed north to win the fifth trick could he have done so.

Had north discarded either a spade or diamond on the first trick west would have played the knave of diamonds on the first round of that suit.

ON INTERPRETING BIDS.

NO-TRUMP declarations, after partner has declared spades or hearts, indicate one of two conditions. The first is, that the no-trump declarant has less than three cards of his partner's suit; the second, that he does not think his partner knows how to play.

When a player bids two in any suit after partner has bid no-trump, with no intervening bid, it should always be construed as weakness, although it sometimes proves to be strength. There are very few hands which warrant the original declarer's bidding two no-trump.

A remarkable example of a take-out occurred in a south side hotel.

West secured eight tricks.

There was not much play in the deal, except in passing the first round of diamonds

The outcome was remarkable, and what would have happened to the no-trump declaration is pitiful to contemplate.

South was tempted to make a bid of three clubs, but it hardly seemed worth while, as he had no reason to expect help from his partner.

RAILWAY MEN PAY HONOR TO FATHER OF SAFETY MOVE

RALPH C. RICHARDS [Matzene Photo.]

At a luncheon in the Union League club yesterday, 1,000 safety workers on the Chicago and Northwestern railway presented R. C. Richards, father of the railroad safety movement, with a complete silver service in grateful recognition of his efforts.

Mr. Richards, who is 66 years old, inaugurated the work of saving lives and limbs on the Chicago and Northwestern railway, June 30, 1910—thirty-four years after he entered the employ of the road as an office boy.

Why People Die Too Young

Will you devote 4 minutes of your time to a plan that may add twenty years to your life?

Why is it that even though you are apparently in good health there are times when you have all sorts of aches and pains—a depressed feeling and off days?

Have you ever stopped to question—why?

It is simply a warning from nature. Perhaps you have unknowingly broken some of nature's laws.

It is possible by following certain simple little rules not only to enjoy a vigorous health but to prolong one's youthfulness 10 to 20 years and instead of dying at 60 or 70 you may live to a ripe old age of 85 or 90 years.

There Is No Sudden Death

Nature goes far in her desire to protect us. There are certain signs, which when we understand them, give us warning of serious trouble to come. By knowing what they are we can head off illness and be healthy and vigorous.

Used by Big Business Men

Among the thousands who use this simple plan are the officials of many of the country's largest institutions—such as American Tel. & Tel. Co., Armour & Co., Standard Oil Company, Sears, Roebuck and Co., William Wrigley, Jr. Co. The members of the bureau are literally insuring active, vigorous health, with the practical certainty of adding twenty years to their lives. It's all in a simple little plan that requires only four minutes of your time a year—and the cost is so small it is within the reach of every one.

YELLOW CAB CO. TO MAKE AUTOS FOR THE TRADE

When the automobile show opens on Jan. 29 Chicago will see for the first time the Yellow Cab Manufacturing company's "line" of pleasure cars and trucks. John Hertz, president of the company, has announced that the production on a large scale of these motor cars will commence immediately.

The ace of the company's line is the "Ambassador," a 12-cylindered car, which, Mr. Hertz predicts, will be immediately classed as among the finest of America's automobiles. It is a luxury car with a powerful motor under the hood.

Greatest production, however, will be on a 4-cylindered car of moderate price. This car has been worked out on the Yellow Cab chassis, and Mr. Hertz says will have the long life of the dependable taxicabs.

To complete the line the company will produce a one ton speed wagon and a ton and a quarter speed truck.

The cars will be manufactured in the company's factory at Menard and Dickens streets, and the industry there will mean an investment of several million dollars. Mr. Hertz says it is Chicago's first real effort to break into the ranks of Detroit's one big industry.

ARMY MEN TRY TO STIR INTEREST IN VICTORY MEDALS

A campaign conducted by army officers speaking at public meetings and gatherings will be launched within the next few days to arouse the interest of ex-service men in applying for Victory medals. Fully 60,000 former soldiers in the Chicago district have failed to obtain their medals.

"Some of the men do not know Congress has authorized the decoration," said Lieut. W. C. Wagner, in charge of the distribution. "Others do not know how to obtain them. There are many who do not appreciate what this medal will mean to them. As time goes on it will become a cherished memento and a priceless legacy."

All men who served during the war are eligible to receive the medal upon presentation of their discharge papers at room 271 Conway building, 111 West Washington street.

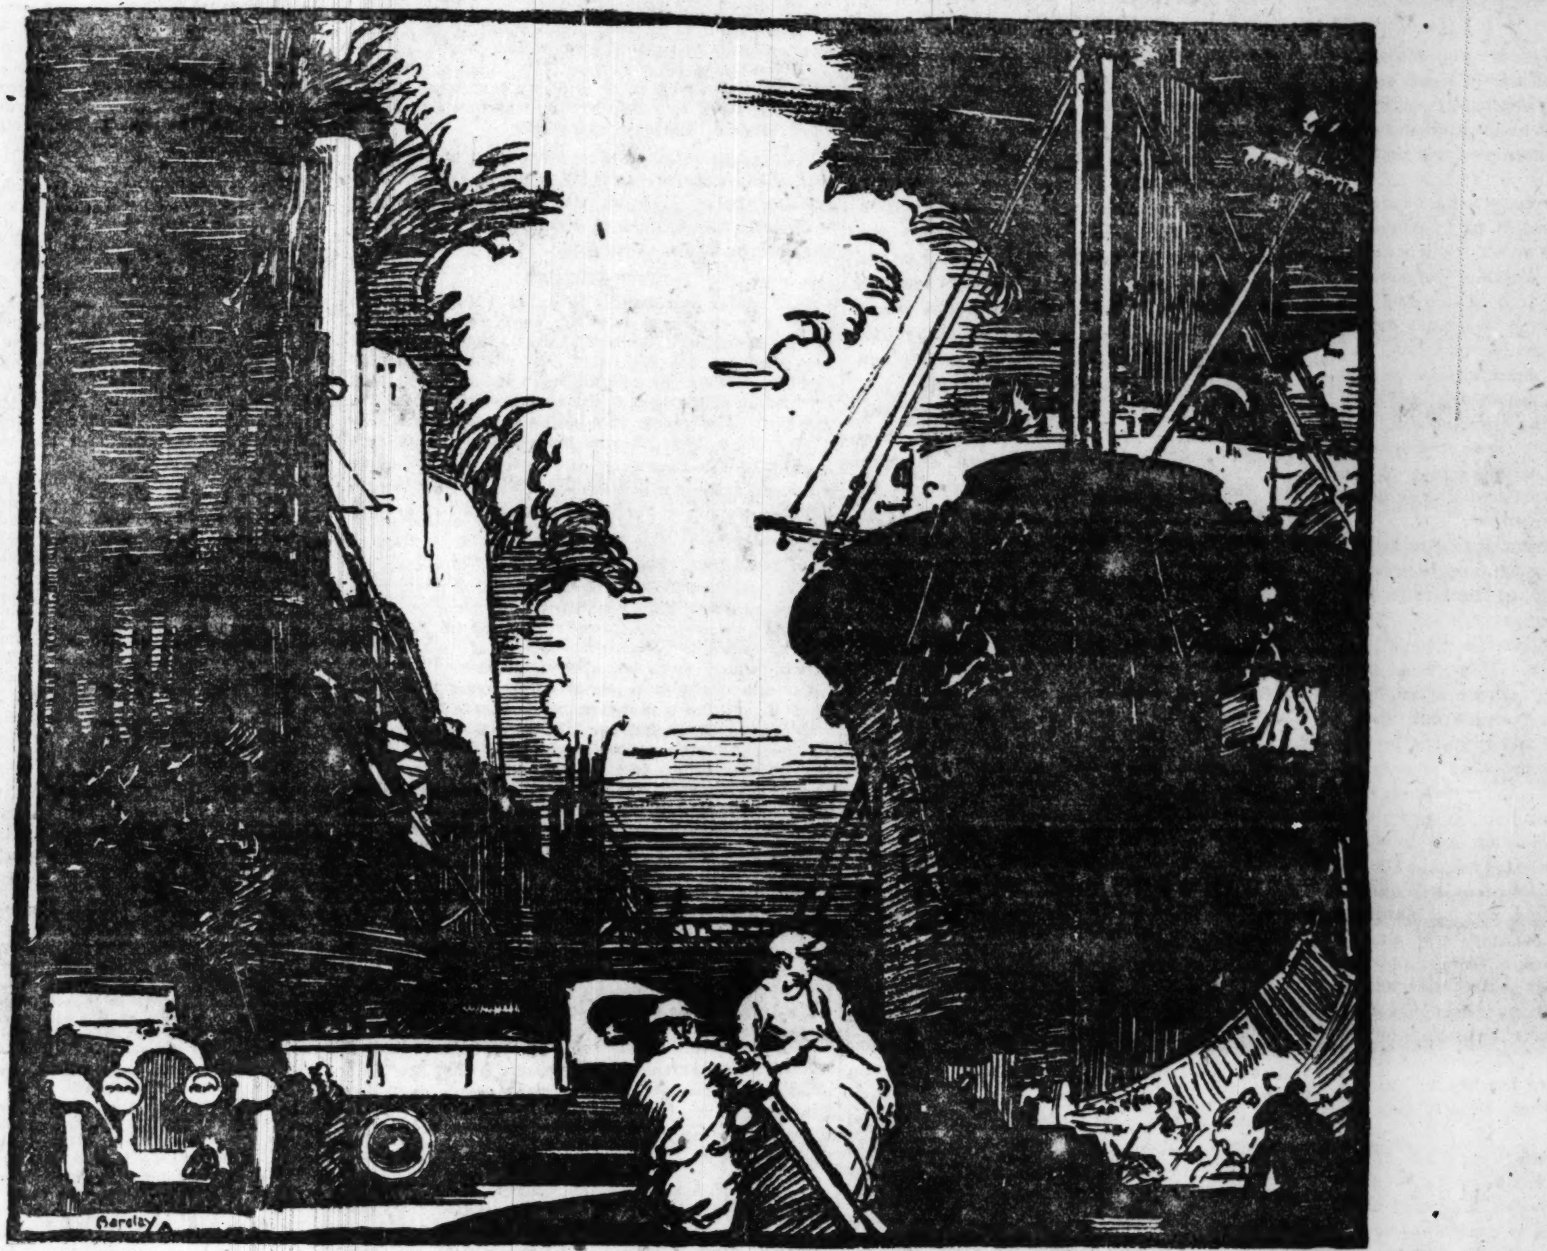
FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF GOODRICH



The widening of transportation by rail and water, by automobile and motor truck, the development of the use of electricity, the growth of the industrial world—all these have called upon the full resources of the rubber industry until rubber in its manifold uses is an essential part of countless factors entering into our daily lives.

THE TRIUMPH OF RUBBER

SINCE the founding of the company in 1870 Goodrich has taken an active and prominent part in the upbuilding of the rubber industry. It has produced and is producing a host of things which effect a saving of time, labor and materials for other industries.

Hundreds of thousands of people may think of Goodrich principally in terms of tires—yet tires are simply one division of the work of the organization. Some others are mechanical rubber goods, rubber footwear, druggists' rubber sundries and hard rubber products.

The growth of Goodrich is indicated by the fact that from the original output of fire hose and mechanical goods the list of Goodrich wares has increased until now more than thirty thousand different articles are being manufactured and distributed throughout the world.

The progress of the company from the beginning has been markedly influenced by the firm belief of every member of the institution in its plans, purposes and products. Harmony of effort, intelligent work, confidence in the company and in one another—these influences have combined to build Goodrich to its present great proportions.

The rounding out of its first half century finds the organization full of youth and determination, alive to the promises of the future and strengthened by the good will and good faith of customers whose patronage has been earned and held through merit.

AN INTERESTING BOOKLET—Few persons realize the interesting side—even the romance—of the rubber industry and its history. We have published a booklet commemorating our fiftieth anniversary. It tells the story of rubber. This book, "The Golden Year of Goodrich," will be sent in response to a request on your business stationery.

REVISION OF THE PEACE TREATY AND EUROPEAN REVIVAL.

Take a map of the United States; draw an imaginary boundary the east line of which runs somewhere in western Ohio, the north line through the middle of Wisconsin, the west line east of the Rockies, and the south line between Tennessee and Georgia.

Leave out of this district its coal and mineral mines, and assume that on the north, west, east, and south are four jealous and unfriendly nations.

Then ask yourself what would happen under such conditions to the peace and prosperity of this region and of this continent.

In the north and east and west the headwaters of our region would be controlled by unfriendly governments. In the south the outlet of our waterways would be controlled by another unfriendly nation. In the north and east and west would be the mines and forests from which we must draw essential fuel and raw materials for factories, or, if we gave up hope of domestic manufacture, would have to draw our commodities in exchange for our agricultural, cattle, and dairying products.

In a military sense we should be open to invasion from highly defensible regions on two sides.

In short, our situation would be one of economic dependence and military weakness.

At the same time our neighbors, manufacturing New England and New York and mining Pennsylvania, would lack our supply of foodstuffs, as would our neighbor to the west.

The American people would never consent to such economic dismemberment. If it were imposed upon us we should not remain quiet, but should struggle until we had restored our unity and the reciprocal resources of this great continent.

The treaty of Versailles has produced in central Europe a condition similar to that which we describe in the foregoing paragraphs. Hungary, for example, is in about the condition our central region would be in if our boundaries were as stated above. The older Hungary was an economic unity. The central basin of the Danube was the natural outlet for the mountainous country, now shorn from her, where there are mines of iron, coal, and salt, and soft wood forests. The valleys have their only exit into the central plain. Their people, Slovaks, given to Czecho-Slovakia, will have difficulty in sustaining themselves. At the same time Hungary has lost her outlet to the sea at Fiume and the Danube passes through bitterly hostile countries.

"By the so-called peace treaty," says Mr. John Bass in his valuable volume entitled "The Peace Tangle," "this country, in which each natural unit was so related to the whole as to contribute to its greatest utility, has been divided among different countries hostile to each other. Each unit so detached from the body of the whole has thereby lost a considerable portion of its utility in the sustenance of man. . . . Inexperience in government by the new nations, national animosities, made virulent by the treaties and territorial limitations, threaten a permanent deterioration of efficiency and coöperation."

In other words, unless the economic dismemberment of a large part of Europe can be in some measure undone and closely interrelated economic regions restored to coöperation, life in Europe must descend to a lower plane and a process of internecine conflicts which will bleed Europe to death will be fixed upon her.

The racial and national, religious, military, and political rivalries and rancors of Europe have persisted for centuries, and cannot be talked out of existence, as Mr. Wilson thought. The formula of self-determination is impractical in many cases, and was in fact ignored in some flagrant cases in favor of interests more potent than theory. But though it appeals to Americans in the abstract, we are beginning to realize that the economic restoration of Europe is the paramount issue, and that where racial, military, or political considerations—nationalist or imperialist—can be made to give way to the interest of economic coöperation the effort must be made to accomplish it.

A good part of the peace of Versailles is a mosaic of hostilities. French, British, and Italian interests, narrowly pursued, and the particular national ambitions, fears, and hostilities of the aspiring new nations, have contrived a chaos where a large unity is needed. They have released all the centrifugal forces formerly held in some abeyance by the much abused imperial system of Austria-Hungary, whereas a new synthesis was needed if the old forces compelling coöperation were to be destroyed.

We do not venture to predict that an ideal revision of the peace of Versailles could be accomplished now, even though a new conference would be freed in some degree from the war mood and its members better advised as to the real character of their problem. Yet we believe something useful might be gained in the direction of inducing or compelling an economic peace where now the stupid and suicidal hatreds and rivalries of petty governments and misled people are blocking necessary coöperation and exchange.

In such a conference the United States might be represented by men having no political, or social, or racial Utopia in mind, but impressed with the necessity of getting the peoples of Europe to work. We still hold a strong hand, and, given another chance, under better auspices, we might play it to the great benefit of Europe and ourselves.

DIGGING UP THE HYPHEN.

The newly formed German-American league, fathered by George Sylvester Viereck and others, trusts that Americans of German descent will be considered by the president elect when he chooses the members of his cabinet, and when he appoints diplomatic representatives, postmasters, revenue, and other officials.

Leagues of Americans of Irish, French, Italian, Bohemian, Polish, Russian, or Scandinavian descent should fall into line. If they do we may have a government that should suit the most ardent champion of the league of nations.

In fact, Viereck's idea of the United States, if we get it right, is that it is already a league of nations. But we think he ought not to be so restrained. A cabinet of descendants is after all a concession to narrow Americanism. What we ought to have is a cabinet of the real things, say Bernstorff secretary of state, De Valera secretary of the treasury, Foch or D'Annunzio secretary of war, Churchill secretary of the navy, Venizelos secretary of commerce, Branting secretary of labor. Possibly agriculture might be given to an American of American descent or be referred to The Hague for appointment.

One of the objects of Mr. Viereck's league is to combat British propaganda. When other leagues organize to fight German propaganda, Irish propaganda, Italian propaganda, Serbian propaganda, Polish propaganda, Armenian propaganda, Russian white propaganda, Russian red propaganda, Mexican propaganda, Chinese propaganda, Corean propaganda, Japanese propaganda, Hindoo propaganda, Egyptian propaganda, then we doubtless shall have attained that "era of peace and good feeling" for which the resolutions of Mr. Viereck's league pray. Then America will be as full of peace and good feeling as Europe is now and we can raze the capitol at Washington and put up a replica of the tower of Babel in its place. Exit the United States, enter the Disunited States.

THE GRIME IN THE COAL BUSINESS.

The Calder committee, which has been investigating the coal situation throughout the United States for the information of the senate, apparently has discovered what most of the country already knew—that the coal business is a black business. Having reached this decision, it offers the standard remedy of legislation to provide strict federal regulation.

In such circumstances we hope congress will make sure, or, if it has made sure, will make public, not only all the devious ways of the coal business which have made it a scandal, if not a crime, throughout the country, but the exact relation which government officials and government control have had to dark passages of the trade.

Some points have stood out so prominently that there is no need to ask congress to disclose them. We know, for instance, that many coal operators or big wholesale dealers took advantage of the lakes pool regulations last summer to break or set aside their contracts and bring about a 60 per cent additional charge to their contract customers. We know that government agents agreed with coal operators that there was a threatened shortage, and by this agreement, and by bidding prices up in the open market, helped the coal panic which jumped prices to unequaled heights.

We know there was never a real shortage of coal in the country, despite shortages in the private bins of some householders, in some factories, or even in some towns or states. The coal was in the ground and was being extracted and transported at a normal rate. Yet the operators and dealers, aided and abetted by government agents, were spreading the propaganda which brought them unprecedented profits. A representative of one of the country's leading coal trade publications even came to THE TRIBUNE and pleaded for a campaign of publicity to induce the public to take coal of any grade and in any quantity to weather the emergency, but did not press the request when confronted with statistics proving that production was normal. Manipulation of cars, manipulation of contracts, and general misinformation combined to bunco the public.

The well informed portion of the public has realized this for some time. Now the Calder committee has found it out, and purposes to prevent a repetition. If it can do so, well and good. But the government dealings with the coal trade to date have not inspired confidence. It must gain confidence if it wishes public support in new regulation.

Certainly some regulation or change of system is needed. For at least four years business has been handicapped and householders annoyed and exploited by uncertainty as to coal supplies and costs. The coal is in the country in unlimited quantities. The problem is one of digging and distribution. If a solution is honestly sought it can be found. If it is not found, the public will grow in the belief that it is not honestly sought. If the leading coal operators and associated interests do not wish to see at least the experiment of nationalization they will coöperate speedily to remove some of the grime from their business.

Editorial of the Day

GOV. SMALL'S ADDRESS.

[Bloomington Pantagraph.]

It is probable that the average citizen will be more or less disappointed in the inaugural address of Gov. Small. Using the much-abused Thompson platform as a text, the new governor reaffirms his adherence to its principles and then goes on to outline its various provisions.

Gov. Small naturally devotes considerable attention to the proposed repeal of the public utilities act and the abolition of the public utilities commission. As a candidate for the nomination for governor he promised to do everything in his power to accomplish home rule for cities and particularly for Chicago and he, therefore, urges the assembly to repeal the utilities law.

The governor is meticulous in calling attention to every plank in the Thompson platform, and his inaugural message is little more than a summary of that declaration of principles. Everything is there whether it has to do with state government or not. The governor would have nothing to do with any kind of a league or association of nations unless it was first submitted to the vote of the American people. He favors the payment of a liberal bonus to soldiers through the national congress, is opposed to compulsory military training or conscription, and believes that incomes of less than $5,000 should be exempted from federal taxation.

Whether these national propositions are desirable or not, they certainly have little or nothing to do with efficient government in Illinois at the present time, and Gov. Small would have been better employed had he devoted the space given to this part of his address in amplifying the brief statement made at the beginning: "I shall endeavor to see that every dollar appropriated will secure a dollar's worth of service."

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

[Jacksonville, Ill., Journal.]

Gov. Len Small sent his message to the general assembly yesterday. It is a plain statement wherein the governor reaffirms the pledges made in his preëlection campaign. Those who peruse the message must hold the opinion that the governor was sincere in his preëlection statements and that he purposes, so far as possible, to carry those pledges into effect. For the most part he proposes a forward program which should have the coöperation of both Chicago and downstate.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

DINNER table esthetics must now be considered. "Color contributes character to a meal," declares a Columbia University teacher, and she advises against such clashing combinations as ham and beets. Distressing, indeed; so quite different from ham and spinach. But there is one color that goes with any meat—champagne color.

Quelle Horreur!

Sir: From the bus-top this morning I looked from the Fourth Presbyterian to the New Drake. Good Lord! On the Drive side, on a window sill, sat a quart bottle of milk! EVA.

THE cost of the word "please" in telegrams is estimated to be $10,000,000 a year. The Politeness Reporter will not be able to spend more than half that amount.

QUITE COPATHETIC.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

A young utility colored man desires to obtain employment with refined family or sanitarium; not reluctant to execute my duties; obliged to anticipate any object. Phone Lincoln 3705-M and ask for Charles.

EVEN in the exclusive Marion Club, in Indianapolis, it is necessary to display the sign, "Don't wipe dirt off on towels. Wash your hands and then wipe them." Men think they can do things in a club that they would not be allowed to do at home.

One Day Last Week.

[From the Sleepy Eye, Minn., Progressive.]

Jos. Hillesheim got stuck with his car one day last week.

P. C. Nagal was out breaking roads with his billy goats one day last week.

Edmund and Norbet Schroepfer were running a race up west one night last week.

Pete Goblirsch was seen out hunting on A. Hillesheim's frog farm one day last week.

Nick Bock and Henry Slander were out riding bicycles one day last week.

FOR years we have been advised at short intervals of the existence of O. K. Glimme, the Madison optician, but it was not until last week that we learned that Seekatz & C. Moore were in the same business in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

JES' RIGHT.

Sir: After purchasing a quart I found it corroded my zinc-lined interior, so I gave it to Al, our saddle colored janitor. Later I asked him how he found it. He replied, "Jes' right, Cap'n, jes' right." "What do you mean, 'jes' right'?" said I. "Well, suh, Cap'n, if it had been any better you wouldn't have give it to me, and if it had been any wusser I'd a died. It was jes' right." J. G. S.

THE Illinois Zinc Company offers "five teams of excellent mules for outside work," and "nine mules suitable for other purposes." What is home without a mule?

The Wrong Pew.

Sir: In the old days, if one could not get a pass on the railroad, the next thing was a concessional rate. Passengers sometimes traveled on half-rate tickets issued for charitable or special reasons, but to which they were not always entitled.

On one occasion a genial Chicagoan had managed to acquire a clergyman's half-rate ticket and was journeying to Frisco. By the time Omaha was reached, through steady patronage of the buffet car he was lit up like an excursion steamer. At this city the train was met by a delegation from a local church to welcome a visiting minister, whom they had never before seen and who had evidently missed connections. In their quest they approached the conductor and he, in good faith, pointed out the disciple of Bacchus, who, too astonished at first to reply, received their cordial greetings most graciously. He finally disillusioned them, and the train pulled out, leaving a bewildered and chagrined committee on the platform, while on the hind end of the train stood our passenger, bowing and wafting kisses to all in sight. AIN'T LAURA THE MEAN THING!

[From the Harrisburg Register.]

My wife, Mrs. Myrtle Greer, formerly Myrtle Fegan, having been enticed away from me by Laura Reese, I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by her. The furniture will be reclaimed if sold. I have returned to this city to settle all past accounts. I have been refused the privilege of talking to my wife by Laura Reese. James Greer.

WE have not seen any verse in the last two or three years that has pleased us much more than this, which we once printed:

ALCHEMY.

(Francis Carlin.)

Because of the light of the moon,
  Silver is found on the moor;
And because of the light of the sun,
  There is gold on the walls of the poor.

Because of the light of the stars,
  Planets are found in the stream;
And because of the light of your eyes,
  There is love in the depths of my dream.

"THERE will be no speeches. The entire evening will be given over to entertainment."—Duluth News-Tribune.

SMALL TOWN SCOUNDREL.

[From the Willmar, Minn., Republican-Gazette.]

Some low down scoundrel thought he was playing a joke on some one and stole four of the colored bulbs off the lights strung on the community Christmas tree. One of those little black and white striped animals is an angel compared to the person or persons who pulled the trick.

A Perfect Evening.

[Walter B. Harris, in Blackwood's.]

Mulai Abdul Aziz's first experience of the use of chloroform might easily have led to more serious results. Dr. Verdon, his English doctor, had operated on a slave under chloroform, and the Sultan had been present. The operation over, His Majesty retired into the palace carrying with him a large bottle of the anæsthetic. The doctor tried to obtain possession of the bottle, but in vain; and all he could do was to warn His Majesty to be very careful with it. He no doubt was, for apparently nobody died; but rumour has it that his ladies lay all over the palace as insensible as logs of wood—for he had a grand chloroforming evening all to himself.

ONE GUESS.

Sir: Now that woman is man's equal, and then some, is she going to remove her hat during divine worship? Since childhood I have wondered why the dear things showed such lack of reverence and got away with it. This would be appropriate for your Sunday column. W. M. B.

WOULD it not seem strange to be back in the days before Prohibition, when the manufacture and consumption of ales, wines, and liquors was not a citizen's first concern, nor the first topic of conversation in drawing-rooms?

LAUGHTER AS A TONIC.

A CORRESPONDENT recently asked: "Does laughing a great deal each day make one fat?" I concluded to go into the matter somewhat more deeply than was necessary for a brief answer.

The phrase "laugh and grow fat" is axiomatic. In part due to the wide acceptance of this axiom, the world expects a fat man to laugh. Mr. Taft was our fattest president, at least in recent years. He was also our merriest. He chuckled when the affairs of state bore heavily on him.

Whether he chuckled in the years when he was growing fat or not I do not know, but I suspect that the chuckling habit has been his for a long time, and that it antedated his obesity. It may have had something to do with causing it. However, when he was engaged in the gentle art of losing 100 or more pounds he chuckled just the same. We might say on the one hand that laughing made him grow thin or on the other that it made him grow fat.

Now, let's get down to cases. People get fat because the amount of food eaten, digested, and absorbed is in excess of the amount burned up in the day's work, including work, keeping warm, and growing in the case of children. The excess, composed in the main of carbohydrates, is converted into suitable material and stored in locations not much used. Most of it is stored as fat.

People differ in the rate at which they burn up fuel. A man doing hard muscular work burns up more fuel in a day. The man engaged in brain work burns less. A fidgety worrier is a larger consumer of fuel. Such people rarely fatten. People with too much thyroid are on edge all the time, and they seldom fatten. Those with too little burn little fuel. And if they eat in any degree heartily they accumulate fat.

The man who laughs a great deal indulges in considerable muscle work, for hearty laughter exercises the muscles of the face, the chest wall, the diaphragm, and the abdomen. Hearty laughter pounds the liver, squeezing it against the underlying structures. It is an excellent method of giving liver massage. It is understood that massaging the liver itself causes fuel to burn more completely and not to stop as the incomplete product fat.

In view of all this, what physiological basis is there for the axiom "laugh and grow fat"? It is this: Placid, good natured, happy people are generally not of the fidgety, worrying, anxious kind. The fidgety, worrying, anxious kind are too much on edge to accumulate fat.

CAUSES ARE PSYCHO-PHYSICAL.

R. E. G. writes: "What causes so many women to have nervous breakdown and melancholia during the change of life? Is it normal? If not, how can it be avoided?"

REPLY.

Part of it is due to profound physical changes. A chemical substance which has been circulating in their blood for the preceding forty years is no longer present. The absence of this substance is felt by some of the organs. A part of it is psychic. The woman recognizes that her childbearing period has passed and that she approaches the evening of life. To some women this is depressing. A part of it is the result of bad mental and social training. The woman who has been given to introspection and self-pity generally becomes considerably disturbed during the menopause. Her exaggerated emotionalism is likely to excite domestic discord. Her peculiar sensations alarm her. Her tendency to self-pity and introspection grows. All in all, there are many factors which may make for unhappiness. A combination of all these is responsible for the group of effects you mention. Some women cultivate a mental poise which carries them serenely through. Some keep their minds and bodies occupied. Some take lutein. Some do all three.

DELICATE SKINS SUFFER.

E. A. writes: "You mentioned bath itch. Will you please tell me what that is and its cure?"

REPLY.

Sensitive skins are apt to develop itching after considerable of the outer layer has been washed off. Washing with soap and warm water not only removes the grease and dirt but it carries away a good deal of the scarfskin. The itch which develops with thin skinned people after bathing is called bath itch. The remedy is to bathe in cold water or with a bland neutral soap or without soap or to cleanse the skin with face cream or other grease. Bran water or borax water is sometimes substituted for soap water.

PUBLIC HOSPITAL AVAILABLE.

J. A. writes: "I am suffering with tuberculosis. Can you advise me as to what to do, as I cannot afford a sanitarium?"

REPLY.

Most communities now have free sanitaria. Your community is well supplied.

MANY CAUSES OF HEADACHE.

J. A. writes: "1. What foods would you recommend for thin and poor blood?

"2. What causes headache? I never had a headache and my sister has one almost every day. I think it is rather strange, since we both work the same number of hours every day and eat almost the same food."

REPLY.

1. Whipple and Robscheit put good meat at the head of the list. Good vegetables, including spinach and greens, also stand high.

2. Unfortunately there are many causes of headache other than errors in diet and long hours of labor. Perhaps your sister has eyestrain and needs glasses or she may be constipated, may not get enough exercise, may be anemic, may have rheumatic headaches.

DELAY WEANING BABY.

M. D. M. writes: "My baby is just one week past 4 months old and weighs 14½ pounds. He hasn't gained in more than five weeks. He is a breast fed baby. Would you advise weaning him at this age or substituting one or two feedings of some other food? If so, what would you advise? He was a 10 pound baby at birth."

REPLY.

Your baby is healthy and large for his age. Do not wean him. Eat a little more fruit and vegetables and feed him a little more abundantly. See that he sucks at least one breast empty to the last drop at each nursing. Maybe he needs some of the creamy strippings which come at the last of the nursing.

CAUSE OF TAPEWORM.

A. B. writes: "1. Will you kindly tell me the cause of tapeworm, how serious it is, and how it is cured? 2. Did you ever hear of liquid extract of fern root for this disease?"

REPLY.

1. (a) Tapeworm infestation in the human is caused by eating meat containing the larval forms of tapeworm; (b) It is not serious; (c) By taking worm poisons after proper preparation by fasting and purging.

2. Extract of male fern is the staple tapeworm remedy.

TOO BIG A CROWD.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Is not a landlord obliged to exterminate roaches, bedbugs, and mice from an apartment. We have a small apartment, for which we pay $85 a month. We did not discover the vermin until we had moved in and the girl was scrubbing the woodwork. My mother is an invalid and is in bed all the time. I am heartsick over the condition. A. J. A.

An investigation has been made by this department and a notice was served on the owner to exterminate vermin and remove the paper from the wall of rear bedrooms and paint and lime wash these surfaces.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

STILL IN THE SERVICE.

Culver, Ind., Jan. 11.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—1. Can a married man, being in the service of the United States army, purchase his discharge?

2. Can a married man in the service of the United States army receive his discharge upon the ground of dependence?

3. Is the bill passed in regard to soldiers of the regular army wearing civilian clothes? A. B.

1. Not during war times, and we are still at war, technically, you know.

2. He may apply for discharge, giving as his reason for wishing discharge that he is needed to support his dependents. Whether he would be discharged or not would lie in the discretion of his superior officers.

3. We know of no such bill being passed. Regular army men are required to wear the U. S. army uniform.

REVISING DECREE.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man and wife were divorced and she was awarded the custody of the child through deliberate fabrication and exaggeration at the time of the decree. As he has been refused periodical visits to the child would he be justified in discontinuing payments for its support?

2. If it were proven that the decree had been obtained through fraud could it be set aside or revised? F. T. L.

1. He has no right to visit the child unless the decree gave him such right.

2. Theoretically, yes, but it is not likely that you could make sufficient proof.

BROKEN CURB.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[Friend of the People.]—I have written to the city three times about the condition of the sidewalk at Belmont avenue and Clark street. The walk is broken and I have seen several people fall on it. Can you take up the matter through your paper? A. R.

Repairs will be made at the above location early this spring as soon as we begin our vehicle tax activities.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

A CHANCE TO HELP.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I am hunting for a George Dolan, formerly of Jersey City, N. J., who when last heard from was located at 1728 South Michigan avenue, Chicago. He was a buddy of mine in the war and his mother in Jersey City has asked me to find him. Can you help me at all by putting in a little notice?

IRWIN A. HATTON.

Any one knowing the present whereabouts of George Dolan may communicate with Mr. Hatton at his Chicago address, 1920 North Fairfield avenue.

MINOR SIGNS CONTRACT.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—On June 23, 1920, I signed a contract for some magazines from a firm. The contract reads that no one under eligible age should sign it. I was only 16 then. They have notified me that if I do not pay within ten days they will sue me for the amount due. Can they hold me to the contract considering the fact that I was under age? E. G.

Your minority would be a defense to an action on the contract.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WITH A CLEAR CONSCIENCE.

Cicero, Jan. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have read your numerous articles quoting figures to show how the other fellow is profiteering in his business. Why not be fair and give the public some facts and figures regarding your own increased profits, created as all others were by war conditions, which, as in other cases, do not apply now?

You increased the price of your paper from 1 cent to 2 cents per copy. Is not this 100 per cent increase?

You increased your classified advertising rate 200 to 300 per cent, and no doubt did likewise with your display advertising rates. Is not this a rather strong case of profiteering, and does it not have considerable bearing on the selling price of merchandise and other commodities at this time, as the cost of advertising must be added to the selling price?

It seems THE TRIBUNE should do a little fussing around in their own back yard before trying to muss up the other fellow's game. FAIR PLAY.

FINE—IF YOU CAN ARRANGE IT WITH THE UNIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As the building of homes and flats seems to be the one important thing that will revive the present industrial stagnation, I would suggest more articles with a remedy. To start the ball a-rolling will offer the following:

Let some contractor advertise that he is equipped to erect "ready cut houses" on the owner's lot anywhere at a reasonable figure and that he will furnish said figure within forty-eight hours after presentation of the plans and specifications; also that the house will be ready for occupancy within a certain time.

This should give the owner a reasonable priced home and good security for a loan almost equal to the cost of the building. There is no doubt much vacant in the hands of would be home owners that could be improved on this thus relieving the shortage and giv much content to the owner.

Last week's six best circulators in the public library were:

- "Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
- "Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
- "Margot Asquith: An Autobiography."
- "Potterism," by Rose Macaulay.
- "Moon Calf," by Floyd Dell.
- "Steeplejack," by James G. Huneker.

"MEN AND STEEL" is Mary Heaton Vorse's contribution to the literature of the great steel strike—an economic labor which has already brought forth two books, one a sort of military history of the strike—the Foster book—and the other a documentary record of it—the Interchurch Report of the Steel Strike. Mrs. Vorse has supplied the interpretive volume of the trilogy.

There are a few statistics—quoted from the Interchurch Report—and there is a casual historical record of the progress of the strike and of the attitude of its general—Foster—but most of the volume is devoted to word pictures of the squalor of the steel towns, the poverty of the steel workers, the dragnets of the strike, the sickening hopelessness of the women with their memories of gay and peaceful fatherlands, and their dogged determination that, though one strike after another fail, eventually some strike will win and their sons will come into the powers of humankind.

Mrs. Vorse has a knack of writing what a city editor would call "high class sob stuff." She can make the reader feel that she is leashing her emotions by an uncompromising truth. With a spareness of words, and those gaunt ones, she can—to use another analogy—clarify, reduce to its elements, the muddy economic fact of men and steel by applying what seems a reagent of sheer truth.

As a matter of fact, "Men and Steel" is deeply emotional, at times almost prose poetry—but to any one who doesn't know the trick of this special kind of emotional writing it will appear stark, uncompromising fact. I do not say that it isn't founded on fact. It undoubtedly is. But I do say that Mrs. Vorse has made a literary interpretation of fact, a journalistic translation of the epic of steel.

As fact it is less impressive than its two companion books. As a poetic concept it cannot compare with Carl Sandburg's "Smoke and Steel." But as an emotional panorama of men—and women and children—and steel, it is in a class by itself.

"The Song Book of Quong Lee of Limehouse" is a small volume of delightful verse by Thomas Burke, the memory of whose "Limehouse Nights" remains undimmed in any one's mind who read those gruesome, beautiful tales of London's Chinatown. Quong Lee's songs are all written in a lilting free verse and celebrate such eternal things as beauty and such ephemeral ones as a cash register. They are a charming combination of ancient and modern. Witness:

> There are no flowers in West India Dock Road;
> Nothing but brick and stone and iron and spent air.
> But when rough brick and stone are a shrine for beauty,
> They become themselves beautiful.
> Perhaps if this person encloses within himself
> Beautiful thoughts and amiable intentions,
> His insignificant frame may acquire
> The noble outlines of that tenement house.

An ancient æsthetic principle a little drugged by Pollyanna, but, nonetheless, a pretty piece.

"Our Short Story Writers," by Blanche Colton Williams, is the fourth volume in the Moffat Yard Modern American Writers series, and unlike "The Women Who Make Our Novels," "The Men Who Make Our Novels," and "Our Poets of Today," is something more than a mere catch-all of facts. Dr. Williams does do a little critical writing about her characters as well as copy data out of the latest Who's Who.

She has chosen twenty short story writers, of whom I, for a carping one, find at most only seven writers who are out and out short storyists. The other thirteen are much better known as novelists—witness Edith Wharton, James Branch Cabell, Joseph Hergesheimer, et al.

It is unquestionably true that all of them have written memorable short stories, but in view of the other volumes of the series, which include biographies of practically all of them, their presence in a book on "Our Short Story Writers" is like going through the drudgery of a receiving line twice to shake hands with the guest of honor the second time.

Two books which are destined for the shelves of those who are interested in Ireland are "The Evolution of Sinn Fein," by Robert Mitchell Henry, and "The Irish Labor Movement," by W. P. Ryan.

They remind me of a bright saying of a child of neighbors of a friend of mine. She was invited to a party given for the children of a famous motion picture theater magnate. She was in their class in a private school, but she had never been at their house before, and she couldn't tell her mother anything about the kind of children who would be there, except that most of her class was invited and many other friends of the little birthday-ee. Her mother let her go, and was somewhat anxious when she returned to know what sort of party it had been.

"It was a be-yew-tiful party, mother," the child said, with her hands dripping full of favors.

"That's nice," said her mother. "What sort of little friends has Esther?"

"Oh, they're all lovely friends, mother, but I'm afraid most of them were pro-Jewish."

These two books are splendid volumes, but it must be admitted that they are pro-Irish.

A. Beverley Baxter is a name little known. It was entirely unknown to me until I read a volume of short stories of the war called "A Blower of Bubbles," stories with a charm and a dexterity and a sincerity exceedingly rare in these days of mechanical music and mechanical literature.

They were stories with something real in them, delicate things, lovely at times, always fine, neither brilliant nor powerful, but somehow rarely memorable. One of them, "Her Airy Prince," was the gayest little sad story imaginable.

Well, now there comes a novel, "The Parts Men Play," with those same qualities to it, a rare reality, deftness, charm—a novel which, written by a man whose name was well known, would sell into the fifties of thousands, despite the fact that it is, in part, a story of the war.

- "Gil Blas," by Le Sage, French.
- "Virgin Soil," by Turgenev, Russian.
- "The Betrothed," by Manzoni, Italian.

The anonymity which surrounded Knut Hamsun, the winner of this year's Nobel prize, is rivaled by the complete darkness which shrouded and still shrouds the winner of the Nobel prize last year. There aren't more than three readers of the Tabloid—I'd be willing to wager—who know even the man's name, and if there is one who has read widely in his works, may that one step forward and be rewarded with the gold plated doughnut.

Carl Spitteler. He lives quietly on the shore of Lake Luzerne and now, at the age of 75, takes more interest in his arbi-culture than in the transiencies of life. His works were all written in German, and only a few were ever translated into French, none into English. His best known poems are "Prometheus and Epithemus" and "Olympian Spring." Among his essays, "Truths Spoken in Jest" received the widest recognition.

As to the war—Herr Spitteler was an impassioned neutral, unceasing in his pleas that Switzerland take no sides in the struggle. For those sentiments he was snubbed literarily by the Germans, who had been first to recognize him. He is also said to have declared that Mr. Wilson's fourteen points were both noble and original, but that the world was not yet ripe for them.

"The Swiss poet and essayist," as he is called, has traveled extensively in Europe, but, unlike Knut Hamsun, he has never been to the United States nor had the distinction of collecting fares on a Chicago street car.

The London Athenæum is bitter about the Nobel awards for 1919 and 1920, and it quotes also three of the chief Swedish papers which agree that the prize should have gone to Thomas Hardy.

"Mr. Hardy would have given distinction to the Nobel prize, not the Nobel prize to Mr. Hardy. So long as neither Mr. Hardy nor M. Anatole France has received it, the Nobel prize and those who award it will remain purely parochial."

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

DRIFTING.

By Thomas Buchanan Read.

My soul today
Is far away,
Sailing the Vesuvian Bay;
My winged boat,
A bird afloat,
Swims round the purple peaks remote:—

Round purple peaks
It sails, and seeks
Blue inlets and their crystal creeks,
Where high rocks throw,
Through deeps below,
A duplicated golden glow.

Far, vague, and dim,
The mountains swim;
While on Vesuvius' misty brim
With outstretched hands
The gray smoke stands
O'erlooking the volcanic lands.

Here Ischia smiles
O'er liquid miles;
And yonder, bluest of the isles,
Calm Capri waits,
Her sapphire gates
Beguiling to her bright estates.

I heed not if
My rippling skiff
Float swift or slow from cliff to cliff;—
With dreamful eyes
My spirit lies
Under the walls of Paradise.

Under the walls
Where swells and falls
The bay's deep breast at intervals,
At peace I lie,
Blown softly by
A cloud upon this liquid sky.

The day so mild
Is Heaven's own child,
With earth and ocean reconciled;—
The airs I feel
Around me steal
Are murmuring to the murmuring keel.

Over the rail
My hand I trail
Within the shadow of the sail.
A joy intense,
The cooling sense
Glides down my drowsy indolence.

With dreamful eyes
My spirit lies
Where summer sings and never dies,—
O'erveiled with vines.
She glows and shines
Among her future oil and wines.

Her children hid,
The cliffs amid,
Are gamboling with the gamboling kid;
Or down the walls,
With tipsy calls,
Laugh on the rocks like waterfalls.

The Fisher's child
With tresses wild,
Unto the smooth, bright sand beguiled,
With glowing lips,
Sings as she skips,
Or gazes at the far-off ships.

Yon deep bark goes
Where Traffic blows,
From lands of sun to lands of snows;—
This happier one
Its course has run
From lands of snow to lands of sun.

O happy ship,
To rise and dip,
With the blue crystal at your lip!
O happy crew,
My heart with you
Sails, and sails, and sings anew!

No more, no more
The worldly shore
Upbraids me with its loud uproar!
With dreamful eyes
My spirit lies
Under the walls of Paradise!

Profit—with Safety!

Profit reasonably assured because a large volume of business will be available the moment organization of this company is completed; because the records of every insurance department in the country prove that this line of business is one of the greatest dividend payers known.

Safety doubly certain by reason of conservative management at the hands of experienced insurance men, and because of the safeguards which the laws of the nation and state throw around insurance investments.

This is the ideal combination to command that surplus of yours, or those savings you may have accumulated. It is the answer to that question which demands profit commensurate with safety.

The quality of such an investment is further substantiated by the fact that practically the only time when such securities may be purchased is when an amply financed and well managed fire insurance company is in process of organization. Search the reports of stock exchanges from day to day and you will find no sales of fire insurance company shares. Owners of such stock value it too highly to sell.

Note the Wonderful Record of Fire Insurance Investments

An ex-insurance commissioner of Illinois said in one of his reports a few years ago that "there is no other business of similar magnitude in the United States which enjoys such enormous profits as the fire insurance business."

In 1919 thirty-three companies (a list chosen at random from all the American companies) showed an average percentage of net income to capital of 195.7, after deducting all losses and expenses.

These companies paid cash dividends that year averaging 23 per cent, even counting large stock dividends declared by some of them!

Look at the official records and see the present book values of stock in established companies—most of them three, four and five dollars for every dollar invested; one of them with a book value fifteen times greater than par.

These are facts—provable in any public insurance department.

Our proposition calls for the sale of 100,000 shares in the Chicago Fire & Marine Insurance Company, at $25.00 per share.

We expect to do a profitable business the first year, a large amount of reinsurance being available from other companies right now. Besides reinsurance, in which we will first operate, we expect to do direct writing through agencies in the principal cities.

There is an actual demand for what we have to sell—a demand greater than existing facilities to take care of it. More insurance companies are needed to carry the normal business of the country and to absorb the insurance once written by German, Austrian, Bulgarian and Russian companies which are not now operating in this country.

All Investors—Officers, Directors, Incorporators, and YOU—Pay Exactly the Same

There are no favors — no concessions — no promotion deals in this proposition. There could not be, under the Illinois law. The president of this company, and every officer, director and incorporator, will pay just what you pay—$25.00 per share.

This offer is proving very popular among investors who demand safety along with profit. You should know all of the details, and we ask you to give us the privilege of sending you complete information.

Every statement made here is backed by the official records. The management of the company will be in the hands of men experienced in insurance and financial affairs. The incorporators whose names are given below have reputations to sustain, and we are justified in saying that the character of the proposition is to be judged by the character of men interested in it, as well as by the fact that every step in the process of organization is under the supervision of the insurance department of the state of Illinois.

You will find it convenient to use the coupon attached to this advertisement when writing for complete details. Your request for this means no obligation whatever on your part. Do this now.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CHICAGO TO HAVE 'SUPER-CHURCH,' COST $555,000

Worship, Amusement and Culture Under Roof.

A "super church," equipped for the recreational and cultured as well as spiritual needs of the congregation, is the innovation for which plans have just been completed by the Peoples church of Chicago.

The building, eight stories high, is to be constructed at a cost of approximately $500,000 on a site at 4100-14 Sheridan road, purchased from Earlham college, Richmond, Ind., for a reported $55,000, subject to $35,000. John C. Bowers, a member of the congregation and a realty dealer, negotiated the deal.

Auditorium for 3,500.

"It is something our people need," said the Rev. Preston Bradley, pastor of the church. "They will no longer have to brave outside dangers for amusements and culture when the building is completed."

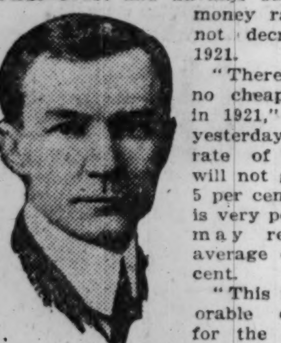
The plans, which were drawn by Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect, call for an auditorium to seat 3,500 persons. There also will be a community house within the structure, equipped with a complete library and reading rooms, a gymnasium and a swimming pool.

So that the new building will not be a complete expense to the congregation, provision for revenue has also been made. Five stories will be installed on the main floor, space for about forty offices will be provided on the second floor. The four upper stories will be utilized as a hotel.

Funds for the construction of the building have been pledged by members of the congregation. Work on the building is expected to be started in the early spring.

NO CHEAP MONEY IN 1921, SAYS M. A. TRAYLOR

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First Trust and Savings bank, says money rates will not decrease in 1921.



M. A. TRAYLOR.
[Moffett Photo.]

"There will be no cheap money in 1921," he said yesterday. "The rate of interest will not go below 5 per cent, and it is very possible it may reach an average of 6 per cent.

"This is a favorable condition for the financial world.

"Too sudden a decline in the rate of interest would mean a panic. But I do not look for this decline, and, what is more, I look to see the commodity of money become the great balancing factor in the financial and business worlds this year. The price of everything but money is falling fast.

"Every one is looking for a period of prosperity, but I do not believe we will ever see such another period of prosperity as we have in the last eighteen months.

"The drop in prices that we are witnessing this very day is gratifying, but I believe there should be a further drop. There will be no readjustment, however, in the prices of labor, food, and clothing until we see prices of other commodities adjusted."

He said he believed eventually prices would be 50 per cent higher than they were before 1914.

Traders' Building Sold; Buyer Plans Skyscraper

Plans for the construction of a twenty story office building to cost between $350,000 and $500,000 are being made by Louis M. Kardos, who has purchased from Max L. Teich and Carl Roessler the eight story Traders' building and leasehold interest at 305-09 South La Salle street.

The purchaser made a reported cash payment of $180,000 for the building, which is opposite the Board of Trade structure. Mr. Kardos was a resident of Berlin, Germany, until just before the beginning of the war, where he was engaged in the stock and bond business.

THE accompanying illustration is the drawing of Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect, for the new super-church structure which will be constructed soon by the People's Church of Chicago at 4100 Sheridan road at a cost of $500,000. The building will be eight stories high.

"BOUL GARFIELD" FLATS TO BECOME 100 ROOM HOTEL

The three story apartment building running one block deep from 371-73 East Garfield boulevard to 368-70 East Fifty-fifth place is to be remodeled into a 100 apartment hotel, according to plans announced yesterday by George Bloom, who has leased the property for twenty-five years and four months.

A total term rental of $97,300 will be paid to William S. Potter of Lafayette, Ind., an attorney, the owner. In addition, the lessee will pay all general and special taxes. Brown, Fox & Blumberg, attorneys, handled the deal.

The nineteen apartment structure at 4451-57 North Paulina street and 1623-27 Sunnyside avenue was sold to Meier and Minnie Hennes of Benton Harbor, Mich., for a reported cash consideration of $77,500. E. B. Woolf & Co. negotiated the deal for the sellers, Adolph and Charles Spielmann.

Another out of town purchaser is William Worth Collins of Fond du Lac, Wis., who bought the nine apartment building at 4015-17 Grand boulevard from Laura Simmons for a reported $45,000, subject to $32,000. A piece of Wisconsin farm land, free of incumbrance, was given as part payment. The E. E. Stults Realty company represented both parties.

A twenty-one flat building at the northwest corner of Prairie avenue and Fifty-seventh street, owned by Lucilla I. and Charles E. Hunt of Pasadena, Cal., was sold yesterday to Oscar C. Hagan of Chicago. J. A. Briggs, 1201 Title and Trust building, represented both parties.

F. B. Peabody Estate Gives Son Winnetka Residence

Final settlement of the estate of Francis B. Peabody was completed yesterday when a deed conveying the residence at 777 Bryant avenue, Winnetka, to Francis Peabody Butler was filed by Jessie Peabody Butler, mother of the recipient.

The ground comprises about one acre and is improved with a two story frame residence containing ten rooms, two sleeping porches, and glassed-in porch off the living room. Mr. Butler, who is associated with the firm of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., has lived in the house with his family for several years.

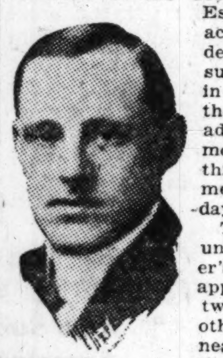
John J. Fischer handled the transaction.

U. S. Closes 2 Leases for Postoffice Substations

Ten year leases for postal stations at 2441 Armitage avenue and 833 West Roosevelt road were recorded yesterday. Rene Wahl is the lessor. The government will pay an annual rental of $3,600 for the Armitage avenue store and $4,800 for the Roosevelt road place, which includes the basement.

PAUL C. LOEBER, VALUATOR, WINS BOARD'S PRAISES

Resolutions of praise for Paul C. Loeber, chairman of the board of valuators of the Cook County Real Estate board, for achieving what is declared the most successful record in the history of the board, were adopted unanimously at the thirteenth annual meeting last Tuesday.



PAUL C. LOEBER.

The valuations under Mr. Loeber's direction were approximately twice those of any other year and nearly one-half of the total valuations made by the organization during the last ten years. Congratulations were also extended to the other members of the valuation board, Peter Foote, Charles M. Nichols, E. Sumner Walker, and James W. Hedenberg.

Robert E. L. Brooks, who assisted the committee, was given a vote of appreciation.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The building that William A. and Ida Burmeister purchased from George Brennan at 1326 Chase avenue is a residence and not a six apartment building, as inadvertently stated in THE TRIBUNE a few days ago.

The purchase price of Canal street property acquired by the Burlington railroad was given in Friday's TRIBUNE as $332,125. It should have read $456,025.

REALTOR NOTES

A. A. E. Greenlee, for several years west side manager for W. K. Young & Bros., has opened up shop for himself at 3900 Sheridan road. Associated with him is J. M. Galavan, who was also with the Young organization.

Frank A. Richards, formerly with the Britigan organization, is now handling general sales and central rents for William D. Kerfoot & Co.

ART EXPERT TO LECTURE.

G. Emile Kaltenbach of the Art institute will speak this evening in I. O. G. T. hall, 1041 Newport avenue, on "The Manner Changeth, But Art Endures; Some Points of View on the Method and Nature of Art." The lecture, illustrated by slides from the Art institute, is under the auspices of the Lake View committee of the National Swedish Workers' Educational league.

NEW CAFETERIA FOR NORTH SIDE; LEASE $100,000

Plans for the establishment of a new cafeteria at Broadway and Lawrence avenue were outlined yesterday in the announcement of the leasing of the one story building at 4734-38 North Racine avenue by Herman Shapiro for a ten year period at a term rental of $100,000.

The lessor of the building, which adjoins the Riviera theater, is William E. Dever. The property comprises 10,000 square feet of space and for a number of years has been used as a branch station of the Chicago public library.

More than $50,000 is to be expended by the lessee in the remodeling and equipment of the building for its new purpose. F. D. Marelli of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both sides in the transaction.

H. O. Stone Co. Employes Have Big Annual Dinner

More than fifty officials, department heads and salesmen attended the annual stag dinner given employés of H. O. Stone & Co. last Thursday evening at the Chicago Athletic association. H. F. Norcott, president of the firm, was the host and made the principal address.

Mr. Norcott gave credit to the workers for their efforts during the last year and presented figures which show the increased business done. He related the history of the firm and proudly drew attention to the fact that it now has eight distinctive departments.

Songs and "stunts" by various employés featured the evening.

Lithuanian Agency Buys $35,000 South Side Home

Stimulation of trade between Lithuania and the United States will be undertaken by a new company, the Vaisia Lithuanian Agency and Loan corporation, which has bought the three story property at 3259 South Halsted street for an indicated $35,000, subject to $15,000. The company will install a bank on the ground floor and have its offices above. Joseph J. Hertmanowic, attorney and secretary, handled the deal for the purchasers. The Chicago Title and Trust company was the seller.

Wolf and Harper Launch New Engineering Firm

Organization of the firm of Wolf & Harper, construction engineers, with offices at 7 West Madison street, was announced yesterday. The principals, Albert M. Wolf and Lawrence M. Harper, have been engaged in their profession separately in Chicago for a number of years.

MILWAUKEE AVE. HAS EIGHT BIG DEALS IN REALTY

3 Sales and 5 Leases Feature Week.

Deals in Milwaukee avenue property during the week indicate a stimulation of the realty business on the northwest side. Three important sales and five large leases were recorded.

Plans to move into larger quarters have been made by Maurice Niederman, head of the Niederman Furniture and Carpet company, who has purchased a four story brick building at 1459-61 Milwaukee avenue from Henry C. Gieseke for a reported $55,500. The deal was handled by A. Clyman & Co. The structure will be remodeled to suit the needs of a furniture store some time prior to 1923, when the present lease expires.

Valentine Factory Buys.

Extensive alterations of the four story brick building at 1643-45 Milwaukee avenue will be made by the George S. Carrington company, manufacturers of cards and valentines, who have just bought the building from the trustees of the Charles A. Zahn estate. The deal was handled by N. J. Reuland of the Noel State bank.

The three story building at 1472 Milwaukee avenue, 25x125, has been obtained by Fival Pritikin, grocer, for a reported $23,500, subject to $12,000, from Louis L. Isenberg. The purchaser plans an extension of his business. A. Clyman & Co. were the brokers.

Jeweler Young Leases.

H. E. Young, prominent northwest side jeweler, has leased the store at 1226 Milwaukee avenue from D. A. Schulte, Inc., for a term rental of $75,000. Mr. Schulte also leased a store to be constructed soon at 1224 Milwaukee avenue, for a term of years at $37,500. Mark Levy & Bros. handled both deals.

The Bright Light company, jobbers in electrical supplies, will extend their operations to the two story building at the northeast corner of Milwaukee and Oakley avenues, for five and one-half years at a rental of $40,000. The Burgmier book bindery has leased the second floor of the building at 1855-61 Milwaukee avenue from Leo A. Schwartz for five years at a term rental of $26,000. Maumann & Steuer represented all parties.

3,500,000 CHILDREN FACING STARVATION; $10 WILL SAVE ONE

Efforts to raise several thousand dollars for the Central Europe Relief fund, of which Herbert Hoover is the head, have been started by the Chicago Real Estate board. The board's committee, consisting of Russell Tyson, Perkins B. Bass, Charles D. Richards, and William Scott Bond, has sent out an appeal to every member of the board to contribute $10.

"Unless aid is given, 3,500,000 children in Europe will die of starvation before the next harvest," reads the appeal. "The question to consider is—'If we are able to help them, shall we let them die?' Ten dollars will save a child from starvation until the next harvest. Not much for a life—is it?"

The real estate men are urged to send in their contributions at once.

MILLERS URGE SHIPMENTS BY AMERICAN BOATS

Flour millers are coöperating with the United States shipping board. Millers' emergency defense committee, which represents the entire milling industry of the United States, at a meeting in Chicago yesterday, unanimously adopted resolutions urging millers to use American vessels in the ocean transportation of their product whenever possible. The committee has had numerous conferences with the shipping board in an effort to obtain a reduction in the differential in ocean freights for flour over wheat. The present rate is 5c more per 100 pounds on flour than wheat. The shipping board has expressed a desire to assist the millers and to develop port facilities by the installation of machinery for handling package freight, which will provide a safe, economical method for loading ships. This is also expected to aid the shipments of flour.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Some easing in money rates was discernible in Chicago last week. Commercial paper was in demand by outlying city and country banks and was quoted at 7¾@8 per cent, the latter figure being the previous minimum. Acceptances also are in demand and the rate has eased to 5¾@6 per cent.

R. G. Dun & Co. report 514 commercial failures last week, compared with 379 in the preceding week and 150 in the corresponding week last year. The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Jan. 12 by 201 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,025,696,000, compared with $1,154,846,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,025,696,000, compared with $1,175,035,000 reported by twenty-three clearing houses for the corresponding week last year.

Wall street advices say it is understood that within the next few days there will be a special meeting of the United States Food Products corporation directors, at which it is believed that several important changes will be made in the official roster.

Dissolution of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company and the coal company has been completed by the election of separate directors and officers of the latter corporation. F. M. Chase is its president and F. W. Wheaton vice president and general counsel.

Roosevelt State Bank to Start on $150,000 Home

The Roosevelt State bank has been organized with capital stock of $100,000 and surplus of $30,000 and is open for business in temporary quarters at 371 West Jackson boulevard. It will start construction this week on a $150,000 building at Grand boulevard and Thirty-fifth street for a permanent home. The officers are: President, Alexander Flower; vice president, Samuel F. Flower; cashier, Charles H. Irish; directors, Harold E. Leopold, Arthur A. Marer, Louis Schwartz, Edward Bertha and the officers.

The American State bank has increased its capital and surplus from $600,000 to $800,000. An additional cash dividend of 20 per cent, besides the 50 per cent stock dividend declared in December, has been distributed to the stockholders. Leo Kantrow has been elected assistant cashier of the Independence State bank.

New Treasury Issues Are Oversubscribed by 100%

Washington, Jan. 15.—Subscriptions aggregating more than $500,000,000 were received by the treasury, Secretary Houston announced tonight, for the combined issue of certificates of indebtedness for $250,000,000 offered for maturity on April 15 and Oct. 15. Oversubscription by 100 per cent of these issues, which call for a lower rate of interest than has been asked by the government during the last six months, was regarded by treasury officials as indicating some easing in the money situation.

RAILROAD NOTES

The grain movement into Chicago has increased since the first of the year, now averaging about 500 cars a day, as compared with 215 at the end of 1920. The present totals, however, are only about one-half of the normal figures. Coal is moving freely, now that sufficient cars are available, averaging about 1,400 cars daily, as compared with an 1,800 normal total. The average daily movement into the Chicago terminals is 10,937 cars for the week and out of the terminals 11,029, a decrease of nearly 10 per cent from the aggregate in December.

Car loadings on the railroads of the United States for week ended Jan. 1 were 596,905, against 745,448 in corresponding week of 1920 and 612,741 in corresponding period 1919.

The American Railway Express has announced an increase of 26 per cent in rates between United States and Canadian points.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the Western Passenger association in Chicago yesterday C. A. Cairns, passenger traffic manager of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was elected chairman for the ensuing year, succeeding L. M. Allen, vice president and passenger traffic manager of the Rock Island lines.

Payment of loans of $3,759,000 to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway company and $500,000 to the Wheeling and Lake Erie from the revolving fund created by the transportation act was announced yesterday by the treasury.

Now Is the Time to Buy Securities

THE new year offers many unparalleled opportunities for the shrewd and far-sighted investor. Never in recent times have the capital issues and obligations of the leading, sound, successful and time-proven enterprises of the United States been offered to yield such large returns. Present conditions, it is agreed, will not continue. Lower prices usher in an era of lower interest rates. The result will be lessened inducements to capital—the eventual return to the old rates of 4%, 5% and 6%. Exceptionally well secured obligations and capital issues of the best known and stablest of our large enterprises, if procured now, will give the purchaser the continued advantage of these higher than normal yields, when times again become normal.

Money, like anything else, is governed by the law of supply and demand. The peak of yield has now been reached. Rates will soon be lower. If you buy securities now you will continue to enjoy the maximum return on your money in years to come—7%, 8% and 9%—while others not so fortunate are receiving 4%, 5% and 6%.

Unusual Opportunities for Safe and Profitable Investment are to be had today through purchase of standard securities such as listed below. Now is the time for those who have earned and saved money to invest their funds so as to enjoy safety of principal, coupled with high dividend or interest yield in years to come.

Prompt Action Suggested

Already there has been a marked advance over last year's low levels. Further advances in market values of securities means lessened interest and dividend yields; the movement may be expected to continue as the year advances. Prompt action is, therefore, suggested.

For the convenience of investors we have prepared a new edition of our booklet—"Today's Unusual Opportunities for Safe and Profitable Investment." A careful analysis has been made of all securities listed. The edition is limited. Send for a copy today.

GRAIN PRICES HIT TOBOGGAN; WHEAT OFF 4C

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain prices were on the slide yesterday. Highest figures were made early and the close was at the lowest, showing losses of 4c on wheat, 3¼@3½c on corn, 2⅛@2⅝c on oats, 2⅝@4½c on rye, and 1⅝c on barley. A selling movement started at the opening and continued with little interruption. Buying support was limited, as the news on wheat was mixed and on corn and oats bearish. Oats sold at the lowest of the season and closed there.

Wheat prices finished the week ½c lower to the same as a week ago, the weakness being in March. Corn was off 3½@4¼c, and oats 2⅛@3c, while rye gained ⅞@2⅝c. Barley closed the same as a week ago. Pork was unchanged to 70c lower, lard 22½@27½c lower and short ribs 15c lower than a week ago.

Exporters Buy Wheat.

British, German and Swiss buyers took advantage of the break in wheat to obtain supplies, taking 1,400,000 bu, mostly at the gulf, at the same premiums as on Friday. This had no effect on the markets, notwithstanding heavy buying by houses with seaboard connections, as selling pressure, both here and in the southwest, was heavy. Around the inside prices offerings were absorbed on resting orders.

Foreign exchange is higher, making it better for placing export business. Argentine prices were up sharply at the last on wheat.

Corn Breaks Sharply.

Selling of a big line of corn credited to a St. Louis long and selling by local holders, hedgers and others, put a big load on the market, which forced prices off nearly 4c from the previous day's close and made a tame finish, with a bearish feeling.

The country movement is the heaviest of the season, but the decline in prices checked interior offerings at the last. The corn presumably went into good hands in addition to profit taking by shorts, as there were numerous resting orders from 71c down for May.

Oats were sold heavily by commission houses and had poor support. May dropped to the lowest of the season, 45¾c, and practically closed there.

New York exporters bought rye futures in a moderate way, and the market was influenced by the action of wheat. Cash rye sold at 18c over May on track. Barley was in limited request.

Provisions Close Lower.

Provisions closed at a low point, with lard off 20c, short ribs 17½c, and pork 35c. Traders sold in anticipation of a bearish stock report, which was confirmed by official figures, showing good increases in lard, and especially ribs. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreigners came into the market as free buyers of wheat as the result of the decline in futures. Kansas City reported 800,000 bu sold via the gulf to England and Germany, and Switzerland took 600,000 bu, including 80,000 bu for immediate shipment to Germany. There was also 300,000 bu corn sold in all positions.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 45,000 bu corn and 165,000 bu oats. Deliveries on January contracts were 10,000 bu corn.

Premiums on red winter wheat dropped 6c at Chicago, with No. 1 red at the last quoted around 28c over March. Hard winters sold at 12c over March for No. 1. Springs were weak and 2@4c lower. Receipts, 29 cars.

Demand for wheat in the southwest was slow, with red winter at St. Louis off 7@8c and hard 6c, while at Kansas City hard was 4@9c and red 3@6c lower. Omaha dropped 2@6c.

Cash corn was 1½c lower early, but closed weak, with some grades showing a 4c decline at the last. The basis was easier, with No. 4 yellow 7½@8½c under May and No. 4 white 8@8½c under, while No. 4 mixed was 8¼@9c under. Receipts, 229 cars. Outside markets were weak and 1½@5½c lower, with Omaha leading.

Offerings of cash oats were not large, but ample for requirements, with sample values 2@2½c lower. Receipts, 74 cars. Outside markets were 1½@3c lower.

CORN MOVEMENT INCREASES

Marketing of corn has increased and Chicago received 4,357,000 bu last week, an increase of 533,000 bu for the week, and 2,054,000 bu over last year. Oats increased 307,000 bu for the week and were 1,636,000 bu. The total receipts of grains were 775,000 bu more than the previous week, 1,261,000 bu above last year's, and 1,681,000 bu over the average. Primary receipts of all grains of 21,270,000 bu increased nearly 2,500,000 bu for the week, and almost 4,000,000 bu above last year's, being 3,500,000 bu in excess of the average.

LIVE STOCK ON FARMS

A decrease of 8,140,000 in the number of hogs on farms Jan. 1, or 11.4 per cent, as compared with last year was shown by the Snow-Bartlett-Frazier report. The decrease in the strictly hog growing states was 6,835,000, or 15 per cent, as compared with last year. Details as to the total number of hogs were not given. Based on the government returns the report suggested 64,769,000, against 72,909,000 last year. Cattle other than milch cows decreased 3,926,000, or 8.7 per cent, making the total 41,098,000. Cows decreased 690,000, or 2.9 per cent and are 23,057,000. Sheep decreased 3,635,000, or 7.7 per cent and the total is 44,980,000.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The grain trade was bearish last night because prices were down. Oats were the lowest of the season and had no friends. The market is carrying a line of hedges. More than 10,000,000 bu of hedges have been put on corn the last two weeks, which is having its effect. In wheat the situation is different, as exporters have taken the wheat about as fast as the country has sold it. Premiums are lower than a week ago and red wheat premiums were off 10c yesterday, with local millers buying on the break.

While domestic wheat c. i. f. English ports was quoted at equal to 6c under the price of Argentine early, at the close American wheat via the gulf was at a discount under the Argentine, due to the break in futures. Argentine corn at the last was about 8c per bu premium over American via Atlantic ports.

It is estimated by the Farmers' Grain Association of Kansas that reserves of wheat in that state on Jan. 1 were 58,045,000 bu, including 2,194,000 bu from the 1919 crop and 5,470,000 bu in mills and elevators. The total Kansas supply for the 1920-21 season, as officially reported, was 150,000,000 bu, indicating that since July 1 the state has marketed 92,000,000 bu.

Five of the leading railroads have ordered out inspection crews for work today, and it is expected receipts of corn at Chicago Monday will be between 900 and 1,000 cars. Around 200 cars of grain were received too late Saturday to be included in the day's inspection, but will be ready for the trade the first thing Monday morning.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—COPPER—Sales for export since Jan. 1 are estimated to exceed 20,000,000 lbs. Some small lots of spot copper are to be had for 13c, but producers generally ask 13⅛@13¼c for spot. February and March range 13¼@13½c. IRON—Unchanged.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Firmer at $4.85. ZINC—Slab quiet at $5.55.

NO U. S. WHEAT IS HIDDEN AWAY, MURRAY ASSERTS

The grain trade here was agitated yesterday by a report that 70,000,000 bu of wheat, formerly held by the United States Grain corporation and sold for export before that body's retirement from business on May 31, had not been included in the reports of the stocks carried over July 1 from the crop of 1919. Nat C. Murray of the statistical bureau of the department of agriculture denied any such statement had been made, in answer to a query sent by THE TRIBUNE. The Washington dispatch says:

"N. C. Murray has not confirmed the report that 70,000,000 bushels of wheat were carried over unreported July 1, and he does not believe it either likely or possible that any such amount of wheat was not reported. He says the department's estimates were based on stocks reported on farms, figures obtained through 50,000 crop reporters, and on replies from 10,000 of the 20,000 country mills and elevators to which questionnaires were sent. From the figures reported, ratios were worked out to give the total. The total of wheat thus estimated on farms and in country mills and elevators, plus 25,000,000 carried at points of large accumulation, he says, amounted to 109,000,000 bushels. The question of ownership was not involved, nor did it appear in the returns made to the department, which dealt only in amounts.

"He says telegrams he sent today in answer to queries in which he stated the department received no scheduled returns from the grain corporation, may have been misinterpreted. He meant that the grain corporation did not report separately and its stocks were not, therefore, apart from those reported, but, on the contrary, were undoubtedly included, as its stocks must have been contained in the mills and elevators or at the points of large accumulation accounted for in the reports made."

FINANCES KEEP ON IMPROVING, RESERVES SHOW

BY O. A. MATHER.

Further improvement in the financial condition of the country is reflected in the weekly statements of the federal reserve banks. The most encouraging features were rather sharp declines in loans and federal reserve note circulation, the one denoting that business and agriculture are continuing liquidation of their products and preparing for a new basis of activity, and the other reflecting deflation of currency commensurate with the lessening needs for a credit medium as the country's business descends to a lower stratum of prices.

The better banking situation was reflected last week in a perceptible easing in money rates. It must be recalled, however, that following the year-end settlement period there are usually a few weeks of ease, which in turn are followed by the seasonal spring demand for credit. Therefore it is not to be expected that the reserve system will continue indefinitely to show the same rate of improvement as in the last fortnight.

Loans Show Sharp Drop.

The consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks shows a drop in loans of $157,809,000, those on government obligations and those on commercial paper receding $79,929,000 and $77,880,000 respectively. Added to this was a decline in bills purchased in the market of $31,347,000, so that total bills on hand receded $189,156,000. With the decline in loans the member banks reduced their reserve account $39,918,000. Holdings of treasury certificates of indebtedness increased $27,900,000. Total earning assets receded $161,470,000. Federal reserve note circulation dropped $110,532,000. Gross deposits declined $74,438,000, including a decline in government deposits of $16,622,000. Gold reserves increased $5,172,000 and total reserves expanded $11,690,000.

The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined rose to 48.1 from 46.4 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, rose to 54.8 from 52.1 per cent.

New York Loans Decline.

The statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank showed a decline in loans of $66,692,957, those on government obligations and those on commercial paper receding $40,439,733 and $26,253,224 respectively. Bills purchased in the market declined $15,729,685, so that total bills receded $82,422,723. Holdings of treasury certificates of indebtedness increased $15,085,000, so that total earning assets receded $67,337,723. Gross deposits declined $26,210,653, including a drop of $9,400,280 in government deposits. Federal reserve note circulation receded $39,463,956. Gold reserves increased $8,-32,631 and total reserves increased $5,-99,988.

The ratio of total reserve to deposits and federal reserve note liabilities combined rose to 40.6 from 39 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserve to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, rose to 41.5 from 38.7 per cent.

Keep Up Improvement Here.

The statement of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank showed a continuation of recent improvements. Loans declined $20,645,175, those on government obligations and those on commercial paper receding $2,318,724 and $18,326,451 respectively. Bills purchased declined $2,699,-456, so that total bills receded $23,344,630. Holdings of treasury certificates increased $5,031,500, so that total earning assets declined $18,313,130. The member banks increased their reserve account $2,261,386. Federal reserve note circulation receded $17,600,995. Gross deposits declined $3,064,542, with government deposits about stationary. Gold reserves increased $5,345,144 and total reserves increased $6,415,971.

The ratio of reserve to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined rose to 45.1 from 43.5 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserve to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, rose to 49.4 from 47 per cent.

Less Favorable Here.

The New York clearing house banks made an unfavorable report, showing a deficit in legal reserves of $2,072,390, compared with an excess of $9,131,530 the preceding week. This decline of $11,-203,920 was entirely accounted for, however, by a decline of $17,361,000 in the member banks' reserve account at the Federal Reserve bank. Aggregate reserves receded $17,107,000. Loans declined $87,632,000. Demand deposits receded $47,304,000, but time deposits increased $7,522,000. Cash in vaults declined $8,975,000. United States deposits receded $16,962,000. ·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Trading in Chicago stocks was dull yesterday in the week-end session, but prices generally were firmer. The only exception was National Leather, which was rather freely sold as the result of the passing of its current dividend, but was well supported and could be termed only weak. The other packing house issues and the motor shares were fractionally higher, Briscoe Motor and Shaw gaining 1½ and a point, respectively. Public Service advanced 2 points and Middle West Utilities preferred gained a point. Deere preferred declind a point.

The New York Times.

New York, Jan. 15.—The movement of prices of the stock exchange today was again more or less irregular and net changes included declines as well as advances. But the prevalent tendency was upward under light trading and there were numerous gains of a point or more.

Despite numerous midweek reactions, the last week's recovery in active stocks has generally ranged from one to four points, while in bonds the comparison again presents a long list of advances, running in many issues as high as two to six points.

The foreign exchange market also shows many noteworthy recoveries for the week, with sterling in the lead. The rise in exchange in London of 10 cents during the last week and of 25 cents since December contrasts notably with the 25 cent decline of last January, and, taken with the similarly altered movement of the other exchanges, is pretty good evidence of the money market's underlying condition.

Factories that Fit

To see what the other fellow has done is often helpful in reaching a decision as to one's own course. This is especially true in industrial development.

So a little book we have just issued, which illustrates some forty plants we have designed, will prove of value to anyone who thinks of building a new factory or adding to his present one.

It's a picture book called "Factories that Fit," that may be had for the asking.

How long could you stand on your head?

(Law of Averages Series, No. 1)

NOT VERY LONG! You'd die of rush of blood to the head in a short time. That's because standing on your head isn't a normal way to be.

INTEREST RATES ON INVESTMENT SECURITIES can't stand on their heads very long either. That's abnormal also. Every once in a while they do, however; but because it's abnormal for sixes to become nines it isn't SAFE to speculate on how long the process will continue! And when you find a 6% investment standing on its head and masquerading as a 9% security, look carefully before you put your money into that security!

THE LAW OF AVERAGES evens things up about every so often. Then what happens? Six per cent becomes the prevailing rate—the 9% investments disappear—and with them may go the security of principal which should safeguard any investment. For bear in mind that no investment is a sound investment which is not absolutely safe AT ALL TIMES.

WHEN YOU BUY SECURITIES which offer a higher yield than is fixed by the law of averages you are ignoring the factor of safety of principal—the all-important consideration in wise investing.

NOT ALL 6% INVESTMENTS ARE SOUND. The House offering the securities must be considered—you must pick your House when buying investments. Then only can you be sure you are right. With H. O. Stone & Co. safety of principal is the first consideration—no other is so important—or ever will be. When you buy a First Mortgage Real Estate Bond from us you settle this matter of safety for good. For thirty-three years not one customer has ever lost a dollar through buying Bonds from H. O. Stone & Co. Ask us to send you further facts about our bonds—request —do you know how to beat the high cost of coal ?

One hundred and fifty thousand families get out of bed these sharp mornings and bless the Holland heating system for the comfortable, even warmth that permeates every room in the house.

They have proved to their own satisfaction—both of purse and of comfort—that it isn't what you pay for your coal, but what you save on your coal that counts most in this important item of household expense.

They have discovered that cozy homes are an economic certainty—not an exception—in Holland-heated houses.

In addition to consistent monthly savings of fuel and the certainty of daily comfort, these owners find that the Holland system requires a minimum of daily attention as compared to other heating systems of equal or greater cost.

For instance, its cone center rocking grate shakes so easily that even a ten-year-old child is capable of handling it.

A Basis of Inbuilt Goodness

The preference, of course, of these owners for the Holland system is based on the correct design and integrity of manufacture of the heating plant itself; but this preference is further confirmed and supported by the lasting service to the customer, which is completely controlled by the Holland Company through its factory-trained men at the Holland branch offices.

Do you remember the old cannon-ball stove in the small town railway station and how it held the heat (through the thickness of its metal) long after the fuel had ceased to function?

You will recognize this same solid heat-retaining construction in the Holland fuel-combustion chamber, as well as many exclusive features, such as the heavy one-piece castings, fitted together without screws or bolts, and the patented air-slots in the firepot that make for economical combustion.

The Holland burns any kind of coal and burns it cleanly and completely, without waste.

Installed to Fit Each Home

But, next to this inbuilt superiority, the greatest factor in the making of good will toward the Holland heating system is INSURED CORRECT INSTALLATION.

For every Holland furnace must exactly fit the particular home for which it is planned.

For no matter how good a furnace may be, unless the size is right, the pipes properly pitched and correct air circulation assured, it will not and can not provide dependable, comfortable service.

Therefore, Holland furnaces are never sold through dealers or installed by plumbers, tinners or hardware shops. They are distributed and erected direct to the user through Holland branches listed on this page.

Insured by Our Service Bond

Holland complete factory-to-user responsibility is made possible only by the service of Holland-trained heating experts, who plan and install every system to suit the character and the capacity of each individual home.

Only in this way can the factory assume responsibility to you for the correct, even distribution of adequate heat to every room in your house.

This responsibility actually means that we will not consider the job finished until you are perfectly satisfied that your heating equipment is sufficient for your needs.

And when each installation is completed, we furthermore sign a contract to replace, without labor or material charge, any part that may prove defective within five years.

Because the Holland furnace is made in our own foundries and installed by Holland-trained men through our branches, we can make this absolute guarantee of service.

You may also be glad to learn that in emergencies we can replace any furnace you may have in one day for practical heating purposes; although, of course, more time will be necessary to complete the work according to our ideals of efficient installation.

Call the Holland heating man for further proof as to how you can "make your house into a home," save coal, and get better heat for less money.

The Holland Man Will Be Glad to Help You

The Holland Service Man will be glad to give you helpful advice about any heating plant you may own. Call the Holland Man at your nearest branch. There is absolutely no obligation attached to this. Be assured that he will conscientiously aid you in getting better service out of the plant you now own. The Holland Company firmly believes that this broad, liberal policy of "making houses into homes" helps the warm air heating business in general and establishes invaluable good will toward Holland Service.

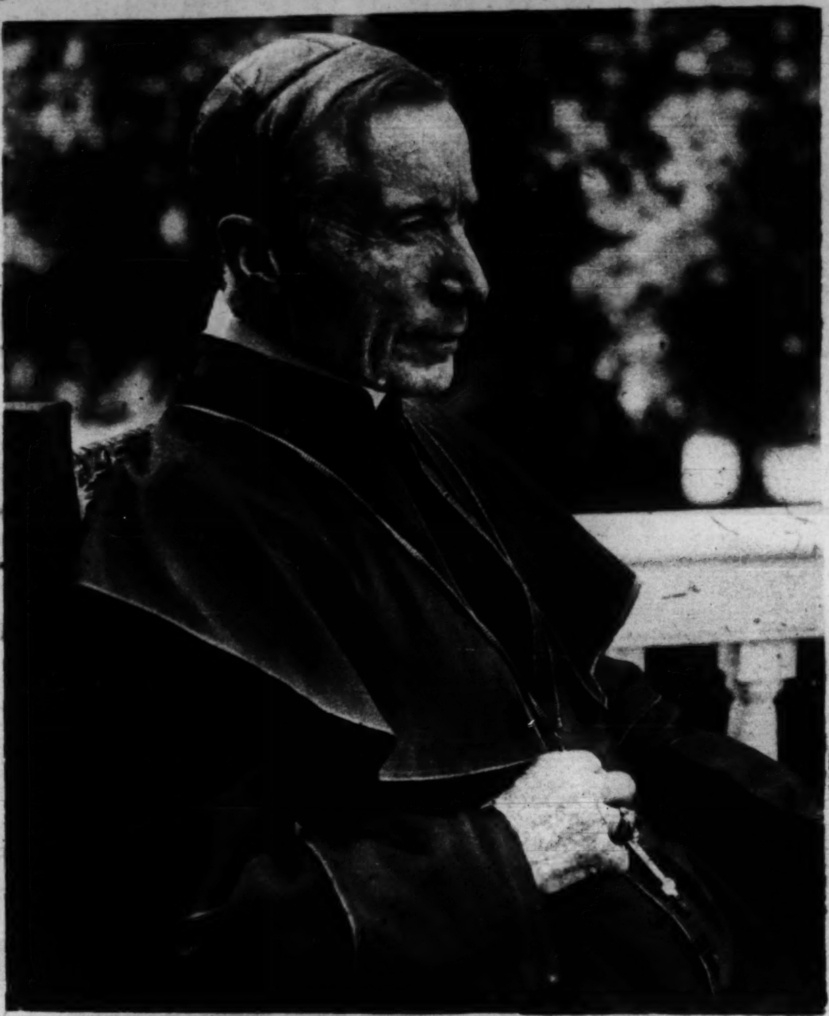
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

JANUARY 16, 1921



JAMES CARDINAL GIBBONS, the venerable archbishop of Baltimore, whose illness cast a shadow over the New Year celebrations among Catholics throughout America. Cardinal Gibbons, the highest Catholic dignitary in the United States, was born in Baltimore 86 years ago, entered the priesthood in 1861, became an archbishop in 1877, and was elevated to the cardinalate in 1886.

WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND—The Chinese minister to Japan, Mr. Hu Wei-teh, with his wife, in court costume just after presenting his credentials at Tokio. The post is not considered a desirable one by Chinese diplomats, since something is always happening to China for which the minister to Japan is blamed. Hence, perhaps, Mr. Wei-teh's expression.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

THE LAST WORD IN HOSPITAL SHIPS—The Relief, largest and best equipped vessel of its kind, has just been placed in commission at the Philadelphia navy yard. In addition to a bed capacity for 500 patients, it has an "out patient" department, similar to the dispensary and clinical service of a city hospital, to care for sailors not seriously ill, who can remain on their own ships and go to the Relief for treatment. The ship carries a crew and hospital staff of 350; has an etherizing room, consultation room, operating room, and bacteriological, chemical, and research laboratories, and is designed to care for a fleet with a personnel of about 30,000 men.

How You Can Have Beautifully Curly, Wavy Hair Like "Nature's Own"

If you have not tried the new way—the silmerine way—by all means do so. You'll never again use the ruinous heated iron. The curliness will appear so perfectly natural and the hair will be so beautifully lustrous, instead of dried and dull looking. Liquid Silmerine is neither sticky nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use. Entirely harmless, of course. Just get a bottle of Liquid Silmerine from your druggist, follow the simple directions, and your hair will have the loveliest curls and waves imaginable—and it will be easy to manage, no matter how you do it up.

To Remove Superfluous Hair, Roots and All!

The new way to remove disfiguring growths of superfluous hair, roots and all, will astonish and delight you. You never saw or heard of anything like it before. It is not a depilatory and not electrical. Just get a stick of Phelactine from your druggist and follow the easy directions at home. In a few seconds you have removed the offending hairs, roots and all. With your own eyes you see the roots come right out. Phelactine is absolutely harmless, non-poisonous, and perfectly odorless.

To Remove Bad Complexion

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, blotchy, or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary Mercolized Wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion—absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of Mercolized Wax, procurable at any drug store, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. It is used like cold cream.

This Removes Wrinkles

There's nothing so effective for erasing or preventing wrinkles, age marks, bagginess of cheeks and chin, as a simple, harmless solution made by dissolving an ounce of Powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Use the mixture daily for a while as a refreshing wash lotion. The quick results will surprise you. Even the first application produces marked improvement. The wrinkles are less in evidence and the face has a firm, "solid," comfortable feeling. Soon you will look considerably less than your age.

These splendid products are sold by Druggists and at Toilet Counters everywhere. If your dealer happens to be out of any of them, please ask him to get some from his wholesaler.

You can now have an old-time delicacy

ONCE more you can get old-fashioned plantation molasses—the long lost secret that made famous the gingerbread of old-time Southern cooks. Two Louisiana boys, spurred by their memories of old plantation goodies, decided to restore to the world the unforgetable flavor of their boyhood's delicacy—fresh crushed sugar cane molasses.

They named their molasses Brer Rabbit after the hero of their old plantation stories.

Today it is the most popular molasses in America. One taste and you know the difference its old-time flavor makes in cooking.

You can get Brer Rabbit at your grocer's, both the light molasses (gold label—for table use as well as for cooking) and the dark molasses (green label—a stronger flavor for cooking). Penick & Ford, Ltd., New Orleans.

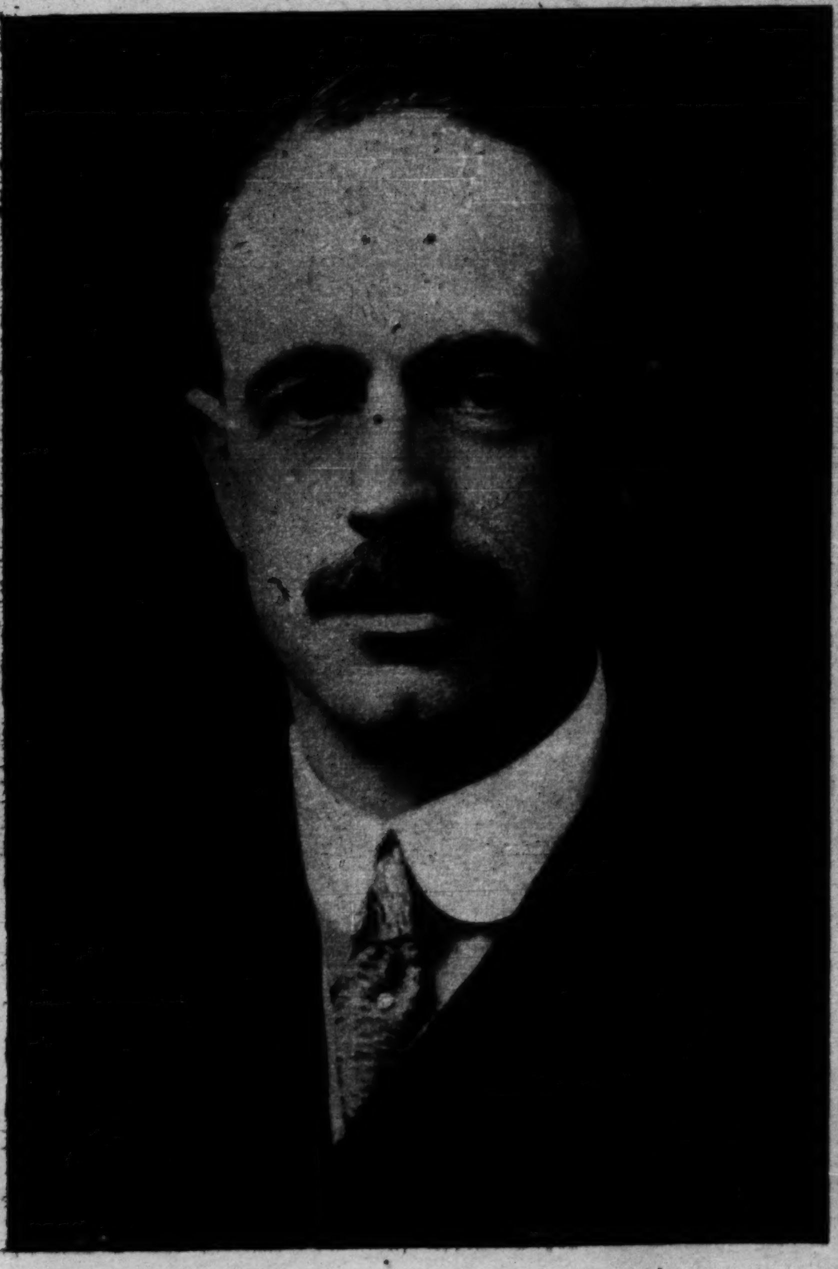
THE WILSON MEDAL, on sale at Geneva as an "official medal of the league." Americans in Switzerland don't like it. They question its artistic value and say it makes the president look more like a monster than a peacemaker.



SIR ERIC DRUMMOND, secretary general of the league, gets £5,000 a year in addition to his living expenses and a further allowance for "entertainment." Some think it's too much.

Watch Pyorrhea Go
With War's Wonder Antiseptic

Gum soreness and bleeding usually end in one week.
Destroys germ cause promptly. Free trial proves it.

Nothing like Kloria has ever been known before for sore, bleeding gums, pyorrhea, etc. Usually within one week all gum soreness and bleeding disappear and soon the shrunken gums tighten around the teeth again. Anyone can easily apply it, and the results are really amazing. Doubt it, if you must, but try it.

This is the same wonderful new antiseptic agent which healed war wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered germ infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test, it is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Apply it without fear to any skin disease, such as eczema or barber's itch, and notice how quickly the trouble fades away. Mark how it soothes soreness, irritation and itching. Note how promptly it destroys the pus infection of boils, carbuncles and sores; how it heals cuts and burns more rapidly than was ever known before. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria and watch the scalp itching disappear in a few applications, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. Try it for mouthwash and gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat—how clean the mouth feels. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

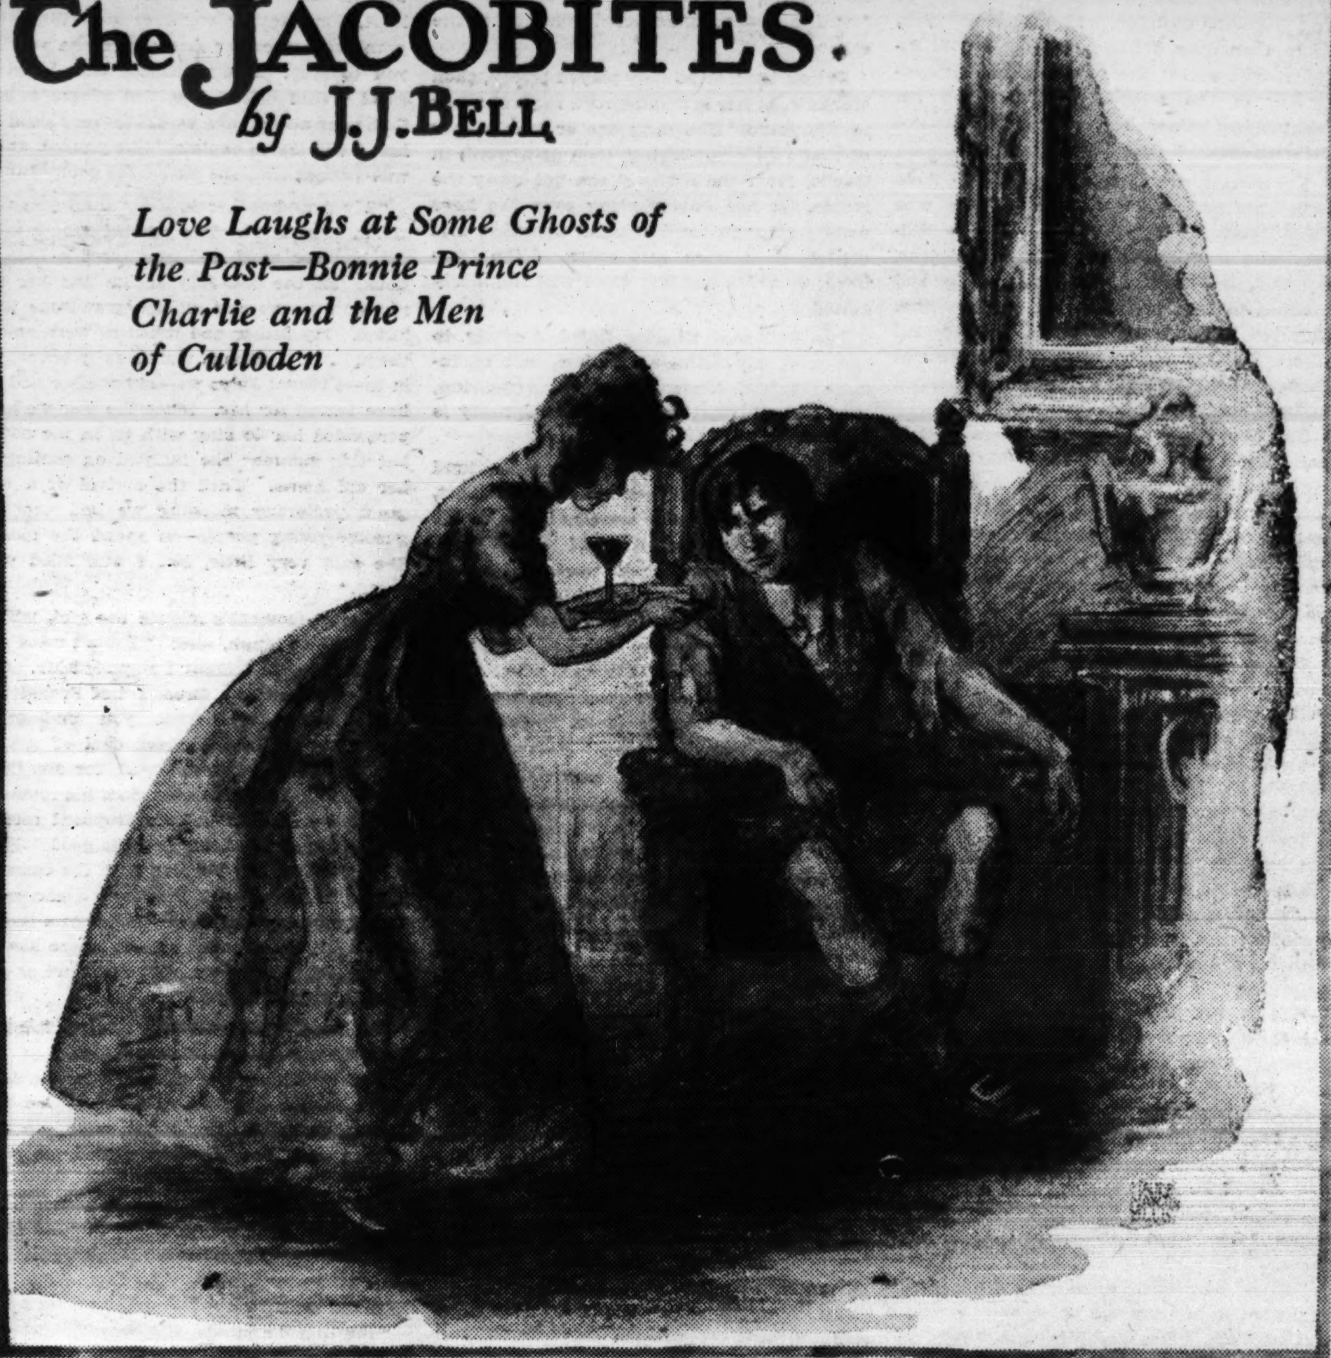
Love Laughs at Some Ghosts of the Past—Bonnie Prince Charlie and the Men of Culloden



"I can see the poor man, all rags and weariness, sitting there and being served with wine as I was served this afternoon. No one too fine to wait upon him!"

ON an afternoon in July two young men, clad in rough but smartly cut homespun, lay at ease on mountain heather and looked down on as wild a scene as nature provides in all the wild West Highlands of Scotland. A heat haze veiled the Isle of Skye and its lesser neighbors, but the sound and loch lying immediately beneath shimmered in the sunshine. It was a still world save for the hum of honey bees and the occasional screech of a sea bird down yonder on the frightful inhospital shore.

One of the young men had spread a map in front of him; the other, face almost touching the heather, eyes half closed, smoked his pipe in drowsy fashion. Said he of the map, lifting a lean, brown countenance:

"Cameron, it's exactly a hundred and seventy-five years since it all happened!"

"Since what happened?" muttered the smoker.

"Your Bonnie Prince Charlie. . . . . Wasn't it right down there that he made his landing?"

"And a year later, his departure—yes. But, my dear American, what do you suppose, or care, about Bonnie Prince Charlie?"

"I'm as interested as I'm ignorant. I suppose the craving has been aroused by the action of this scenery on my drop of Scottish blood."

"First time I've heard you boast of that, though, of course, the Murray in your name——"

"I'm not boasting now. I don't even suspect where the Murray originally came from. As for Prince Charlie, I'll be frank and confess that since my school days, when I read a story in which he figured, I had forgotten all about him till, on the ship coming over, I read a novel——"

"O, novels! If you want the truth read history."

"By the truth you mean the facts?"

"Well, aren't the facts the truth?"

"Never the whole truth. History chills me. It's only the shaking of dry bones. . . . However, I was going to say that the man who owned the novel—his name was Cameron, by the way—assured me that romance, so far as Scotland was concerned, died out with the last Jacobite rebellion——"

"Romance! It wasn't the sort of romance that bears looking into—if any romance does. Once more, my dear Murray Wilder, read history!"

Murray Wilder began to fold up the map, remarking: "You rather surprise me. For years, ever since you gave me the invitation, just before we parted in France, you have been writing about our proposed walk through the Prince Charlie country——"

"A convenient name for these parts. And isn't the scenery up to your expectations?"

"Scenery's all right. But somehow I thought of your making a sort of pious pilgrimage, and of myself listening all the time to 'tales of far off, old, unhappy things and battles long ago'—I don't guarantee my quotations."

The Scotsman laughed. "Without that map of yours, I should not know, at this moment, where I was. It had merely seemed an ideal route for a tramp, though the roads are rotten . . . Yes, yes, I'm a Cameron, and my forbears fought and bled lots for Charlie, saw their homes burned, their women and children starved, murdered—and, worse; and went more or less blithely to the scaffold for Charlie's sake; none, indeed, suffered more than the Camerons. But the clan blood lost the fever long since. You can't combine that sort of thing with successful commerce, as an American of all peoples must know."

"Of course, you have lived all your life in a city, Cameron——"

"True. Yet I should be seriously astonished to learn that any person in these parts would mildly resent your referring to the late Charles Edward Stuart as the Pretender, and not as the Prince. In fact, I should doubt whether he is ever referred to except by tourists with guidebooks. There used to be a Jacobite society, or something of the sort, but I should say it has petered out. . . . Well, shall we be getting along? It will take us all our time to reach our night's lodgings with less than savage appetite. Pity the mist has come down on the islands."

"Mist has come down on more things than them," murmured Wilder, getting up. "I haven't a powerful imagination, but to me these glens and mountains are already peopled by ghosts."

"Day after tomorrow," said his companion, "we shall go through Glenfinnan, and you will find a monument on the spot where the Jacobite standard was raised in 1745. It was there that Charles waited almost alone, doubtful of receiving support, till he heard the skirl of the pipes and saw Lochiel come over the hill with his 800 Camerons—the first of the clans to gather."

"Come!" cried Wilder, "you're proud of that, anyway!"

"It was a great adventure," Cameron grudgingly allowed, "but——"

"A rotten business proposition," finished the other dryly. "O, you Scots! And yet I believe you would do it again!"

"I'm afraid the prince would wait a while if he came again to Glenfinnan."

They crossed a stretch of moor and regained the road—a wearing one for the pedestrian, a test for the motorist and his car. Its surface was of loose gravel and treacherous little cobbles; it wound inland in tortuous fashion, rising and falling steeply.

They had covered a couple of miles or so when, briskly descending, Cameron staggered, stumbled, and all but fell, then drew himself up on one foot, supported by his stick.

"Hell!" he muttered between his teeth, "that was a wrench! Wilder, old man, I've got to sit down."

Wilder helped him to the roadside, and he sank upon a clump of heather, pale, sweating with pain.

After a while he attempted to hobble with his arm 'round his friend's shoulders; but the agony conquered determination, and he returned to the roadside.

"This is devilish awkward. It's a lonely road. We're miles from anywhere. I'm sorrier than I can say, Wilder," he said apologetically.

"Don't worry about me, my friend. My job is to find something on wheels—but, first, the nearest habitation." They had passed no dwelling since leaving the moor. "Wait a moment!"

Wilder scrambled up the hillside and scanned the glen which now seemed singularly desolate. But he came down looking hopeful.

"There's a house—a good sized one—in the hollow yonder. Shouldn't think it's more than a mile away. Sure to get help there. Shan't be long."

"Go cannily," said Cameron, "or you may repeat my folly. No need to take your knapsack."

A moment later Wilder was racing downhill. Cameron took out his knife and whetted it on a stone preparatory to cutting off his boot.

Wilder was breathing hard when he reached the house, a square one of gray stone, with a look of age, especially about the small paned windows. It stood near the road, its gardens were behind, and a glimpse informed Wilder that they were not neglected.

To his knock a housemaid opened the heavy door—a pretty creature, all shyness and native hospitality.

"Be pleased to come in," she said, while he was recovering his breath.

"Thank you," he said, "but—" and proceeded to explain his errand.

Before long it became apparent that she did not understand half his words. Possibly she had not sufficient English, also his speech may have puzzled her.

"Be pleased to come in," she said again, rosy, and just then, to Wilder's relief, the mistress of the house came upon the scene.

A very old lady she was, yet with health on the lined countenance under the white hair; and though walking with a stout ebony staff, she carried herself erect. Her greeting was dignified, but her voice had all the kindliness of the Highland born.

"Did I hear that there had been an accident, sir?"

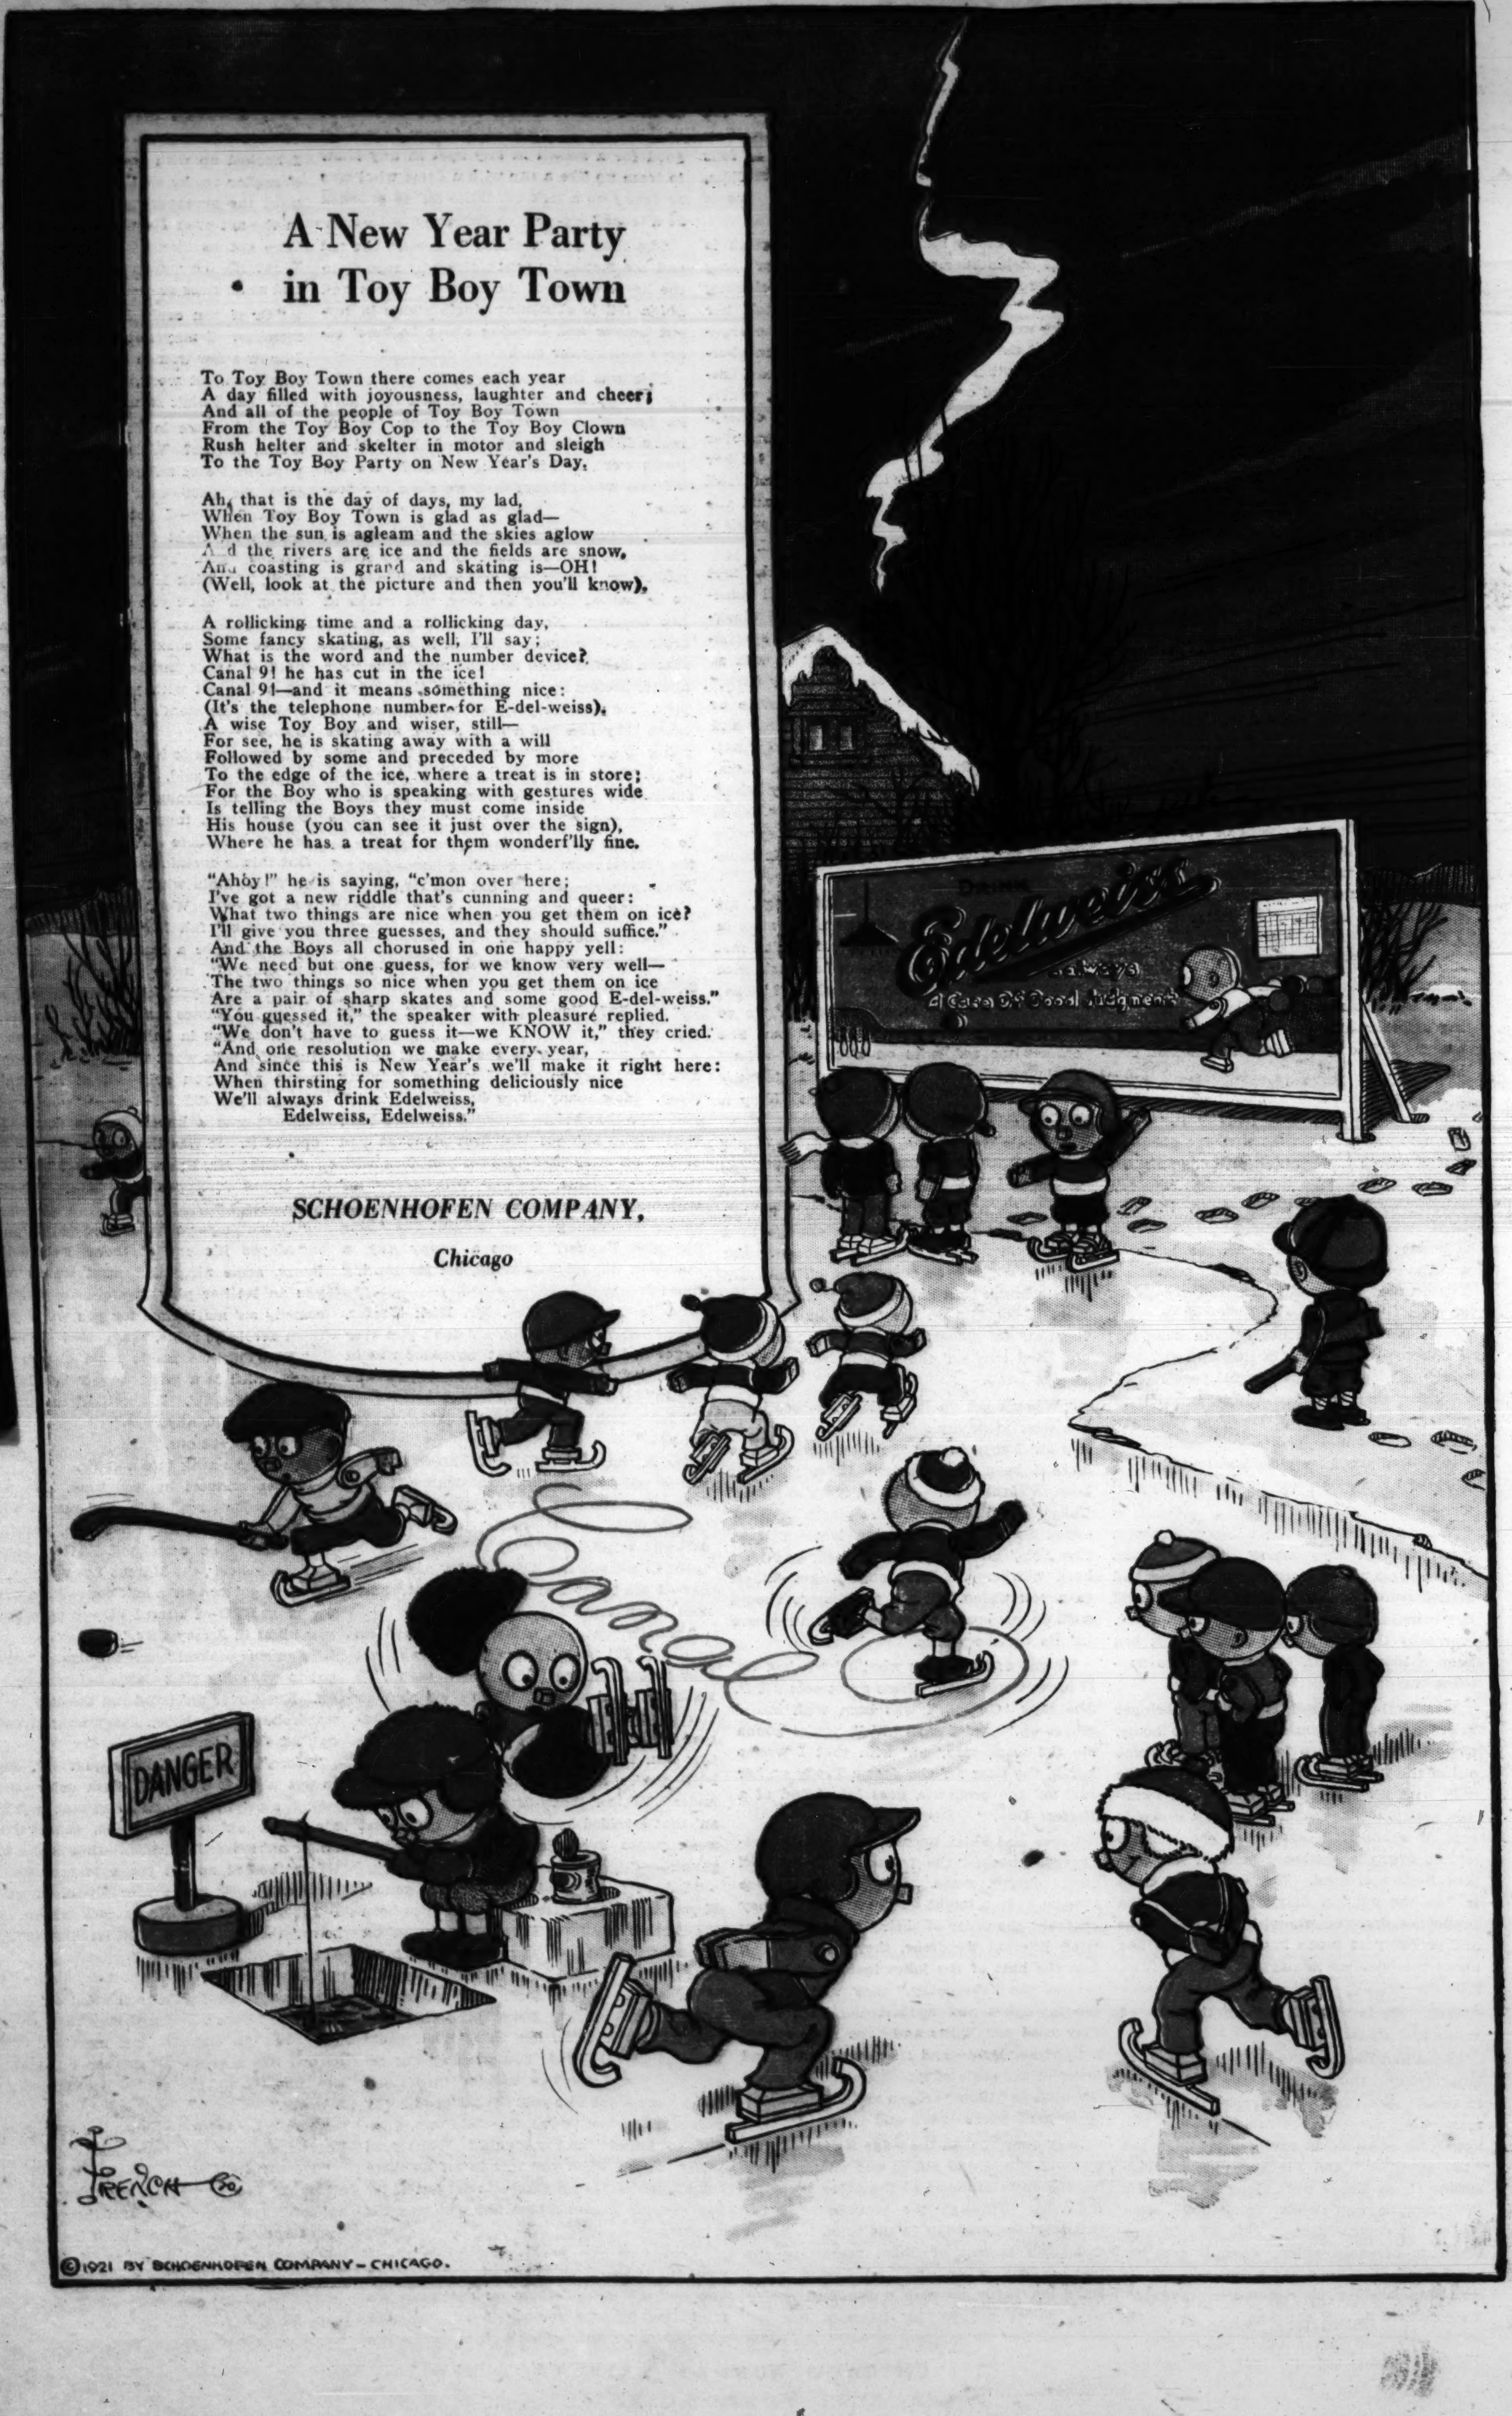
Briefly he informed her. Without comment she turned and called, "Marjorie!"

A girl, tall, dark, and, as Wilder noted, of proud bearing, stepped into the hall and joined them.

"This gentleman," said the old lady—and Wilder and the girl exchanged bows—"seeks assistance for his friend who has sprained, or perhaps broken, his ankle, on the road up yonder. Tell Ranald to bring round the carriage at once, and Flora to prepare a room. And now, sir," as the girl retired, "be pleased to enter and accept of some refreshment till the carriage is ready. It will take you to your friend sooner than you could go on foot."

Gently waving aside his apologies, she conducted him through a narrow hall into a handsome dining room, paneled with dark wood to the ceiling, the rather somber effect being scarcely mitigated by the gilt frames inclosing portraits of eighteenth century ladies and gentlemen, all wearing the tartan. A note of cheerfulness was supplied, however, by the coal and peat fire in the ancient grate.

She invited him to sit by the hearth in an armchair of Jacobean design, and passed to the sideboard. A similar chair stood opposite, and Wilder, with a sudden feeling of curiosity, noticed that its seat was closed by a cord of crimson silk stretching between



A New Year Party in Toy Boy Town

To Toy Boy Town there comes each year
A day filled with joyousness, laughter and cheer;
And all of the people of Toy Boy Town
From the Toy Boy Cop to the Toy Boy Clown
Rush helter and skelter in motor and sleigh
To the Toy Boy Party on New Year's Day.

Ah, that is the day of days, my lad,
When Toy Boy Town is glad as glad—
When the sun is agleam and the skies aglow
And the rivers are ice and the fields are snow,
And coasting is grand and skating is—OH!
(Well, look at the picture and then you'll know).

A rollicking time and a rollicking day,
Some fancy skating, as well, I'll say;
What is the word and the number device?
Canal 9! he has cut in the ice!
Canal 9!—and it means something nice:
(It's the telephone number for E-del-weiss).
A wise Toy Boy and wiser, still—
For see, he is skating away with a will
Followed by some and preceded by more
To the edge of the ice, where a treat is in store;
For the Boy who is speaking with gestures wide
Is telling the Boys they must come inside
His house (you can see it just over the sign),
Where he has a treat for them wonderf'lly fine.

"Ahoy!" he is saying, "c'mon over here;
I've got a new riddle that's cunning and queer:
What two things are nice when you get them on ice?
I'll give you three guesses, and they should suffice."
And the Boys all chorused in one happy yell:
"We need but one guess, for we know very well—
The two things so nice when you get them on ice
Are a pair of sharp skates and some good E-del-weiss."
"You guessed it," the speaker with pleasure replied.
"We don't have to guess it—we KNOW it," they cried.
"And one resolution we make every year,
And since this is New Year's we'll make it right here:
When thirsting for something deliciously nice
We'll always drink Edelweiss, Edelweiss, Edelweiss."

the arms. And while he wondered, his hostess came back to offer him, from a lovely old salver, cake and wine.

Wilder's sense of chivalry rebelled at such service being accorded by so old a lady to a complete stranger, but he had the wit to accept the situation. When he had helped himself, she set the salver on the table, drew out a chair, and seated herself. A second glass of wine had been poured, and with a courteous look at her guest she raised and touched it to her lips.

Presently it dawned on Wilder that she was not going to ask any questions, and he proceeded to tell something of the walking tour which had been interrupted, if not ended, in so unfortunate a fashion. While he was speaking, the girl came in and, making a sign that he should not stop, seated herself near the window.

"Well, well," said the old lady, when he paused, "it is a great pity indeed, but a good thing it happened so near to my home."

"You are too kind," stammered Wilder. "Cameron will be distressed at making so much disturbance in your house. If you would allow the carriage to take us back to——"

"Mr. Wilder," she said warmly, "I should have told you my name sooner. It is that of your friend, and a Cameron is ever welcome at the house of a Cameron." And raising her eyes to the large portrait above the fireplace, she touched once more the glass to her lips.

The girl spoke quietly:

"My grandmother meant to add that a Cameron's friend is welcome also."

"Surely, surely!" cried the hostess, turning back quickly to the guest. "Forgive an old woman's wandering wits. I have some very good friends in America."

Wilder had almost found courage to mention his Scottish blood, when the sound of wheels on gravel brought them to their feet.

"And you will take this in case your friend should feel faint," said Mrs. Cameron, putting a flask in his hand. "Ranald, my coachman, is a Red Cross man; he learned much in the war you can trust to his skill." At the outer door she added: "Assure your friend that he will be welcome and no trouble whatever." In her eagerness she pronounced it "whateffer."

There was something in her voice, in her eyes, that caused Wilder to stumble in his thanks.

"All young men," she said softly; "all young men. . . ." Her voice seemed to fail her. Her granddaughter gently took her arm and nodded to Wilder to get on board the carriage.

He was driven away, still wondering.

. . . .

A room on the ground floor had been made ready for the sufferer. A wheeled chair—the late Mr. Cameron had been an invalid in his old age—awaited him at the door. It was Cameron's turn to wonder and marvel.

His hostess refused to let him talk till his injury had received attention. Her reception of him could not have been kinder; nevertheless, her glance had been shrewd as he was borne up from the carriage. When he had been wheeled to his room, she gave a little sigh of satisfaction and whispered to Marjorie: "Both gentlemen!"

Ranald, middle aged and bearded, with the hand of a giant and the touch of a woman, diagnosed the injury as a severe sprain, and treated it accordingly.

Cameron refused to lie down and inquired as to the motor cars in the neighborhood.

Ranald smiled soothingly, saying softly: "Surely you will not be so hard, sir, on my leddy's Highland hospitality. But I will ask her."

He returned as one who, if he liked, could say: "I told you so!"

"My leddy's compliments, sir, and it would not be possible to get a car tonight; but if you have any messages to send, they can easily be sent; and if you are feeling able, my leddy will be glad to see you, and Mr. Wilder, now in the drawing room. Dinner will be served in five minutes."

The drawing room, as Wilder immediately noticed, was in direct contrast to the room in which he had already sat. White enamel, old Sheraton, gay chintz, and flowers were its prominent features. The hostess introduced Cameron to her granddaughter, remembered in time, and, with some amusement, introduced Wilder also.

Without delay she entered into conversation, and before dinner was announced had discovered a connection—a very remote one, indeed—between her family and Cameron's. But it sufficed to dispel the last feeling of awkwardness on Cameron's part, and on Wilder's, too.

On moving to the dining room Mrs. Cameron requested that the invalid chair should be placed at the head of the table, and took pains to see that the injured limb was properly supported. Consequently Wilder found himself facing the girl, and also the portrait over the fireplace. At first the portrait merely supplied a refuge for his gaze when he realized, as he did, often enough, that it had lingered over long on the features of Miss Marjorie Cameron, but later it began to attract him for its own sake. It represented a young man, tall, lithe, debonair, with chestnut hair and dark eyes, garbed elegantly in full Highland costume, with rapier and dirk. More than once Wilder was tempted to inquire concerning the original, but remembrance of the solemnity with which his hostess had raised her eyes to the picture deterred him.

The repast was simple, though the table appointments were exquisite. There was some wonderful old silver intriguing to Wilder, who was something of a connoisseur. A broad, shallow bowl filled with water and floating pansies occupied the center. Mrs. Cameron related the histories of several pieces, but her conversation was mainly of those parts of America which she had visited in her younger days.

The hour passed pleasantly. Doubtless it had its moments wherein the oddness of the situation occurred to one or other of the four people; but in such an atmosphere of unaffected hospitality was no growth for embarrassment. Only towards the close of the meal did Cameron, who, naturally, had appeared more at home than his friend, seem at a loss—and it was but momentary.

The hostess had not yet partaken of wine, but now she raised her glass of claret and, with a gravely inquiring glance at Cameron, extended her hand unwaveringly till it was athwart the bowl of water and pansies. Withdrawing it without haste, she drank. Marjorie repeated the act as though it were a matter of course. And then Cameron, as solmenly, if not as naturally, followed suit, while Wilder tried not to stare.

The ladies rose. From the sideboard Marjorie fetched a silver casket containing cigarets and a little spirit lamp and matches on a tray.

"Flora will bring you coffee," said the hostess, "and you must not hurry over your smoke. Come to the drawing room when you are ready. We can have bridge, if you like, and perhaps my granddaughter will sing to us."

Wilder, holding the door as they passed out, looked for an instant into the dark eyes of the girl, and saw something very like an appeal. Somewhat dazed he returned to the table.

"Bring your chair nearer," said Cameron, and went on in a lowered voice, and not without emotion. "The unthinkable is before us! Old man, I take back what I said on the moor this afternoon."

"I'm afraid I'm mystified," murmured his friend.

"What?—didn't you understand?" Cameron made a gesture in the direction of the silver bowl. "They drank to the King Over The Water! We are in the house of a veritable Jacobite!"

After a pause, "but you did the same, Cameron."

Cameron smiled dryly. "A mad moment, for which I shall probably be sorry. For I know nothing about modern Jacobitism—wouldn't have credited its existence an hour ago—and now I shall have to play a part, or hurt that dear old lady, our hostess."

"I begin to understand," said Wilder. "But who is that?" pointing to the portrait.

"Didn't you guess? Why, that is the young Chevalier—Charles Edward Stuart—Prince, or Pretender, as you choose to call him. Highly idealized, no doubt."

"You can't be sure of that," said Wilder quickly. "Why grudge the man his good looks?"

"Whose eyes are you looking through?" Cameron asked teasingly. "It is you who ought to have passed your glass over the water! But, seriously, I feel myself in a hole."

"We shall be gone tomorrow," Wilder returned with an inward sigh. "At any rate, I do not imagine that you will be expected to join in the silent toast at breakfast."

"The night is not over. I detest bridge, but I hope the game may start the moment we adjourn to the drawing room. If not, I must trust to you to keep our hostess in close conversation."

"H'm!" muttered Wilder, thinking of a pair of dark eyes. "By the way," he went on, "have you noticed that arm chair—the one with the cord?"

"Another relic of the '45, I should say. Charles was much in this district both before and after the downfall at Culloden. But as a fugitive he did not, if I remember my history, enter a decent house."

"O, history! What does history know about it? I can see the poor man, all rags and weariness, sitting there and being served with wine as I was served this afternoon. No one too fine to wait upon him!"

"Well, I dare say stranger things have happened in this house," Cameron allowed, and just then the maid came in with the coffee.

Cameron need not have dreaded the hours in the drawing room. There was nothing in the hostess' manner to suggest that she had found in him an unexpected adherent to the cause.

For an hour or so they played bridge, then Marjorie, at her grandmother's request, went to the piano. She sang one or two ballads of that year's publishing, then at a word, in Gaelic, from the old lady she put away the music, let her fingers stray over the keys awhile through old Highland melodies, and drifted, as it were, into songs of the Jacobites, to which her low voice was singularly suited.

The illstarred Charles failed dismally to win back his father's kingdom, but he inspired songs, tender, uplifting, despairing, that shall be sung when the last dynasty is dust.

As he listened Wilder began to understand certain things. He was no sentimentalist, and some of the songs were not new to his ears, though till now he had sensed from them nothing save pathetic words and haunting tunes, but tonight his soul caught a faint echo from the souls of those who had made and sung them, of those who had hearkened and wept, so many years ago, when thousands of men—and women, too—lived and died for man—or was it an idea?—called Charlie.

Wilder's imagination, which had but groped on the moor that afternoon, now began to grasp the tragedy, mystery, and romance of these mountains, lochs, and glens. He glanced at Cameron, who was attentive but seemingly quite unaffected by the song. Less openly he glanced at his hostess, and saw a tear on her cheek. For himself, he would have been the last to deny that he was moved.

The singing ended, and Mrs. Cameron rose to retire. Very kindly she bade good night to her guests, saying to Cameron:

"Ranald will help you when you are ready for bed. You must not put your foot down."

Marjorie went with her, but returned to say: "I hope you will both sleep well, though I have ventured to put some books in your rooms. Good night again."

"Cameron," said Wilder, "those old songs fairly got me. I'm half a Jacobite already."

"She has an excellent voice," said Cameron, without enthusiasm.

Ranald came in with decanter and glasses, also the cigaret casket.

"My leddy's compliments, and will you be pleased to smoke?"

"Thanks," said Cameron. "We shan't keep you waiting more than half an hour."

"At your pleasure, sir," said the man, going out.

Wilder threw himself back with a sigh. "I shall be sorry to go tomorrow."

"I daresay!" growled his friend.

"Is your ankle hurting badly?"

Cameron's reply was inaudible. It would seem that something was annoying him besides his ankle.

At the end of fifteen minutes they rang for Ranald.

Later Cameron looked at the three volumes under the lamp on the table at his bedside.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed cheerfully. "They're all about the Pret—Prince, I should say. Very thoughtful of Miss Cameron. . . . I think I'll read a bit. Yes, thanks; everything I want. Good night, old man. Sorry to have spoiled your tour."

Wilder's room was upstairs. The first thing he did on entering was to inspect the three volumes at his bedside. All were novels of the day. For a moment he felt hurt.

"Am I to be an outsider?" Then came another thought. "Did she see through Cameron at dinner?"

Absently he opened the book and saw "Marjorie Cameron" boldly written on the fly leaf. And if that was all he read that night, he read it very thoroughly.

. . . .

While being assisted by his friend to dress Cameron confessed that he had read till 3 in the morning.

"I fancy I could pass a pretty stiff examination on Prince Charlie—not that I'm likely to be put to the test before we leave."

"If you are, wouldn't it be better to tell the truth? It was a very natural impulse on your part, and she would understand and forgive."

"But it would hurt her."

"Not so badly now as a blunder later on,"

"There isn't going to be any 'later on,'" said Cameron, and added under his breath, "Worse luck!"

He was wrong, however.

At breakfast Marjorie offered her grandmother's apologies and occupied the place of hostess. Toward the end of the meal she became grave, and suddenly said:

"I hope you will not think me forward or interfering if I suggest that you stay here till Mr. Cameron's ankle is recovered, or, at least, for another week or so. When my grandmother comes downstairs she will ask you to stay. Don't imagine that your refusal would offend her, but please believe that your acceptance would be very good for her. I will try to explain." She paused, and it was evident that she strove for composure.

"My grandmother is older than you may think. She is 84. The present month holds for her the most sad and terrible associations. In the last July of the war her two remaining sons and all her grandsons were killed. My father and brothers were among them. . . . She is wonderfully brave, but in these recent Julys we—my mother and I—have feared for her. Since the war we have persuaded her to stay with us in the south, but this summer she insisted on coming to her old home. Until the arrival of a telegram yesterday morning we had expected guests—young people—to spend the month. She said very little, but I was filled with dread."

After a moment's silence the girl, with a broken little laugh, said: "I don't mind telling you that last night I regarded Mr. Cameron's accident as a direct act of Providence! . . . And now I hope you understand me. There is not a great deal of amusement to offer you here. Still, for Mr. Cameron it might not be worse than his rooms in the city, to which he has proposed returning, and for Mr. Wilder there is good fishing, if he cares for it. For you both the carriage is always there—and I believe a car could be got for long distances—and, if you are interested, there are many spots where history or tradition has been made, which we should be proud to show you."

She rose. "So will you, please, think it over till my grandmother appears?"

With a friendly nod she made for the door, which Wilder sprang to open, while Cameron silently cursed his inability to be of service.

Then the two friends looked at each other.

"Well?" growled Cameron at last.

Wilder regarded him kindly. "Old man, it's for you to decide. I'm your guest on this tour, you know."

"Nice tour!"

"I'm in your hands, any way."

"We're both in the hands of . . . ."

"Mrs. Cameron."

"I wonder!" said Cameron, caustically.

"At all events, if we stay," said Wilder, with some extra color, "Mrs. Cameron will be to some extent in our hands, and it will be up to us to devote ourselves to her."

"I wonder just what you mean by that, Wilder."

For an instant Wilder looked like resenting the other's tone. Then he stepped forward and laid a hand on Cameron's shoulder, saying:

"Whatever happens, my friend, we are not going to quarrel, are we?"

"Lord forgive me for a sulky rotter!" said Cameron, catching at the kindly hand. "Besides, a girl like her is almost certain to be engaged already—though I noticed this morning that she doesn't wear a ring."

Wilder refrained from mentioning that he had noticed the same the previous evening.

"So you will accept the invitation?" he said.

Cameron's smile was grimly humorous. "Having spoiled your walking tour, what else can I do? . . . Would you mind going to the bedroom and fetching me the 'History of the Rebellion'?"

. . . .

The period of feminine susceptibility to masculine attentions may be said to extend between the ages of 1 and 100, and these two young men did not spare themselves, or each other, in their devotion to their hostess. Marjorie looked on with tender amusement, tempered at times with apprehensions regarding Cameron, who, she feared, might overdo his part, for now the old lady and he held frequent conversations on the subject so near to her heart. While Marjorie did not blame Cameron for his joining in the "over the water" ceremony, she wished he had refrained; he had enough native kindliness, she believed, to have made any pretense unnecessary.

As for Wilder, when he began to finger the many Jacobite books in the library she frankly begged him to desist.

"As an American, Mr. Wilder, you could

"Meet the Wife"

By Jack Lait

MATRIMONY in its various manifestations has been the subject of literary expression from exit quips to academic essays. There are established matrimonial plots which may be classified as standard goods on the selective shelves—the preoccupied husband and the lonesome wife; the extravagant wife and the slaving husband; the infatuation which cannot develop into wholesome love; the snake in the garden, male or female; the old man and the young bride; the ditto bride and ditto husband, reversed; the sale of beauty for money; mixed marriages; faithful wife who has grown old while her husband has grown only gay; the infernal triangle: wife, husband, and boarder; true wife dazzled by well dressed home breaker; true husband dizzled by serpentine vamp; wife who begins to grow stout or otherwise resembles her mother; too much mother-in-law; unreasonable jealousy; unbearable monotony; falling into meshes of fast set; he's a brute; she's a shrew—O, the catalog could run ad infinitum.

But the troubadours have sung few lays about the problems that confront and the conditions that surround the vaudeville, musical comedy, burlesque, répertoire, circus, and road show "teams" which "book double," program themselves by their maiden names, and live abnormal existences off and on the boards.

May it please the court, about 90 per cent of the man-and-woman combinations on the stage are man and wife; they either marry because they are partners or become partners because they marry, and that is the reason that so many vaudeville combinations make mismates in matrimony and matrimony makes so many mismates in vaudeville.

Vaudeville being made in New York and marriage being made in heaven, and New York being so remote from heaven, the booking agencies and the celestial agencies frequently fail to synchronize on bisexual combinations.

The stage creates unholy and unnatural conditions for any who live by it. When this becomes complicated with the complexities of married life, which presents so many problems even when lived in most sane and thoroughly normal surroundings, the quotient is trouble. It is almost impossible to separate the performer from the helpmeet or the teammate from the homemate. There never yet were two actors, regardless of what their relations or their sex or sexes, who could work together long in harmony; it seldom happens that a husband and wife can join in continuous blissful peace. Contemplate, then, two performers, working together, living together, traveling together, financial partners, professional allies, yet rivals—and you have plots within plots complicated by counterplots under the happiest conditions.

Wherever the sexes meet they will marry. And wherever they marry they will start the struggle which is usually fought out and settled before the dawn rises on the second day—the battle for the survival of the fitter. Normally the man should win. But it has been a long time in this world since anything was normal.

Where the husband is the breadbringer and the wife the gentle angel of the home, there is yet a chance for marriage to come out of the wrestling match right side up, the man with his foot upon the sweetie's swanlike neck and her features set in a seraphic cast of submission—save that she has the left lid over the starboard lamp or her dimpled fingers crossed. But where the bride is "in the act," a fifty-fifty factor in the producing department, with her own ideas and probably as much knowledge as he has about the business management of the firm, it's—it's—

Well, this is what it was in the case of Eppes and Shixa:

Eppes had been a light tumbler in an acrobatic troupe, the one who climbs upon or is lifted upon the shoulders of the larger man, who poses and strains below. The upper one is called in professional lingo the "top mounter," and his base the "understander." As Eppes went along he learned a few tumbles, cartwheels, handstands, somersaults, and contortions. This led him into acrobatic dancing, which, when it gets beyond incidentals to a balancing and lifting turn, is classified as "eccentric dancing." An eccentric dancer can "go on" where no acrobat dares to even stand in the wings.

Miss Shixa started as per Hoyle, in the chorus of a burlesque show. In this type of entertainment the girls are "played up," the comics frequently singling them out, calling them downstage center, using them as foils or amusement—not always innocent. Thus, if a girl has any "personality," it has a chance to blossom and be seen.

Miss Shixa had plenty of gall, which is the stepmother of talent, and it wasn't long before she was playing "bits" and classing as a "principal." Her colleagues told her she was clever, and she gave them no argument thereon. She looked about, found herself another girl similarly situated and disposed, and organized a "sister" act, which, with her brash methods and slum conception of comedy and comeliness, got her over on the "small time" sufficiently to let her call herself a vaudeville "artist" and rail at the critics of the trade papers and the managers, who could not entirely appreciate her because she was "over their head."

On a bill in a third rate burg she met Eppes, who was working with a tall comedian, acting as "straight man" and throwing in his laborious stepping as a "specialty." That pair was doing about as well as Shixa and Mimi, "Those Personality Girls," and it was no crime against vaudeville or society when Eppes "blew" his partner and Shixa gave hers the air to join in holy matrimony and double up as Eppes and Shixa, "The Dancing Demon and the Merry Miss." They threw together a routine of gags, songs of the moment, crude but flashy steps—let Eppes describe it, as he told it to his booking agent:

"We come on center in full stage, me from left an' her from right, an' we meet in the entrance an' I say to her 'Haven't I met you somewheres?' an' she comes back with 'Maybe. Have you been somewheres?' That gets us downstage on the laugh an' we go into our crossfire stuff an' it wows 'em. She crosses me an' exits on a cracker what'll panic any house—I say 'What'll stop my nose from bleedin'?' an' she says 'Keep it out o' other people's business.'

"That's the set cue for my dance, an' I go into 'Wonderful Eyes.' My new steps is gonna knock 'em stiff. I do a crab an' to a double whirl an' into a neckspin an' off. That brings on the wife in a change to a school kid an' she tears off a comedy nut number with three surefire catch lines an' does a break to a knockabout soft shoe routine. I come in on her third bow after the hand an' she clowns while I do my real stuff, the hard cuts an' the whirlin' feet, pivotin' on one hand.

"When I get up I'm stallin' for breath an' she tries to do my steps an' takes a comedy flop an' I says to her 'So, you wanna know have I been somewheres. Have you ever been to Kankakee?'—that is, if we're playin' Chicago, or Yonkers if we're playin' N' York—you know, the joke town local—an' she says 'No,' an' I says 'Well, then, you ain't been nowheres.' That oughta get us off to a convulsion. If we go like we should we'll do our boxin' glove finish for an encore an' tie up the works.

"I got a closin' gag what'll burn 'em up. It always was good. Some great acts use it. She says 'Go on, I was born with boxin' gloves on.' An' I says 'Well, you're gonna die the same way,' an' with that I wallop her in the puss an' she does a Brody on her ear, an' the orchestra goes into 'End of a Perfect Day.'"

Eppes and Shixa opened, and, true to prediction, knocked the patrons stiff—so stiff they couldn't move their hands. There seemed to be a blight on the new act. They switched the order of their "material," they tried different wardrobe, they tried making him the butt of the jokes instead of her to reverse the "sympathy," they worked near the footlights and against the back drop, they used full lights and then none except a front spotlight—and they went lower and lower in the scale of impolite vaudeville and found their "time" broken and irregular and their joint purse lower and lower.

They quarreled on the stage for the amusement of the stupid public and off the stage for the entertainment of the other turns on the bills. Through the strawboard partitions of the dressing rooms could be heard the shrill lament of Shixa regretting the luckless day when she had busted up a cinch act to tie up with a spavined hoofer what never got by till he seen her an' grabbed her for a meal ticket; the while Eppes obliged with an obbligato to the effect that a dame made a tramp out o' Samson, so what chance did an ordinary bird have? hadn't he split with his partner in an act good for a smash in any spot in any show to team up like a sap with a dame what was as funny as a sick headache an' as graceful as a truck?

The theatrical weeklies "panned" the act and the managers sent unfriendly reports to the home offices of the circuits. Eppes and Shixa fell to skimming single nights in tryout houses and hanging about bookers' offices waiting for emergency "fill-ins."

This was the condition as the end of the spring approached. Summer was breathing its first alarming breaths at them. Eppes met a fellow stepper who asked him what his plans were, and he said: "Plans? We lay off two weeks more, then we close our season."

No home on Long Island for the summer. No second hand roadster. No money orders mailed on during the season to themselves to be cashed during the long, cold weeks of hot weather. No diamonds. No chance to crow to other layers-off about the wonderful season behind them and the marvelous year ahead, booked solid, consec'tive time, pay or play. No summer "dates" to turn down because they had had a hard season and were going to get their rest no matter how much dough them managers pushed at 'em. No funds. No peace. No prospects. No use.

Eppes and Shixa made the closing "jump" to New York and sat facing one another in the poorest room of a boarding house just off Times square—just off, but still off.

"Well?" asked Eppes.

"Well?" asked Shixa.

"Well—we made a sweet mess out of a great season," said Eppes.

"We did? You did. If it hadn't o' been for——"

"Are you gonna do that old act again? I've heard that so often I could do it in my sleep. How many times have I got to tell you over that before I turned my boob bean that night an' got the first slant at you comin' off after that hoakum you done with that other dame, drippin' with gravy an' eatin' up the applause what youse got by pullin' everything excep' singin' the 'Star Spangled Banner,' I was a happy guy, a knockout hit, all booked up, set for the big time?"

"O is that so? Well, Mr. Hick Hoofer, lemme tell you one thing, an' don't you ever forget it: before that night my name was in lights, an' three New York managers was fightin' for me."

"Yeh—each one wanted the other two to get you."

"O is that so? Well, Mr. Hick Hoofer, lemme tell you one thing, an' don't you ever forget it: We was drawin' down UDD an' bookin' direct, when you an' that other acrobat was beggin' for PVD an' slippin' your agent to get you the secon' half o' nex' week. Say—I ain't knocked around in show business seven years for——"

"What's that you called me? Who's an acrobat? I'll paste you so far it'll take you four seconds to get there an' a month to walk back. Acrobat? Wasn't we next to closin' on every bill? Wasn't we gettin' feature billin'? Didn't we headline all over the Gus Sun time? An' when you say we got PVD you're a—we turned down anything under UVD, an' that's fifty more'n what you an' that lopsided hyena ever got in the best week youse ever played. An' if you're gonna——"

"I don't know what it is, but I'm gonna. If you're against it, I'm for it. You've been the curse o' my life. Here I was, in an' on my way for the top, every critic an' manager sayin' 'Shixa is got personality, an' when a girl is got looks an' personality nothin' can hold her down; well, they was wrong. I found the one thing what could hold me down. You! You wrecked my act an' you jawed me into doublin' up with a small time shine like you. What good is my personality when you're standin' there, grinnin' an' jimmin' up my laughs? What good is my dancin' when you tear in an' do them tumbles an' make an acrobatic act out of it? Say—Sophie Tucker'd be a flop with you for a partner."

"O—I held you back! Well, I've heard some funny gag lines, but that's a cuckoo. If you pulled a few o' them on the stage we might get by as a comedy act. I dragged you down? Me! That's rich—say, it's wealthy. Why, I'll leave it to any manager f'm coast to coast——"

"Yeh. From the coast o' Ioway to the coast o' Newbraska—that was your map till I hooked up with you an' you got a couple o' reg'lar weeks on the stren'th o' my name until the managers got jerry that with you in the act even I couldn't hammer it acrost. Who got us closed in Terry Haute? Huh? What did the manager say? He said if you had some class or ——"

"Or if you could do anything—say, I remember. I may not be classy to you, but I know a few women in the business—women what can get work, too—what got a queer idea that I ain't so unclassy, an'——"

"O it's come to that, has it? You know a few, do you? Well—you pack your brown paper suit case an' go to 'em—go on—blow—take the gate—beat it. You know a few women? Say—I got a notion to bend this here chair right over your dome, you bum Romeo you. You know a few women, huh? Well, Mr. Hick Hoofer, lemme tell you one thing, an' don't you ever forget it: I know a few pe'formers with reppatations an' with names what count in bookin' offices, an' I kind o' guess maybe they'd like to frame up a two act with yours truly on what remains o' the mem'ries o' the way I went over before I——"

Eppes came to his feet.

"Say," he said, "this is the blowoff. I've took all I'm gonna take f'm you. I've stood this a whole, tough season lettin' you crab me on the stage an' ride me off the stage. But this is curtains. You know a few brother White Rats what'd love to hitch up with you, do you? Well, they're welcome to you—go on an' fall in with them bush league hams. It'll be a load offen me, an' if they can carry it, more power to 'em. An' if I ever ketch you lookin' crost-eyed at one of 'em I'll bounce a stage brace on his cocoa an' break you in half, you disappointed picture of a split week vamp, you. I hope you mean what you said—all of it. An' if I thought you did I'd—I'd——"

There was a knock on the door. Eppes opened it. It was the landlady.

"You're Mr. Eppes, ain't you?"

"Eppes of Eppes an' Shixa. What's on your chest?"

"O, nothing—you're wanted at the 'phone."

"Maybe it's one o' them Palace headliners, some nifty doll what wants to beg you to let her play straight to your trick comedy an' mark time for you while you do them acrobatic spins," suggested Shixa.

"Who 'phones me is none o' your business—which is a great way o' keepin' your nose f'm bleedin'. It's nothin' to you—you ain't in the act, anyways."

And he swept out.

Mrs. Eppes sank into a chair.

In two minutes he was back. He flung open the door, rushed in, and ran to where he faced her. She lifted her eyes, wearily.

"O baby!" he exclaimed. "Gee, hon—it was Rosenstock, the Marcus Loew agent. He says he's got two an' a half consec'tive weeks for us at BVD—I mean PVD—to open t'morrow night in Jersey City."

"Suff'rin snakes!" cried Shixa. "An' I got to wash my pink tights before I can go on. Rush over an' hand me the key to the wardrobe trunk, babe, everything depends on that closin' number an'——"

"Here," he said. "Got a quarter? I got to get a stick o' No. 11 flesh color or I'll look like a dyin' babboon when that spot hits me. Two an' a half weeks, consec'tive—Miller an' Frizzell cancelled—they had a battle an' busted up the team, so they had to have a snappy two act to fill in. I guess I was crazy writin' Rosenstock where we'd be an' that we might have some open time at the right figger, huh?"

"You sure hit it that time, babe. So, Miller an' Frizzell went to the mat an' busted up, huh? Didn't I always say they would? They had no right to get married. They battled like a couple o' strange bulldogs all the time. Well, I'm glad of it. It gives us a break."

"You bet. An' we'll knock 'em cold. Them Loew audiences is the berries."

"I'll say we'll panic 'em—we got the act, all right. Lemme tell you one thing, sweetie, an' don't you ever forget it: if they ever give Eppes and Shixa the right spot on the right bill before the right crowd we'll do a Babe Ruth. Slip us a li'l kiss for luck."

"If one 'll get us luck—here's a flock o' luck, baby!"

never become a sincere sympathizer. Listen, by all means, to my grandmother's stories, but leave books alone. My grandmother will tell your intimate things not written in books. She was a Cameron before she married my grandfather. Indeed, in our branch a Cameron has always married a Cameron. You can therefore believe that a great number of her ancestors fought for Charlie. One of her great-grandfathers was his close friend; another was executed at Carlisle. And when she was little more than an infant she was taken to see a very old relative, who, as a little boy, had run errands for the prince and he held her in his arms and blessed her, and gave her a silver cup which the prince had used. Why, she could hardly help being a Jacobite—could she?"

Said Wilder diffidently: "And does she look for a restoration of the Stuarts some day? There is a king, or a queen, somewhere, isn't there?"

"Yes; but only a descendant of Charles I. —Charles Edward left no heir. But I doubt whether my grandmother thinks much of the future; she speaks only of the past. I dare say you find something rather absurd about it all."

Wilder shook his head. "There are many religions in the world, Miss Cameron, but not one I would smile at. And the world of today could do very well with the loyalty to ideals and courage and endurance which your people simply squandered on their belief a hundred and seventy-five years ago.

The fine eyes regarded him approvingly, and, encouraged, he said:

"So you must not doubt my sympathy. I am an American, but I have Scottish blood in me, though I'm ashamed to confess that——"

Their talk was here interrupted, a circumstance which was to prove unfortunate before long.

The days passed quickly and pleasantly. Mrs. Cameron insisted on personally conducting the excursions and picnics till Wilder feared for her overexerting herself. But Marjorie assured him to the contrary, saying:

"It is keeping her from brooding. She sleeps the whole night long and has none of the awful visions of former Julys. As I have already said, you and Mr. Cameron were sent by Providence."

"Both of us?" asked Cameron, with a laugh that did not ring true. "Wilder didn't twist an ankle."

"No, but he found the house—and as I heard you tell my grandmother, Mr. Cameron, you would have looked for help in the opposite direction."

"He has his generous moments," said Wilder good humoredly.

In the evenings they played bridge, listened to tales of their hostess, and finished with music. It having come out that Wilder was a fair pianist, he played the girl's accompaniments, which Cameron openly called taking an unfair advantage.

At the end of a fortnight Cameron was able to hobble about with a stick, and he and Wilder held consultations concerning the danger of outstaying one's welcome. But Mrs. Cameron would not hear of their going—unless they were tired of the place.

"Your holiday has still ten days to run," she said. "You are saving a young girl from having a dull time and making an old women friends with life again."

A few evenings later, in the drawing room, she produced an old autograph book. A glance through would have disclosed many highly distinguished names. She handed it to Cameron, who presently entered his signature.

"Donald!" she read aloud; "and a very good name! It is high time I knew what your mothers call you! Now, Mr. Wilder, if you please!"

He wrote and returned the book.

"John Murray Wilder," she read—and her face seemed to stiffen. She closed the book and laid it aside.

"My friend," said Cameron, "has been too modest to mention his Scottish blood."

"Yes, yes. Murray is Scottish, but not Highland. If you will give me your arm, Mr. Cameron, I should like to show you something in the other room."

As the door closed the dismayed Wilder looked at Marjorie.

"I'm so sorry," she said. "If only I had known. Perhaps I ought to have let you read the books after all."

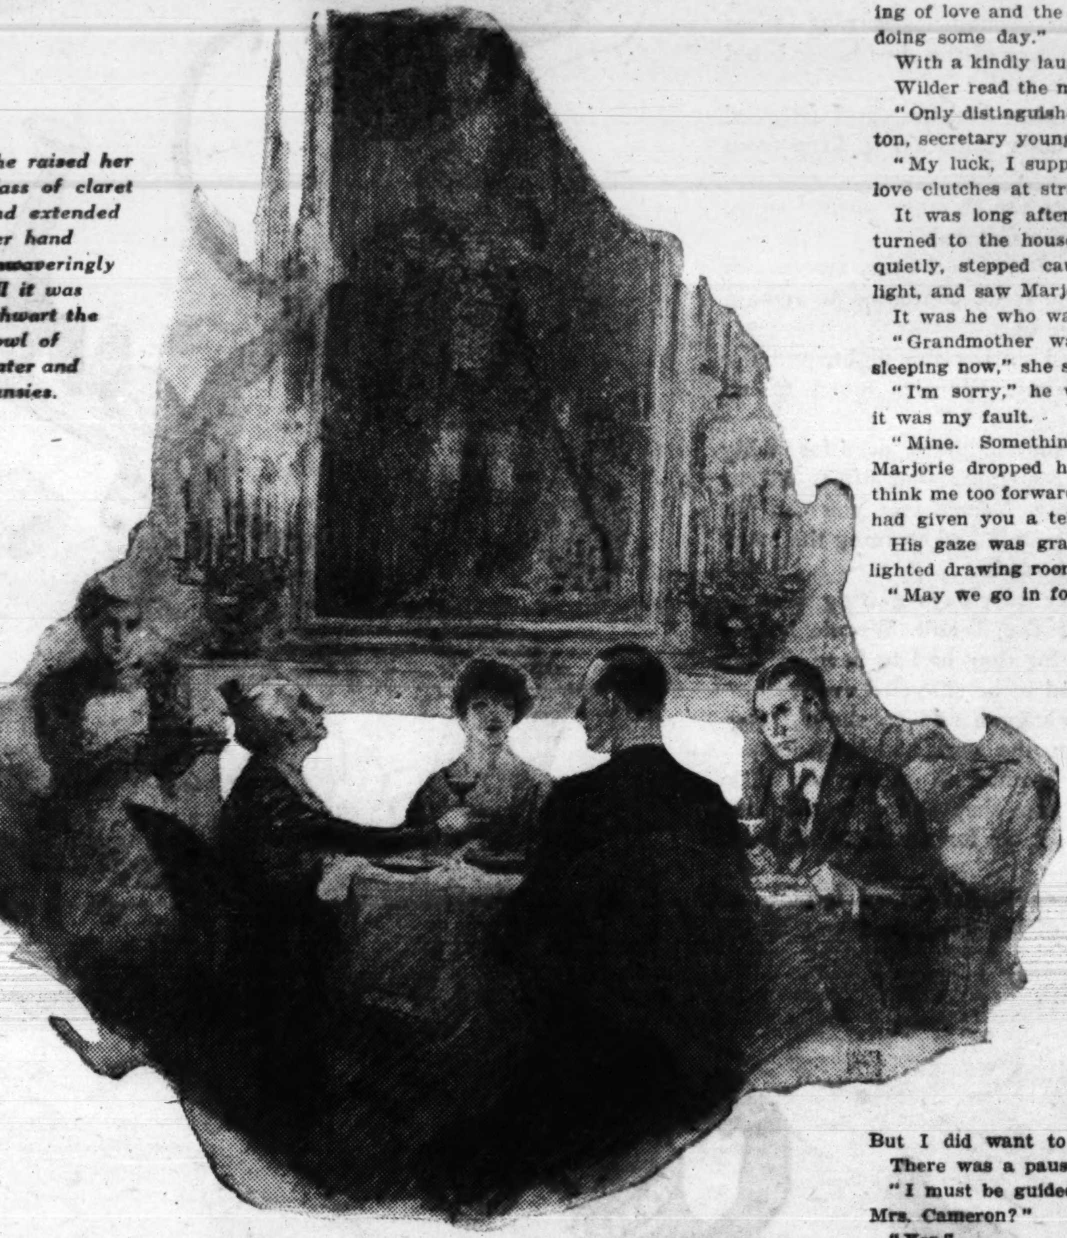
"But what is wrong, Miss Cameron?"

"I suppose I must tell you," she said reluctantly. "If there is one name that my grandmother hates it is John Murray. I don't remember hearing her utter it till tonight."

"May I know why she hates it?"

"Of course, you will not take it personally," she returned, with a faint smile. "John Murray of Broughton was the Prince's secretary, and I think he was faithful to begin with. But after Culloden he became the arch-traitor of the cause. He turned king's evidence and saved himself by sacrificing gallant gentlemen to the block. It was said of him that he preferred living a dog's life to dying a man's death. . . . Forgive me, Mr. Wilder. It is a thousand to one against his being an ancestor of yours; and even if he were——" She paused. "Try to bear with my grandmother. It was probably a shock to her."

"Yes, I can understand that," said Wilder, endeavoring to hide his hurt. "It must have been a shock to discover that she had been entertaining a person of so sinister a name. But I can't understand why Cameron——" He broke off. "Tell me what I ought to do."



She raised her glass of claret and extended her hand unwaveringly till it was athwart the bowl of water and pansies.

"Why, nothing. My grandmother will soon see that she has been unreasonable. Don't expect her to beg your pardon, but just try to forget, as, I am sure, she will forget."

There was silence till Wilder said:

"As a matter of fact, I've been bothering about my name. The day after we came here I wrote to an aunt who used to concern herself about our family trees. She would think me crazy, for I asked her to cable the names of the distinguished members of our family in the year 1745. You see"—with a rueful laugh—"I hoped we might have had some connection with Prince Charlie. But now——"

"Why despair?" she asked. "There was another Murray—Sir George—who was Charles' leading general, and did splendidly, though he is not a hero of my grandmother's. But there were hundreds of Murrays in Scotland——"

Mrs. Cameron returned with her favored guest.

"I have received a great honor," Cameron solemnly announced. "I have been permitted to sit in Prince Charles' chair."

"An honor given to few," remarked Marjorie, a little coldly, Wilder fancied. "What about a game of bridge?"

The old lady shook her head. She felt tired and would prefer music.

The evening passed less blithely than its predecessors. Cameron alone appeared free from constraint. It was rather too evident that the hostess was striving hard to be "nice" to Wilder, and he felt humiliated accordingly. Marjorie sang indifferently and briefly. With her grandmother she retired early.

As she was helping the old lady to bed she said gently:

"Granny, what's in a name?"

"Everything! I'm sorry for that young man, but——"

"Do you know, dear," Marjorie interrupted, "I'm beginning to think there's nothing in a name—nothing at all."

"What? Nothing in your own name, and mine? Was ever a Cameron a traitor?"

"I wonder," said Marjorie, but it was to herself, and she apologized and abandoned the subject, hoping her indiscretion might not spoil her grandmother's rest. Nor did Mrs. Cameron seem wishful then to discuss the matter further.

Downstairs Wilder expressed his intention of going for a walk.

"Don't wait up for me. The door is never locked, you know."

Cameron looked at him. "Anything the matter, old man?"

"Thanks, nothing. Good night."

"Hold on a moment. In the other room Mrs. Cameron was asking things about you—O, in the kindliest way—and I assure you I gave you a pretty good character."

"I'm obliged," said Wilder and went out.

The lamps had not yet been brought in, and Cameron watched his friend swing down the road in the twilight.

"Yes," he murmured, "I suppose I might have given him a hint; but all's fair. . . ."

He turned, for Marjorie had entered.

. . . .

Wilder walked the better part of a mile ere his thoughts cooled and clarified. He could have struck Cameron; he had been sorely tempted to tax him with disloyalty. Now he determined to await the overdue cable's arrival before saying anything. He was hurt to the quick by such treatment from the man whose friendship and sincerity he had never questioned. Had he but known the significance of the "Murray" in his name, he could so easily have suppressed it, not just for his own sake but out of consideration for the feelings of the old lady for whom he had developed a truly affectionate regard.

He threw himself on the heather by the roadside. The whole situation was most difficult and depressing. He was desperately in love with Marjorie—he had loved her in the first hour of their acquaintance—and he could see no hope for himself. He was an outsider, not rich, the bearer of a despised name. What hope, indeed, of winning this Jacobite girl guarded by this Jacobite old lady? He remembered Marjorie's words: "In our branch a Cameron has always married a Cameron." And yonder was a Cameron, wealthy, good looking, and in high favor with the old lady, ready enough to marry Marjorie! Hopeless, without a doubt! The right thing to do, he told himself, would be to take his departure in the morning. Yet could that be done without distressing the hostess, whose sense of hospitality he felt certain was in no wise changed, and hurting Marjorie, always so anxious for her grandmother's peace of mind? If only the cable would arrive in the morning, and form an excuse for his going——

Even as the thought passed through his mind, a man came round the bend of the road. It was still light enough for recognition.

"It is you, Mr. Wilder! Well, well!" said Ranald. "I was at the village, and they gave me a wire for you. Be pleased to excuse the delay, but they are not hurrying themselves at the postoffice when they think the message is not important. And now I will be getting home to put in the whisky."

"Don't wait up for me, Ranald."

"Well, well, it is a fine evening, and I mind when I, a young man, would be lying on the heather till the dawn."

"Sleeping?"

"No, sir; just half-thinking and half-dreaming of love and the great things I would be doing some day."

With a kindly laugh Ranald went his way.

Wilder read the message.

"Only distinguished John Murray Broughton, secretary young pretender."

"My luck, I suppose," sighed Wilder, for love clutches at straws.

It was long after midnight when he returned to the house. He opened the door quietly, stepped cautiously into a subdued light, and saw Marjorie.

It was he who was taken aback.

"Grandmother was wakeful, but she is sleeping now," she said softly.

"I'm sorry," he whispered. "I'm afraid it was my fault."

"Mine. Something I said disturbed her." Marjorie dropped her eyes. "Please don't think me too forward, but Ranald told me he had given you a telegram. . . ."

His gaze was grateful. The door of the lighted drawing room stood open.

"May we go in for a minute or two?" he asked, and she entered.

He handed her the message, noticing that she was pale.

She read it and said:

"Do you mind?"

"Mind! . . . Yet what does it matter?"

"The truth always matters. But you need not have told me the truth—shown me this. You could easily have said——"

"Not tell you the truth? Why, Miss Cameron, what do you take me for?"

"I'm afraid you take me for a very interfering person, Mr. Wilder. But I did want to know—the truth."

There was a pause till he said:

"I must be guided by you. Am I to tell Mrs. Cameron?"

"Yes."

He bowed. "I had thought of leaving you tomorrow on the strength of a telegram received. Of course, in any case, I ought to go. My staying would put a strain on Mrs. Cameron which——"

"You are not giving her credit for any sense of justice. Try to remember that she is very old, and, if you will, prejudiced, and that she cannot weigh things on the spur of the moment. But she is just, though she is a Jacobite. I have told you that she did not sleep till a little while ago."

"But not on my account! Something you said——"

"Something I said—on your account." Marjorie's pallor was less noticeable. "Now, please, let it go at that. I give you my word that her feelings toward you are as friendly and kindly as they were before you wrote your name. You are as welcome as ever. Try not to doubt it."

"I might have known she would be generous, and I thank you for your—your intercession on my behalf."

"How terribly formal! Besides, I didn't exactly intercede for you. It wasn't necessary."

"Would you—if it had been necessary?"

"I should have to consider that question. You are looking very tired, Mr. Wilder. Please sit down. I have more to tell you. Will you not take whisky?"

He shook his head, placed a chair for her and took one for himself, saying:

"Forgive me, but I must seem remarkably stupid. Does Mrs. Cameron really wish me to remain in her house?"

"She really does, and I'm sure it would depress her to lose both her guests."

"My going need not mean Cameron's."

"Nor Mr. Cameron's yours."

Then Wilder positively stared.

"I'm trying to break it gently," she said, rather nervously. "Your friend Mr. Cam-a neatly dressed woman of full figure, no longer young, but not old, either, who was looking at him with cool, blue-gray eyes.

"I am Miss George; Mr. Cordwainer sent me," she said, crisply.

He had vaguely expected a somewhat more romantic figure; at least—some way—a darker figure. This woman was blond, with sandy hair; but a domestic sort of blond instead of a theatrical sort. With her full, neatly dressed figure and competent air one might have expected to find her running a suburban delicatessen shop—capably, but not at all romantically. However, no doubt Cordwainer knew; and she was good looking in her matronly style. If he had had any intention of offering his new ally a drink and a cigarette, it automatically vanished. She some way reduced it all to a business proposition, and in that spirit he addressed her:

"I want you to find out what has become of a girl, Miss George." He took an envelope from his pocket and consulted a memorandum scribbled on its back. "Her name is Katey Zobrosky. She was employed as a parlor maid in Judge Tillman Crane's place at Windham. She'd been in Judge Crane's house a few months. Nobody in the house seems to know much about her—I mean where her relatives are, if she had any in this country. She disappeared last Thursday afternoon. Judge Crane's butler says she telephoned from somewhere about three o'clock that she was going to quit her job—wasn't coming back to the house—and asking the butler to keep her clothes until she sent for them. But a man there—his name is Thorp—says he saw her lying in the laundry about five or half past. He thinks she was drunk, sleeping it off.

"She's a very pretty girl. I've seen her myself around the house. There's a young man up there—Ted Pennell. He paid a lot of attention to the girl—had her to public dances and so on. He is Mrs. Crane's nephew, you understand. Well, he disappeared last Saturday afternoon. I think he's got the girl somewhere. I want you to find out. But I don't want you to start anything that will give the affair away until I know about it. Understand?"

"Certainly," she replied, as though an answer were superfluous.

"I have my own reasons for wanting to know what's happened between the girl and the young man. But I don't want him to know, or anybody else to know, that I'm taking a hand in it. If you find them, just keep still and notify me."

She waited a moment and asked: "Anything else, Mr. Hilton? Of course, the more I know to begin with the less I'll have to dig up." She smiled, showing fine teeth, as she offered that self-evident truth.

That was all he meant to tell her; but he now felt the temptation to go on, and yielded to it.

"This Thorp told me about seeing the girl in the laundry. Of course, he's a blockhead—Smart Aleck sort of blockhead. I don't doubt that he told the truth about seeing the girl; but what occurred to him that she was drunk—because if he'd been lying in the laundry he'd have been drunk. His notion appears to be that the girl got tight and the butler covered it up because—presumably—somebody else was involved in it; a scandalous little spree there in the house, you see. . . . .

"But that looks doubtful to me. Why should she have left her clothes? I was up there over Saturday and Sunday—left last night. I know two or three letters have come to the house for her since she left. It seems she was a great little flirt, and no doubt some of her beaux have been writing to her. If Thorp really saw her lying in the laundry at five o'clock, it's unlikely she telephoned the butler at three that she wasn't coming back. Possibly she did come back to get her clothes. A girl of that kind would want all her clothes—pretty and flirting, you know. If she did come back to get her clothes, why didn't she take them?"

Hilton's nervous eyes questioned Miss George's intelligent but noncommittal face a moment. "Suppose she came back and was given some drugged wine, and there was too much drug in the wine? Of course, I know nothing whatever about it except what I told you at first. But it seems queer to me. If any accident happened, such as I just suggested, there must have been some strong influence at work to cover it up. It isn't likely that any such influence would have been exerted to cover up an affair among servants. Ted Pennell left there directly after lunch Saturday—left abruptly. There's a Miss Loughman up there—supposed to be his sweetheart—but she didn't know he'd gone until dinner time Saturday. The story was that his father had telephoned him from New York to come down here at once on a business matter. As a matter of fact, his father didn't telephone him and didn't know he'd left Windham. As for needing his assistance in a business way, the young man is twenty-three and knows as much about business as that chair."

"Is he related to the Mr. Pennell of your firm?" Miss George inquired.

"The Mr. Pennell of my firm is his father," Hilton replied. "You understand business has nothing to do with it as far as I am concerned," he added with an unnecessary falsehood. "There's no business motive in it. But I want to know where that girl is, and what hand Ted Pennell had in her leaving the house, and whether he's got her now; and I don't want anything done that will give the affair away until you have reported to me. Can you go to Windham tonight?"

"Yes," she replied. "Shall I telephone you at your office?"

He frowned over than an instant. "Not unless it's absolutely necessary. I don't like telephoning in a case like this—somebody might listen, you know. Better not telephone at all. You can catch a night train and come back here any time; or you can telephone Cordwainer, and he can send over for me."

She accepted that equably, saying: "Very well. And if you have anything new to say to me, you can go over to Mr. Cordwainer. He'll know how to reach me."

"Yes, that will answer," he replied. "Do you want to take down these names I have given you?"

"No; I have a very good memory," she replied, showing her fine teeth. "I'll go up there tonight."

He arose as she did. She said affably: "Good afternoon, Mr. Hilton." He replied: "Good afternoon, Miss George," and saw her to the door.

There was a vague disappointment, for it had not been at all detectivelike, but crisp and businesslike as a talk about a bond deal. All the same, she impressed him as a competent woman, and that was the main thing.

He treated himself to another very little drink and lit a cigaret. . . . If he could get a cast iron grip on the Pennells, it would, to say the least, be a very useful anchor to the windward. He didn't doubt that Pennell Junior was in a trap which needed only some skillful handling in order to be sprung to good purpose.

The sign on the door said "Cordwainer" and nothing more, as though one could know beforehand who or what Cordwainer was or go without knowing. The corridor from which this door opened had a dingy look. The building—on Park row—was dingy, also, and quite ancient in comparison with the day before yesterday colossus which towered twenty-five stories beside it; but it suited Cordwainer's purpose.

In a small room—one of a suite behind that door—Jenny George sat half an hour after leaving Lester Hilton making her report to the man at the belittered desk. He was a man on whom nothing had been wasted—with no superfluous height; his wiry frame just conveniently sufficient to hold his bones together, and composed entirely, it seemed, of sinews and nerves. He wore a beard, trimmed as close to his thin cheeks as it could be without a razor, and cut off, in a point, immediately under his chin. His compact nerves seemed to have been wound up so tight that they could never be quite still—a lean hand was always fiddling with something on the desk, or touching his beard, his head moving in little impatient nods. He was collarless and coatless, an unbuttoned vest hanging loosely.

Cordwainer never stopped; his mind and some part of his body was always going. His staff questioned whether he really ran down when he slept. His craft seemed to need, constantly, the most vigilant steering.

"A maid in Judge Tillman Crane's house, eh?" he commented, plucking at his beard, when Miss George had told her story. And here again there might be need of careful steering. "Milt Eastman went up there last night. Danforth Crane sent for him. . . . A chance that it might be the same case. We'll have to be careful. I'll tell Milt that you are coming and where to find you. See him first. If it is the same case we've got to look out." He knew from experience that being employed on both sides of the same case was a delicate matter. Jenny George understood that as a matter of course.

There was no one to meet her when she got off the train at Windham station about 11 o'clock the next morning, but she was not used to being met. "Harbor House," she said to the taxi driver as he took her suit case and bag—that being the name of the hotel to which she was to go. She found that it was at the edge of town, overlooking a fine, rockbound, horse shoe harbor that served admirably as a shelter for yachts and an occasional battleship in the summer time. The frame hotel, evidently built in several sections, managed to keep a colonial look in spite of the broad two story veranda that ran completely around it. Jenny presumed, impartially, that Cordwainer had sent her there instead of to one of the more fashionable establishments away from the town because it was cheaper. But it wouldn't be cheaper to Mr. Lester Hilton. When she registered the clerk handed her a sealed envelope which a gentleman had left for her that morning and she recognized Eastman's hand in the superscription. The scribbled message ran: "Will look for you on the veranda here at 3 o'clock."

So far, so easy. She had nothing to do but eat luncheon and sit on the broad veranda looking at the harbor. The message suggested that Eastman's case and hers were the same, which meant company and help; also, since he said three o'clock, that he was in no hurry. She was in no hurry, either, and took the bit of luck that came her way in due gratitude. Sometimes luck ran all the other way and she had to live, comparatively, in an ash barrel, working day and night. She composed herself most comfortably in a corner of the veranda—a neatly dressed, full figured, nice looking woman verging to middle age.

There Eastman found her at three o'clock, greeting her with a cordial "Hello, Jenny."

"Hello, Milt," she replied in the same spirit, as he sat down beside her. "I was just wishing they'd go on losing parlor maids up here from now to October. I could stand a lot of this. . . . I suppose you know what I'm up here for."

"Same case as mine," said Eastman good-naturedly. "There's a little boat starts from near this hotel at four o'clock and goes up a little river to a little town where—the natives tell me—they know how to broil a little lobster right; also, steamed clams, et cetera. We'll go there and detect 'em at it."

"Got all that time to spill?" she asked.

Eastman's good nature expanded into a chuckle. "This case," he replied, judicially, "is just about a hundred per cent perfect. It's too good for a detective story; somebody ought to make it into an epic poem. Some people get all stirred up about the disappearance of a maid, you know.

"A person with a summer squash on his shoulders and a straw hat on that said he saw her lying in Judge Crane's laundry. Hence the mystery—what became of the maid? They send down to Cordwainer and get his two ablest detectives. The most ablest detective—having been brought up in the business and not on detective literature—gets the prodigous idea of asking the squash a couple of questions, and in two minutes the squash tells him the whole story. So now the mystery that you and I have got to solve is this: How many days can we stall along here, where the stalling's pleasant, and keep the people who sign the checks from blundering onto the solution of their mystery without our help? I've always said the hardest thing a detective has to do is to keep from being detected."

Jenny George fully appreciated the cause for good humor which he thus disclosed. "As easy as that?" she asked, beaming.

"Just about that easy," he repeated.. "Got your Bright Eyes book with you?"

That question referred to a volume of astrology, divination, and fortune telling which she had found useful as a means of setting up social relations with females of limited education.

"Uh-huh," she replied, meaning yes.

"There's a little work you might do at the back door of a doctor's residence here tomorrow," he said. "But today we can concentrate our minds on lobster."

He continued to give every indication of being in the highest good humor, his eyes twinkling and a smile playing on his face with the indented chin. But in a moment it appeared that his own mind was not concentrated on lobster. "Hilton called you into it," he observed; for Cordwainer's long distance telephone message—necessarily more or less cryptic and in a sort of verbal cipher which the agency used—had told him that much.

"Pennell, Hilton & Company, stock brokers," she replied.

"I know about the firm," he commented, musing. "Sort of looks as though Partner Pennell and Partner Hilton might not be pulling together as brotherly as partners ought to. I don't see exactly why Partner Hilton would be sending to Cordwainer unless she was trying to get something on Partner Pennell's son. But maybe they're both just trying to save the young man from the consequence of a spell of absent mindedness."

She knew that Milt Eastman would tell her what he had found out in his own time and way. Besides, except professionally, she was no more interested in what had happened to a parlor maid in Judge Tillman Crane's house than the man in the moon might be supposed to be.

In a moment Eastman mused aloud, good naturedly, "Somebody's got something on somebody, all right. . . . I'm an honorable detective; but sometimes I regret it keenly. It's a devil of a handicap. I've got something on somebody myself, you see."

Miss George showed her fine teeth in a friendly smile as she remarked—fairly it seemed, by way of a gentle little warning: "Nobody can double cross Scott Cordwainer and get away with it." That was a tradition in the profession.

"Well, no—not ordinarily," Eastman replied, smiling. His glance then wandered out over the rockbound harbor and he observed, "As pleasant a place to commit a crime in as any reasonable detective could ask. Hope that lobster will live up to its reputation."

How long they could "stall," as Eastman termed it—meaning how long they could loaf on the job—might be an interesting question academically; but it involved obvious risks, and on Thursday the detective made a report to Danforth Crane.

THE JACOBITES

eron found that he must catch the early train from Arisaig, which would mean a painfully early start from here, so Ranald drove him to the station inn. . . . "

"Cameron gone!"

Marjorie nodded. She was sorry for Cameron. He had asked her to marry him, and she had coldly asked him why he had allowed his friend to remain in ignorance of a certain outstanding fact in the "History of the Rebellion," which he had studied so carefully. . . . But Cameron's shame was her secret.

"Yes, Mr. Wilder. Seemingly he had to go. He hoped you would not think of shortening your stay here, and said he would write. Ranald will act as his valet and see him comfortably settled in the train. I'm afraid the news has distressed you."

"Did he, too, have a telegram?"

"One must imagine so, though he did not mention it."

"I wish he had not gone like that," said Wilder. "I confess I left him in anger, but there may be some explanation of——"

"He will write, you know. And now——" She rose.

"Yes, I have kept you too long. But tell me—does Mrs. Cameron know he has gone?"

"I had to tell her. It was a blow, but I took her a nice little note from him, which seemed to soothe it. Poor grandmother! Will you also desert her?"

Wilder waved where he stood. He had suffered so many emotions.

"I am at her service and—yours," he said suddenly. "At the moment everything of the past weeks seems unreal. I—I don't want to go. But I'm afraid to stay. . . . And, O, Marjorie! I think you must know why!"

"It is very late," she faltered.

"I love you!"

"O!"

"I'm sorry, but I had to tell you. And now, how can I stay?"

Marjorie seemed to have no suggestion to offer; her eyes were downcast.

"I couldn't pretend that I didn't love you," he went on, "and Mrs. Cameron would see it, and it would be horrid for you—you would both wish me gone, then."

The clock struck 4.

"O, this is dreadful!"

"I know it is—quite hopeless. For a Cameron has always married a Cameron—has she not? . . . Please answer."

Marjorie retreated a step. Her lips moved silently for a moment or two before she replied, almost inaudibly.

"Yes, Mr. Wilder, in the p—past."

"And a Jacobite a Jacobite?"

"I—I don't know any real J—Jacobite except Granny." And she retreated another step—and another—and yet another.

At the third he followed, trembling. At the fourth he caught her hands.

"O, Marjorie!" said Murray.

"O Murray!" sighed Marjorie.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE TALE OF A MOUSE

BY WM. DONAHEY.

ONE morning when the Teenie Weenies crawled out of their tiny beds, they found the old shoe house almost entirely covered with snow.

The snow lay on the ground nearly nine inches deep, and only the chimney of the shoe house could be seen under the rose bush.

All day the wind blew and the snow fell, and it was all the little chaps could do to keep from being covered up.

"We've got to keep the chimney opened so we can have a fire," said the General.

There was plenty of food in the tiny store room, so the little folks were quite contented to remain in their cozy little homes.

The snow stopped during the night, and the next morning the Teenie Weenies found fifteen inches of snow on the ground.

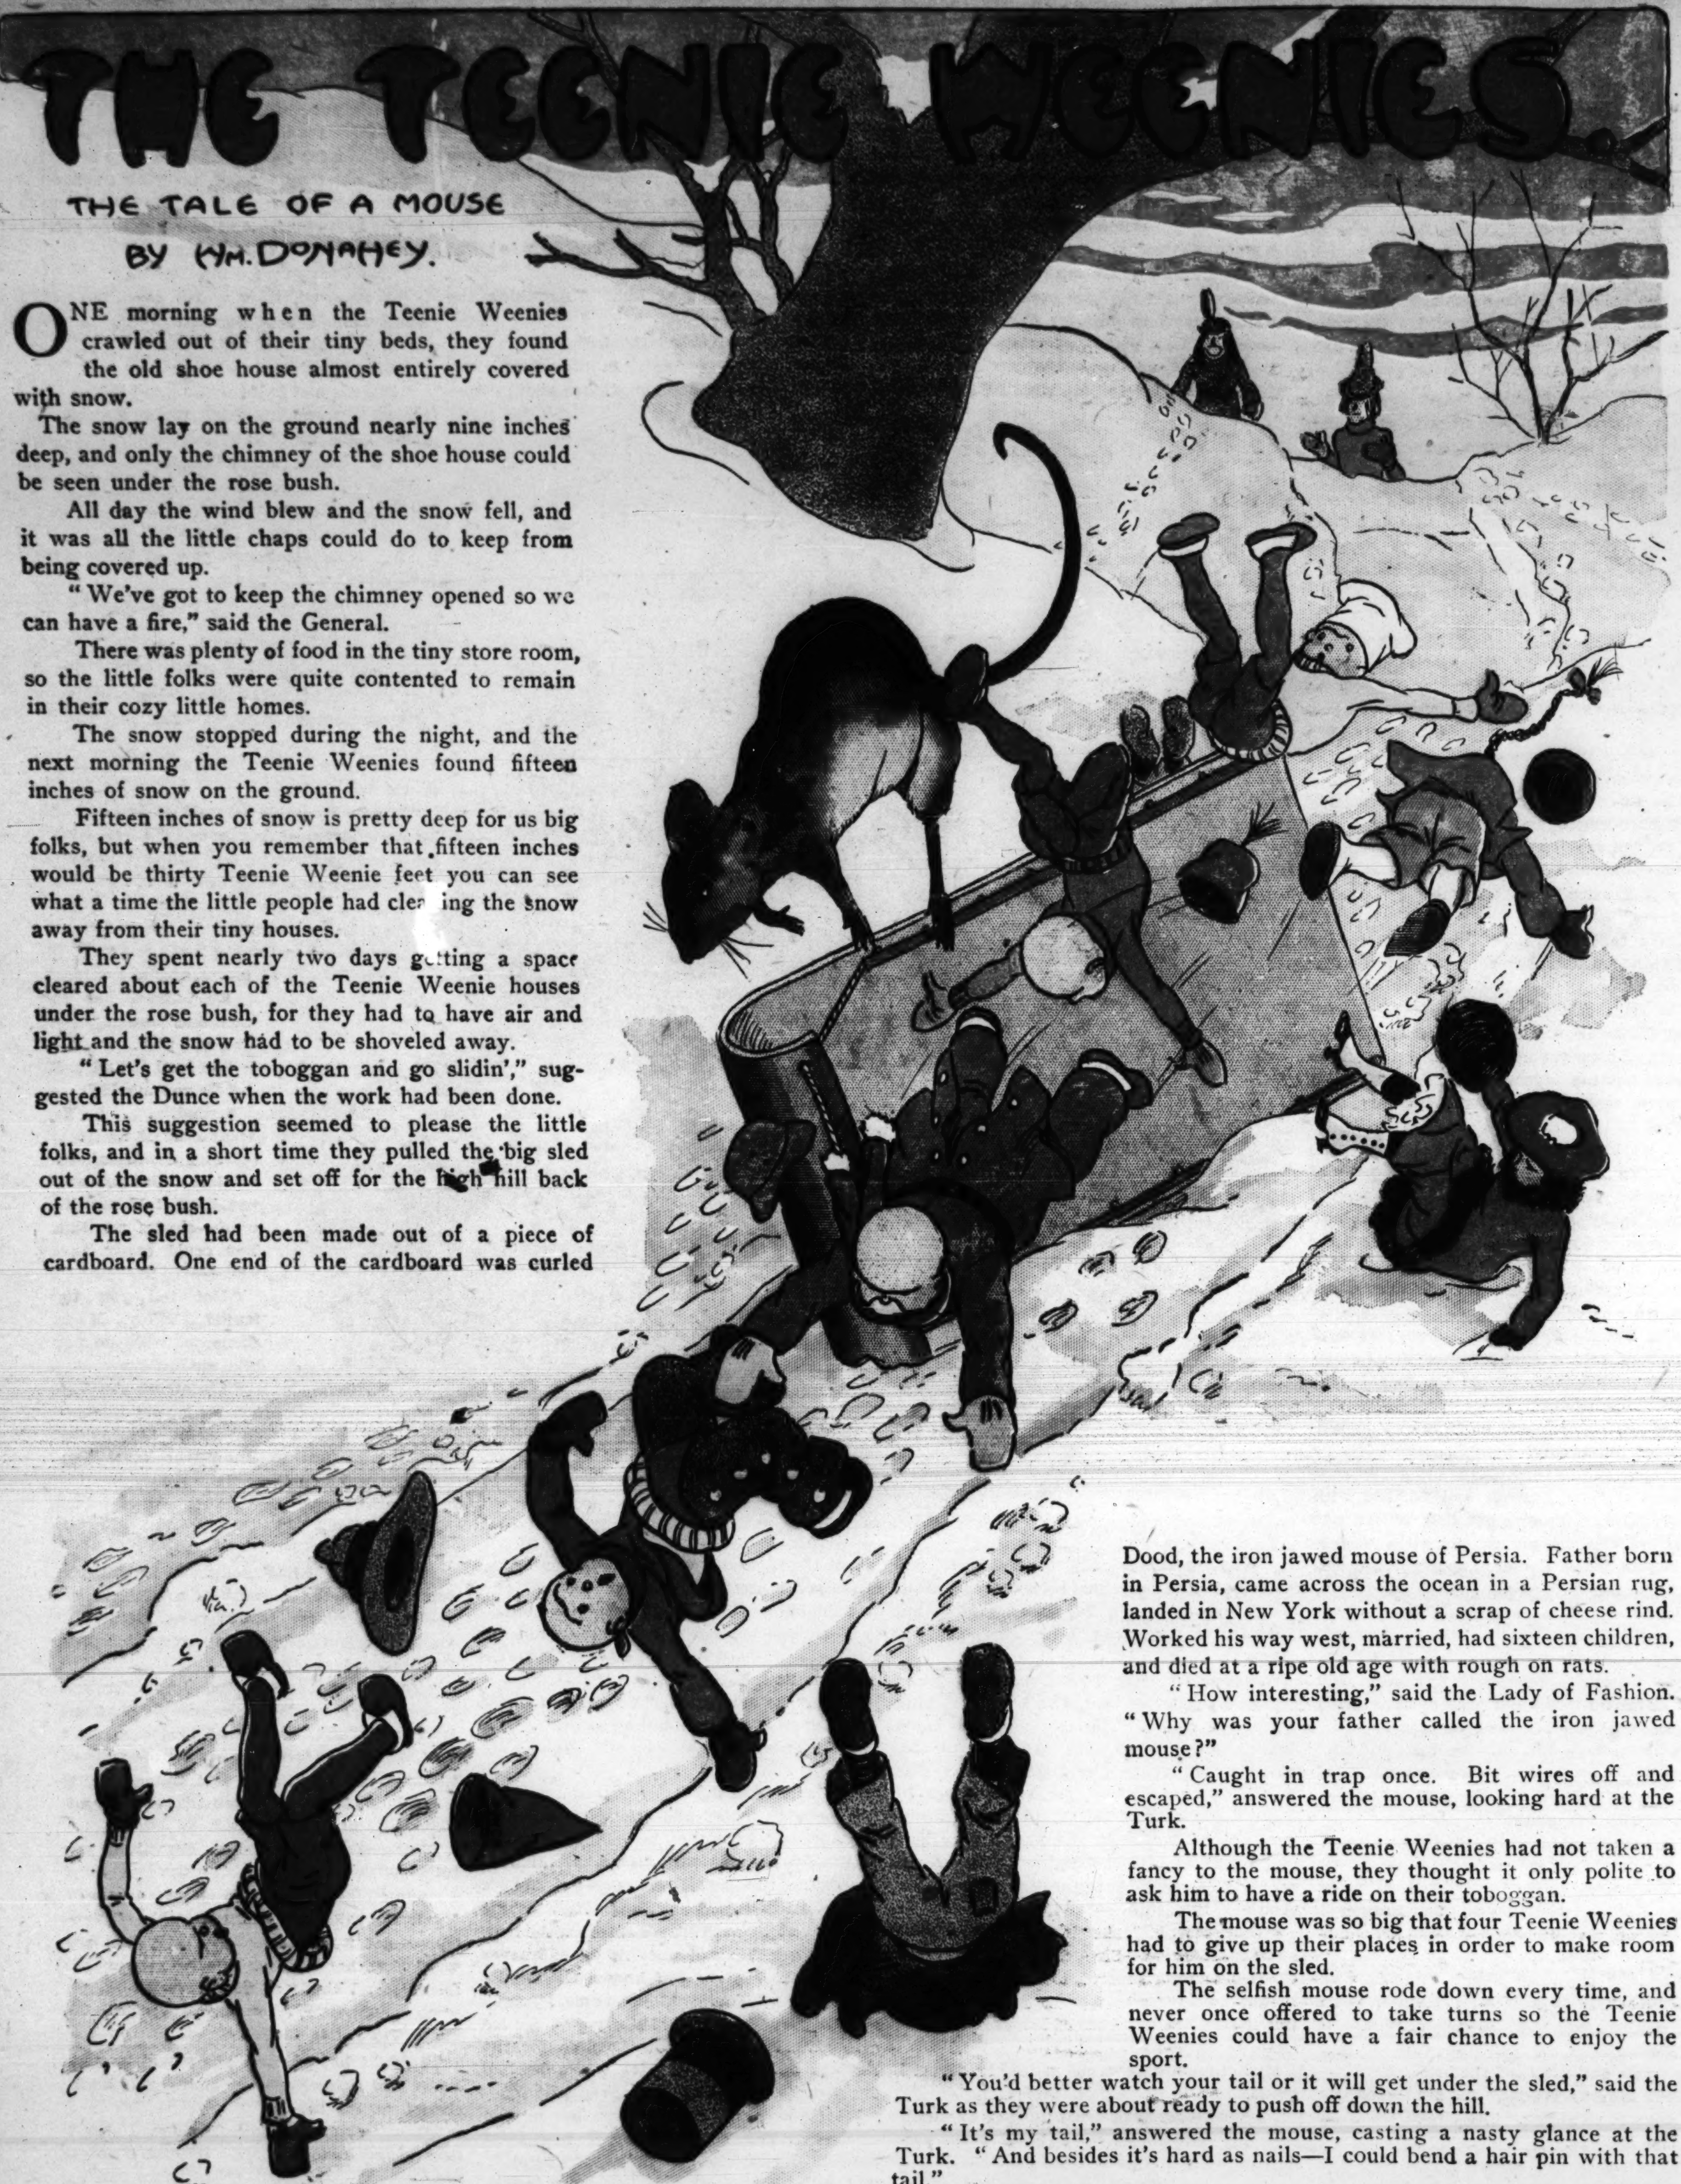
Fifteen inches of snow is pretty deep for us big folks, but when you remember that fifteen inches would be thirty Teenie Weenie feet you can see what a time the little people had clearing the snow away from their tiny houses.

They spent nearly two days getting a space cleared about each of the Teenie Weenie houses under the rose bush, for they had to have air and light and the snow had to be shoveled away.

"Let's get the toboggan and go slidin'," suggested the Dunce when the work had been done.

This suggestion seemed to please the little folks, and in a short time they pulled the big sled out of the snow and set off for the high hill back of the rose bush.

The sled had been made out of a piece of cardboard. One end of the cardboard was curled up and tied back, and there was plenty of room for quite a number of Teenie Weenies, providing they sat close together.



The little folks had great sport sliding down the long hill, and their laughter and squeals of delight soon attracted the attention of a mouse in one of the houses nearby.

"Well, little folks," said the mouse as he hopped up to the top of the hill. "Havin' a good time?"

"No," said the Turk rather shortly, for the mouse had a most unpleasant way with him. "We're slidin' down this hill because it makes us feel bad."

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the mouse, but it could be plainly seen he was not pleased with the Turk's answer.

"It's a pleasant day, isn't it?" cried the Lady of Fashion. "Won't you get on the sled and go down the hill with us, Mr.——, Mr.——."

"Dood, Danny Dood," said the mouse. "I'm grandson of Jerry Dood, the iron jawed mouse of Persia. Father born in Persia, came across the ocean in a Persian rug, landed in New York without a scrap of cheese rind. Worked his way west, married, had sixteen children, and died at a ripe old age with rough on rats.

"How interesting," said the Lady of Fashion. "Why was your father called the iron jawed mouse?"

"Caught in trap once. Bit wires off and escaped," answered the mouse, looking hard at the Turk.

Although the Teenie Weenies had not taken a fancy to the mouse, they thought it only polite to ask him to have a ride on their toboggan.

The mouse was so big that four Teenie Weenies had to give up their places in order to make room for him on the sled.

The selfish mouse rode down every time, and never once offered to take turns so the Teenie Weenies could have a fair chance to enjoy the sport.

"You'd better watch your tail or it will get under the sled," said the Turk as they were about ready to push off down the hill.

"It's my tail," answered the mouse, casting a nasty glance at the Turk. "And besides it's hard as nails—I could bend a hair pin with that tail."

The Turk shoved off the sled, and down the hill it slid with the mouse's tail trailing over the snow dangerously near the edge of the sled.

As the sled dashed along, it suddenly hit a small bump and bounced down on the mouse's tail. The mouse let out a great screech and leaped into the air, which overbalanced the sled and spilled the Teenie Weenies all along the way.

As the snow was very deep not one of the little folks was hurt, although several were almost buried in the deep drifts.

The mouse picked himself out of the snow and set off squealing at the top of his voice, never stopping to see whether any of the Teenie Weenies had been hurt.

When the little folks pulled themselves out of the snow they found the only damage done was to the Lady of Fashion and the Policeman.

The policeman had broken his belt, and the Lady of Fashion cracked one of the fish bone stays of her tiny corset.

"Well, that spill did one good thing," laughed the Turk as he brushed the snow out of the Chinaman's neck. "We certainly lost old iron tail."

OVERLOOK HOUSE

by Will Payne

THE STORY THUS FAR—Overlook House is the home of Judge Tillman Crane, a wealthy owner of oil lands, and his invalid wife. As the story opens the Cranes are entertaining as their guest Mrs. Edith Hilton, whose husband, a broker, has been handling the judge's financial interests. One afternoon Hilton summons his wife to a secret meeting at a nearby town and confesses that he has been misappropriating the Crane securities. A letter is on its way to Judge Crane which would reveal this, and Mrs. Hilton reluctantly agrees to intercept it and substitute another, which her husband gives her. To avoid recognition on her trip to town, Mrs. Hilton has borrowed the hat and cloak of Katey, a pretty maid employed at Overlook House. On her way back she is overtaken by Ted Pennell, son of her husband's partner, who mistakes her at first for the maid, and then, discovering the masquerade gives her a lift in his car. Ted promises secrecy and treats the little adventure as a joke, but several persons have seen the supposed maid in his car—among them Peggy Loughman, Ted's fiancée, who has been angered before by young Pennell's open philandering with the girl. Meanwhile there is some perplexity at Overlook House over the fact that Katey has disappeared. The first to admit any knowledge of her whereabouts is Samuel Thorp, a town loafer, who has seen the girl lying on a pile of clothes in the laundry, covered with a coat which he recognizes as one belonging to Ted Pennell. Thorp confides his secret to Louis, the gardener, an admirer of Katey's, and Louis, in turn, tells the disturbing story to Danforth Crane, the Judge's son, who is in love with Peggy Loughman and proposes, if he can, to overcome her preference for Ted Pennell. Ted and Peggy have a serious falling out over the girl in Ted's car, Ted refusing stubbornly to explain the incident. Then the boy adds to the mystery of his conduct by abruptly leaving Overlook House. Peggy, deeply troubled, determines to find out what has become af Katey and at her suggestion Danforth Crane engages a detective named Eastman to work on the case. At the same time Lester Hilton, the broker, who has been spending the week end at Overlook, goes back to New York. At his office he unexpectedly encounters his partner, Ted Pennell's father, an easy-going individual who knows nothing of Hilton's dishonesty in the matter of the Crane securities or the financial difficulties in which he has involved himself and the firm.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

Hilton Sets His Trap.

"HOW did you find everyone at Overlook?"

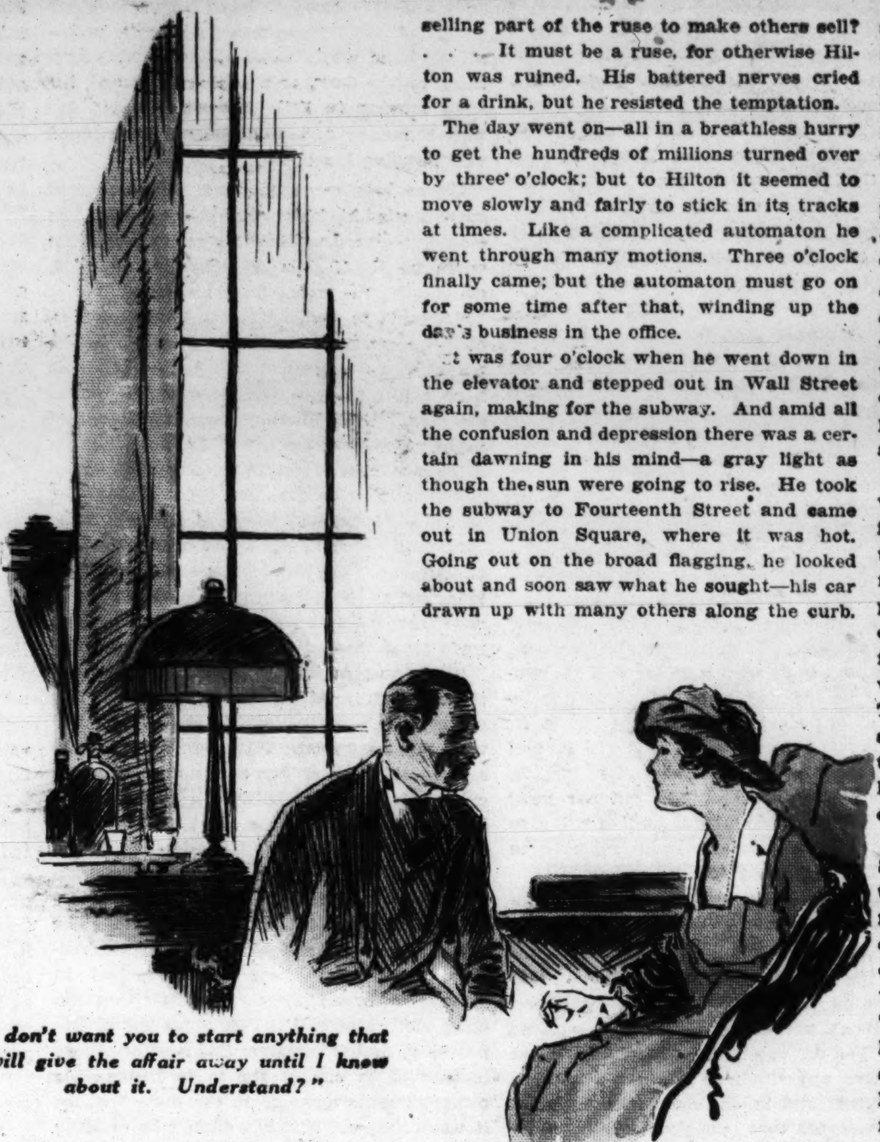
For a couple of minutes the partners stood talking, casually. Lester Hilton, in his outburst to his wife at the Stony Cove Hotel, had much slandered his partner, who was by no means such a complete idler and parasite as he had alleged. There were a great many details as to which the senior partner was vague. There was a certain touch of vagueness—of absent-mindedness—in the way he greeted Hilton just now. One might have said that he wasn't exactly sure whether the person with whom he was shaking hands was his partner or his pastor. Commonly that air of a certain vagueness and absent-mindedness attached one to him. It extended even to his clothes—good enough clothes, no doubt, but just hung upon him as though he had picked them up indifferently out of a heap. His face was high-colored and he wore a patch of sandy sidewhiskers on either cheek—which was a bit eccentric for Wall Street.

He had many interests outside of Wall Street—etchings, for example, and porcelain. In Wall Street he commonly had that air of not minding very much. But many people felt a dependable quality in him—a man to be trusted. Leaving aside the Crane connection, he was by no means such a negligible factor in the firm as Hilton had asserted to his wife. All the same, Hilton quite hated him now. But above all Hilton wanted to think. In his mental confusion there was a terrible feeling that the Sphinx was asking him a question which he must answer right on pain of death. He kept asserting an answer and then helplessly asking himself if that was the right answer—and wanting to think out what the answer should be. He went into his corner den, but almost immediately—abruptly—left it again and hurried out to the corridor, where he stepped into an elevator.

Leaving the elevator on an upper floor, he got a bunch of keys out of his pocket and went down the hall to a signless door, into which he let himself. It was a small room with no furniture but a rug, a desk, a chair, a telephone his particular retreat, hidden away in the huge building. Not even Pennell knew that he had such a room, which was an expression of his instinct to burrow himself far out of sight, all alone. He was feverish now, for it lacked only thirteen minutes of ten. He caught up the telephone, asked for a number; then gave his own name and asked for Mr. Samuels. A moment later he was saying eagerly:

"That you, Lem? Lester Hilton. Buy me five hundred shares of Hidalgo at the opening. . . . Same as before, you know. . . . All right."

That is what the agitation in his mind—which seemed almost like thinking—had come to. Of course, Hidalgo was going up! Danforth Crane had told his wife it was going down to mislead her. And this secret means—giving an order over the telephone up in this room—was part of his burrowing. But the moment he had acted his resolution wavered. Had he done the right thing? What difference would five hundred shares make even if Hidalgo did go up? Had it all been a mere convulsive movement, like a blind striking out in the dark? At any rate, it soothed his torn nerves to be alone, out of sight. For many minutes he sat by the desk, staring at the wall. The market was opening, but it didn't matter. Preston, the office manager and "company," could run the business downstairs—with the senior partner's powerful assistance.



"I don't want you to start anything that will give the affair away until I know about it. Understand?"

There was another thing that he had been thinking about, or trying to think about. Presently he used the telephone again, and at a quarter past ten, loathly, he went down stairs. The street was working at top speed then—with clamor and gesticulation on the Stock Exchange, with louder clamor and more violent movement on the Broad Street Curb, where a mob of brokers, steaming under the June sun, pressed together, breathlessly talking an outlandish tongue, not intelligible to the uninitiated. Also the street was working quietly with low tones and silent nods in the great banks and security houses, but to vaster purposes. It must get its hundreds of millions turned over by three o'clock.

For some minutes, on purpose, Hilton avoided asking for the curb quotations, Hidalgo being a curb stock and so not included in quotations from the Stock Exchange. He shook hands with a customer and lingered, talking blandly, easily, forcing the note of unconcern—as a man of his temperament on trial and awaiting the jury's verdict might make loud jokes. At length he retired to his own room, caught up one of the six telephones on a ledge beside his desk, asked for the curb quotation on Hidalgo Petroleum, and his heart turned leaden as he heard the answer. Hidalgo was leaden, too—not plunging down like a human body in water, but sinking with a slow and ghastly deliberateness like a man caught in quicksand. It had been so sinking since the opening and was only a hundred and eighteen now against a hundred and twenty-six at the close Saturday.

Woodenly Hilton went over to a desk in the corner of the customers' room, where sat wiry little Preston, the "company" and office manager. There he spoke in the most casual tone he could command:

"Wonder who's selling Hidalgo. Have you heard, Jim?"

And Preston seated at his desk snapped back at him, with a faint touch of surprise: "Why, we're selling it. Danforth Crane telephoned down to sell five thousand shares. I looked for you, but didn't see you around. I told Pennell."

"Danforth, eh?" Hilton muttered, and turned back to his own room. The order must have come in while he was upstairs. There seemed something like fate about it. . . . But was Danforth selling in earnest? Was what he told Edith true? Or was his selling part of the ruse to make others sell? . . . It must be a ruse, for otherwise Hilton was ruined. His battered nerves cried for a drink, but he resisted the temptation.

The day went on—all in a breathless hurry to get the hundreds of millions turned over by three o'clock; but to Hilton it seemed to move slowly and fairly to stick in its tracks at times. Like a complicated automaton he went through many motions. Three o'clock finally came; but the automaton must go on for some time after that, winding up the day's business in the office.

It was four o'clock when he went down in the elevator and stepped out in Wall Street again, making for the subway. And amid all the confusion and depression there was a certain dawning in his mind—a gray light as though the sun were going to rise. He took the subway to Fourteenth Street and came out in Union Square, where it was hot. Going out on the broad flagging, he looked about and soon saw what he sought—his car drawn up with many others along the curb. In the tangle of cluttered streets to the south of Union Square an automobile was a nuisance, but from here north one had straight, wider thoroughfares and fairer going.

"Metropolitan Club," he said to the chauffeur as he climbed into the open car—a costly car, shining in every detail.

Years ago, before he had been even a more or less hand-to-mouth curb broker, Lester Hilton had tramped Fifth Avenue where all the luxury of a continent is heaped up on view. There are jewelers' windows, furriers' windows, gowns that cost a poor man's competence, elaborate places to eat where the price of a substantial dinner is given as a tip for the serving of a cup of tea, equipages that cost a farm, and, farther up, dwellings for Midas. It had then been his dream to become one of the possessors of the golden street. And now—he himself recognizing that it was a bit childish—he could still get his little thrill from rolling up Fifth Avenue in a costly automobile.

In the early curb broker days, walking along the avenue beyond Fifty-ninth Street, where the park lies at one's left and the Midas dwellings begin, he had usually slackened his steps a little as he passed an imposing marble building through the broad plate glass windows of whose main floor he could see men lounging in padded easy chairs, talking, smoking, reading newspapers, or looking out at the world that tramped by. This was the Metropolitan Club—the particular haunt, as he then imagined, of the possessors of the golden street; the especial seat of the mighty. To sit at a window of the Metropolitan Club, looking serenely down at a world that tramped by, was the next thing—he thought—to Olympus. He could still get his little thrill from rolling up Fifth Avenue; but he found sitting by a window of the Metropolitan Club rather dull.

Entering the club today from the carriageway, he was aware of the Fifth Avenue windows only as an unconsidered feature of the big, handsome room. His business lay in the opposite direction, and in that opposite direction he turned—to a room by no means notable for size or furnishings or outlook. A small room, in fact, with no outlook whatever, and not much furnishings besides a smooth wooden counter extending lengthwise through it; but quite a popular little room. Behind the wooden counter stood an experienced looking person in snow white apron. His experienced eye lighted upon Mr. Hilton; a murmur passed between them; the man in the white apron set out a tall glass with cracked ice in it, a smaller glass, a square brown bottle, and then stood expertly by with his hand on the siphon. Hilton absorbed the beverage deliberately; and the miracle for which his hurt nerves had been craving took place; the sun rose. His cold and quaking brain was suffused with the warmth and flattery of alcohol. He needed flattery just then; the stuff in the brown bottle gave it to him.

Three men from Wall Street whom he knew came into the little room. He greeted them cordially, offering his cigarette case. The four lined up together at the wooden counter. And presently Hilton was talking confidently, exchanging jokes and comments with his friends. He felt confident; contempt for his enemies, or for the forces opposed to him, arose in his mind. The pleasant fumes in his brain lied to him adroitly and he believed the lies.

When he strolled out into the big room with his friends, with an easy, assured air, it lacked only five minutes of five. He had told his chauffeur to come back for him at five; but he was in no hurry. The lacerating pull on his nerves had ceased; he had plenty of time. He gossiped on with his friends a few minutes and went out to the carriageway, where his car was waiting for him. The distance that he had to go was barely a quarter of a mile, but he had not chosen to walk, for he loved all the accessories of luxurious living—like having a handsome car wait to take him only a few blocks.

The machine took him to Fifty-eighth Street, and he told the chauffeur to wait; then he entered the marble lobby of a tall, narrow apartment building. The liveried doorman bowed to him; the liveried elevator operator said "Good evening, Mr. Hilton," with deference. That was as it should be. The lift hoisted him to an upper story, where he let himself into a small apartment, consisting of living room, bedroom, bath, and kitchenette. The living room took up the full width of the building, its northern wall, nearly all glass, admitting sunlight in a flood. The rug, curtains, and silken upholstery of the divan and chairs were of a lovely silvery hue; one of the smartest and most expensive shops on the avenue had seen to the furnishings.

This was not where Hilton lived. His dwelling proper was an apartment over on Riverside Drive, at twelve thousand a year. It had seemed rather sumptuous when he took a five years' lease on it; but it was not a cause for any satisfaction now. The modish drift in the apartment line had been rather toward Park Avenue of late years. Nowadays, if he mentioned that he resided on Riverside Drive, he felt bound to add a deprecatory or explanatory clause—saying he was tied up there with a long lease. Many of his downtown acquaintances lived out of town—up in Westchester County, over in Connecticut, or on Long Island. But a business man must have some place to stay over night in town. Some of these acquaintances engaged rooms, or suites, at the big hotels by the year; but of late there had grown up a fashion among them of having a little apartment like this one—much snugger and pleasanter than a hotel—where one could drop in at any moment of the day or night and stay as long as one pleased.

That idea appealed to Hilton. True, his car could take him from this spot on Fifty Eighth Street to his apartment on Riverside Drive in ten minutes. But he wanted his little apartment, such as his friends had. He explained to his wife that it was important to have a quiet place, away from the office, away from home, to which he could retire and mull over business affairs that required leisure and seclusion; a place also for conferences out of business hours. It pleased him to have his little flat. The rent was only two thousand dollars a year, and a couple of thousand would easily cover the furnishings. Even the kitchenette came in very handy; the icebox was stocked with bottles. He had to have what he wanted, if he could possibly get it. Money ran through his fingers like water. He got himself a little drink, lit a cigar, sat down on the divan, and glanced over the evening papers—which were placed on the table there every evening, whether he visited the apartment or not.

He had been so occupied but a few minutes when the telephone on the table at his elbow rang. He listened to the message and said, "Show her up here." When he put down the receiver he did not resume his paper, but sat expectant, waiting for the curtain to rise on a new adventure. When a knock sounded on the hall door he stepped over and opened it, and found himself looking at

Fashions Beauty Contests

FULL KNEE DEEP LIE THE WINTER FURS

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—As one comes in upon an assemblage of fashionable New York women nowadays one has the feeling that these folks are all waiting to be "done" by Holbein or Rembrandt or Van Dyck. The effect is produced by this season's tendency toward that combination of fabrics so dear to the portrait painter's heart, velvet and fur. Here, as in Paris, the world is wearing velvet, and the likelihood of its being black velvet is almost as strong in America as it is across the sea. Certainly there is an equal chance of its being trimmed with fur.

The Jungle Book of the winter 1920-'21 is fairly complete. Paris has added a few new chapters, such as that on gazelle. And one of the late heroes is caracul, which, clipped or au naturel, has been revived enthusiastically to lighten the dullness of a world of mole, beaver, kolinsky, and squirrel.

This fur is often dyed to match the velvet, duvetyn, or velours with which it is generally associated, and of this fact the figure at the left of the page gives excellent illustration. This is a suit of beige velours de laine trimmed with caracul of the same tone and accompanied by a hat of beige suede fringed with ostrich. And it will be noted that here the collar is orphaned of its pelt in order to provide for the deep border about the coat.

Fur trims not only the suit and wrap of this season. It trims the head. The Cossack himself could not be more confirmed in his taste for all fur millinery than is the New York belle of today. Here again, too, the new star of the jungle world is exploited, and one of the most famous of Parisian milliners has invented a chic little turban made up of two tones of caracul—black and white.

Of course, many of the hats have an hypothesis of velvet. For velvet is the leading material of the millinery world as well as of the dress one. To this foundation, often almost obscured by the superstructure of fur, monkey, beaver, kolinsky, and mole all lend themselves with equal facility. And the whole is usually veiled by one or even two elaborate veils—for it must be remembered that among the whimsies of the season is the duplex veil. When one considers, too, the cost of these ornate trifles one is aghast at this oriental thoroughness of envelopment. Buying one veil is bad enough, but two—O, la la la!

Second from the left is a hat of steel velvet trimmed with gray caracul. With this goes a costume in which steel velveteen is only an incident to the real theme of caracul in somewhat lighter tone than that of the dress. This one piece costume is the foundation for our title—full knee deep lie the winter furs. More accurate would be waist deep. For, as will be seen, the entire skirt is practically of fur.

This frock is by no means a solitary offshoot from the Eskimode. For some winters back French designers have been trying out the all fur skirt with the cloth or velvet top. This season it is reported that some leading women of fashion are actually wearing such costumes. When, however, one doesn't have the courage of one's fur jumpers one may compromise by an apron shaped panel of fur in front. The fur apron is being done a great deal this winter, even in this conservative land.

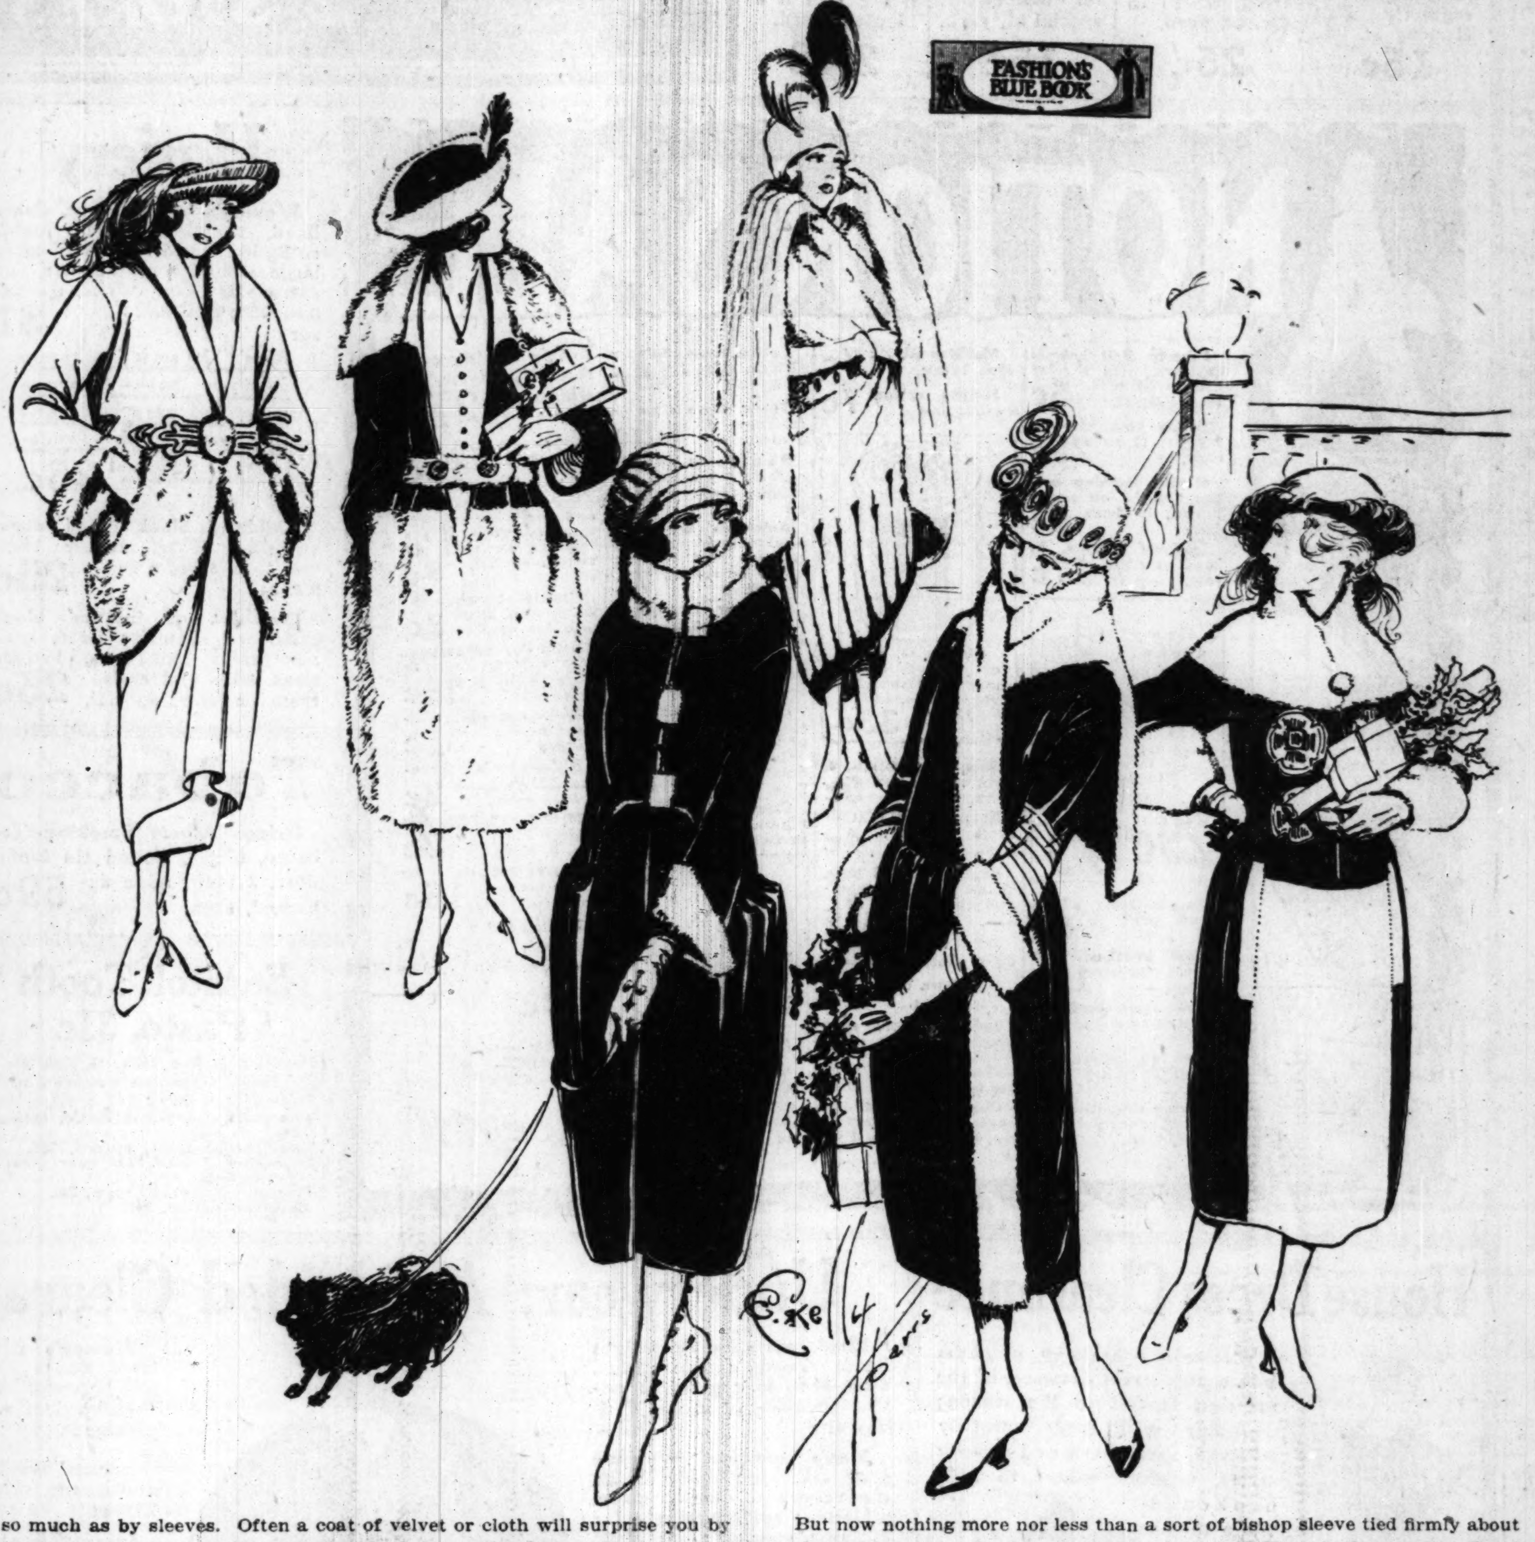
An inverted form of the fur skirt mode is the one in which the pelt convenes about the upper part. From abroad have come all sorts of fascinating costumes of duvetyn and velvet and velours which are made distinctive by a cape or jacket of fur echoing a mere band about the skirt. Even monkey fur has been used for such capes—they extend usually only to the waist line—and caracul, of course, is much favored in this connection.

Apparently, indeed, there are no sins of omission as far as fur is concerned. The designers have done everything with it. There will have to be a throne built for the man or woman who invents any new little use.

The variety and wealth of the fur imagination is brought out by nothing so much as by sleeves. Often a coat of velvet or cloth will surprise you by whole sleeves of fur. And the sleeves don't run in the old hereditary grooves either. Far from it. Time was, you know, when a fur sleeve was wide. But now nothing more nor less than a sort of bishop sleeve tied firmly about the wrist to resist the tiniest attention from Jack Frost is the novelty offered by one foreign furrier in a short jacket of moleskin.



THERE is more than a suggestion of the romantic Louis Seize period in the costume to the right—a black velvet trimmed with dark beaver, velvet of the same tone, and patent leather ornaments. Next, a coat of brown velvet banded and collared in beaver points the way to a charming beaver turban. Another kind of coat is this one of black velvet and gray squirrel, with linings of gray satin and hat of squirrel and chiffon. In the background a Cossack turban of ermine and paradise accompanies a sumptuous dolman of the same fur inset with black seal. Next, we follow the Eskimode in this one piece frock of steel velveteen and caracul of lighter tone. Last, a suit of beige velours de laine is trimmed with caracul of the same tone and worn with a hat of beige suede fringed with ostrich.

Then, too, there are the great gauntlet cuffs which are so much affected this winter. These occur on frocks, suits, and coats, and frequently they run all the way up to the elbow in a great flare that makes you think of the horn of a phonograph.

These gauntlet cuffs are illustrated in the one piece dress of black velvet at the right of the page. Beaver is the pelt employed for these cuffs as well as for the sort of Louis Treize collar, while the color of the fur is echoed in a front panel of beaver colored velvet. For the rest there are stunning ornaments made of beaver colored patent leather embroidered in gay tones of wool, and a hat of tan velours de laine with ostrich fringe.

The velvet coats in the foreground of this page point to two pronounced tendencies of the season. One of these is toward the graceful pelerine—otherwise the cape reaching to the waist line—which was incorporated in so many of the coat models that came to us from abroad.

For the slender woman the caped coat is always charming, but the variation offered by the garment at the right is one that will comply more obligingly with the requirements of the average figure, for the shaping of the beaver collar into a cape avoids any bulk over the arms.

This model is made of brown velvet, and the satin above the fur cuffs is beaver colored. A beaver turban is ornamented by Chinese green feathers, echoing the touch of green stitching on the satin section of the sleeves.

Whether the coat of the season has cape privileges or not, it is usually long waisted, and frequently there is some accent of fullness about the hips. The partiality for both of these coat treatments is illustrated by the model at the left of the foreground.

This half fitted coat of balck velvet is trimmed with gray squirrel, and a large part of the charm of its application is derived from the square fastenings of the pelt. The hat, following the inspiration of the swathed Hindoo turban that has been carried out in all manner of fabrics, is constructed of strips of squirrel, applied upon a foundation of gray chiffon.

Unreasonable husbands and fathers of the land! How unwilling they are to grant ermine as one of the necessities of life! Yet a few lucky ones among us, possessing some influence with the slave of the lamp, do possess this treasure in some form or other.

The model at the right of the background shows a dolman of unspotted ermine remarkable chiefly for its border insertions of black seal. In this combination we sound one of the fur themes of the season. Black and white furs are being constantly pitted against each other in the same garment, whether that be hat or wrap. Indeed, the fount of contrast is not necessarily fur.

Thus one finds on some smart ermine coatees and capes from abroad applique and insertion of black velvet. Indeed, it must be remembered that this is a black and white year, and no woman who selects this combination for any hour of the day need feel nervous about her appearance.

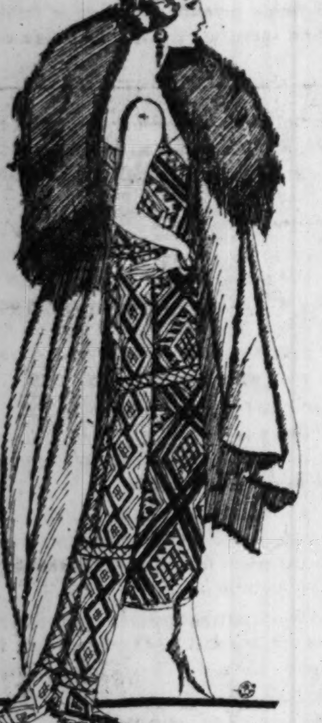
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

MIDDY BLOUSE EFFECT POPULAR.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Speaking of fur coats and other things irrelevant, uninteresting at the moment, and out of season, I have one from America, and the French are crazy about it. I think I am distinguished around town chiefly for my fur coat, and let me hasten to say that it is not of sable. In other words, it is the quality of the fur and the workmanship that take their eye.



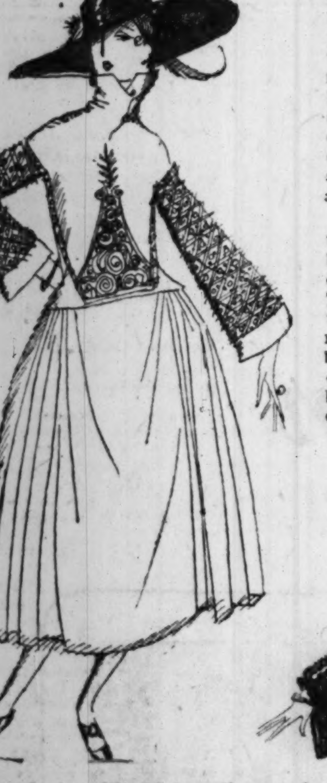
Egyptian lines in black and gold brocade; panels in back form train.

Up at Lucie Hamer's the other day one of the girls tried it on, and went round among the others saying that it was a present made her from America. The girls crowded round me to say how they had admired it, and one of them told what her mother had said the other day when it appeared.

"Why, I thought the French considered that a fur coat could not be made outside of France," I protested.

They laughed. "The Americans think a fur coat can't be made outside of France, but the French think the American furs are so nice—and so beautifully made."

The anecdote carries its own moral. If you know what you are about, you will select a smart American house that sends a clever buyer over every year and get your fur coat at home. These little embroiderers and frame-makers and veil drapers of the house of Lucie Hamer could tell you exactly in what direction ran every skin in my coat, and could tell wherein it had departed from the original French model, and they would tell you at the same time it was an improvement, especially for our American figures. In more departments than one we give the French a run for their money at their own game.



Black velvet, with high collar and heavily embroidered sleeves.

Still on the subject of things more or less inappropriate to the season, have you seen those shopping bags made of fur to match your coat or the trimming of your suit? There is the merest foreshadowing of them this year, but I should not be surprised at a run of them next autumn. The ones of squirrel are the prettiest, I think. After all, I am not speaking out of season as it were, for in the peace time of early spring and summer we prepare for the battle of the furs of autumn, and the shops are running at full speed now.

This is not a rapid pace, however. Did you gather any deduction from my remarks about shopgirls running round the showroom in my fur coat? People in Paris are not buying so that you could notice it. Prices have not come down as we hear they have done in America, and money is not flowing freely.

I was at Callot's this afternoon, and I was the sole visitor throughout the extent and sweep of the stately salons. I had three salesgirls and two designers to wait on me, and I liked the situation.

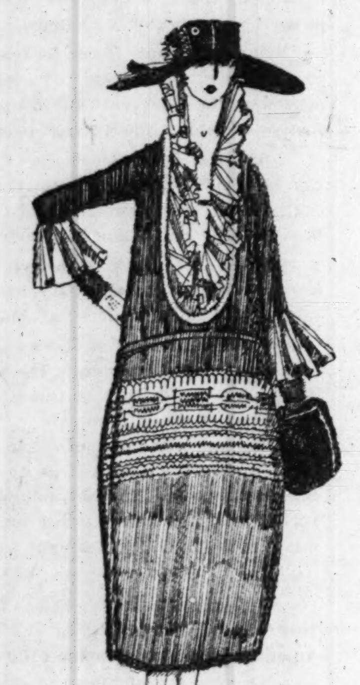
They are talking about spring and the materials for it. Cashmere is the loveliest material they showed me, I think. It is so much softer than serge! Indeed, it is almost like charmeuse in the lovely folds it takes.

They showed me a dress of dark blue cashmere with a plain straight skirt and a separate bodice like a jumper, exactly in the manner of the awfully popular silk jersey jumper of the day. You put it on over your head, and it hangs perfectly straight like a middy blouse, without a belt. But don't imagine it is an insignificant little morning affair! Cashmere is too costly and elegant for that, and just by way of a little surprise for you I kept back that the bottom of the skirt and the bottom of the jumper are banded with a deep border, over six inches wide, of the famous Callot embroidery.

Six o'clock is the dead line for that dress, and it is presentable for anything up to that hour. I have an idea those middy blouse effects will be popular in spring costuming. I am going to have a sketch made of it for another week.

As for those here presented, the first represents an evening gown by Doeuillet, showing the Egyptian line, which will contine to be fashionable for a period to come. The dress is made of black and gold brocade. It has two sashlike panels in the back that fall from the shoulders and sweep the floor in a train. The crossbands on the skirt and the trains are of gold encrusted in turquoises. A manteau accompanies it of white velvet, with a huge collar of gray fox.

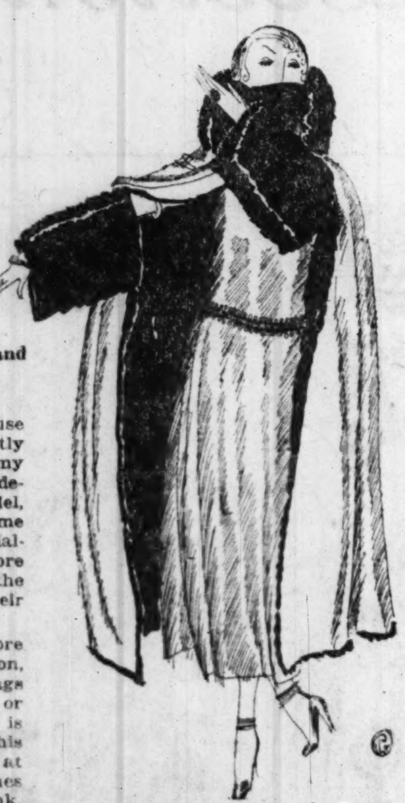
The second model is one of the latest by Poiret. It is of black velvet, with heavily embroidered sleeves. The embroidery is in uncut, imitation precious stones and jet beads. It outlines the seams of the bodice, and goes up the front in a gilet. The high collar is a feature of the costume. The hat is of black velour trimmed in a gray feather glycerine.



Afternoon gown by Worth; blue serge embroidered in soutache braid.

The third offering is by Worth. It is an afternoon gown of marine blue serge embroidered in blue soutache braid run with silver threads. There is a deep opening from throat almost to waistline, and this is edged with rabbit fur. It is filled in with a deep ruffle of black faille, which is repeated on the sleeves. The hat is by Reboux, and is of "monsieur" silk, like the material of men's evening hats, trimmed with a black cocarde of grosgrain ribbon, accented by a pearl hatpin.

The fourth sketch represents a mantle of beige colored faille silk with brown sealskin lining and collar and cuffs—for which there are no sleeves. This is worn over a dress of pale gray taffeta, stiff and simple, entirely unornamated except for a jewel studded belt of green, blue, and red stones—quite "middle ages" looking, as somebody said, and made it clear that he did not mean middle aged.



Mantle of beige colored faille silk; sealskin lining, collar, and cuffs.

IS PRESENT DAY DRESS IMMODEST?

What do you think about the present day dress? Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, says it is indecent. Do you think so or not? Do you approve of the modern maid's rouged cheeks and abbreviated skirts, or no? Do you think her morals different than those of the maid of a decade or so ago as the result of her dress vagaries? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on this much discussed topic. Send along your opinion. Write on one side of paper only. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

Modest Ones Unsung.

People seldom notice the ordinary. That is the reason that many exclaim over the immodesty of present day styles. They pass by dozens of modestly dressed women and girls and never see them, but the one girl whose skirt is too short and too tight claims their attention.

But honestly now, any one who starts out to investigate the subject will be surprised. There are dozens of girls whose skirts reach their shoe tops to one whose dress barely covers her knees. And there certainly are some changes in styles noticeable which are great improvements, at least for the working girl.

No longer need she totter along on high French heels or look like a frump in old ladies' shoes, for now she can buy walking shoes that are both good looking and comfortable. No longer need she fear that her most embarrassing moment will come when she attempts to get her wide brimmed hat through the street car door. The small, close fitting hat has done away with that.

And no longer in the office does she put her hand to the back of her belt every time she rises from her chair to make sure that waist and skirt are properly adjusted. The comfortable one piece dress has eliminated that.

So, all together, the working girl has cause to be thankful that fashions today consider her needs as well as those of her sister of leisure, and that she can be stylishly and at the same time modestly dressed, notwithstanding the cries of some men who indulge in extremes in statements as some girls indulge in extreme in dress.

J. J. K.

Not Changed for Better.

The girl of today is different from the girl of twenty-five years ago. She has changed with the times. Twenty-five years ago there were no automobiles, no movies, no cabarets, no silk stockings—among the medium class at least—not satin slippers for street wear. Of course, women dress to improve their looks, which means to attract men. Girls of today think only of pleasure; their brain development is all along that line. As or manners, they haven't any, especially those under 23 years of age. All they know is cheap shows, powder and paint, gum and slang.

Embarrassing Moments

Turkey 'n Everything.

My most embarrassing moment overtook me a few years ago when I was younger than I am now and something to eat was my chief concern. I was working in a shoe store and a new cafeteria opened up across the street from us a few days before Thanksgiving.

"Turkey dinner, 35 cents," was the sign that greeted our eyes on the day before, and I rushed hastily across the street at lunch time without stopping to read further. I received my portion of turkey and proceeded to fill up my tray with mashed potatoes, gravy, cranberry sauce, etc., and walked up to the cashier's desk.

"Ninety cents," said the cashier, blandly, and my most embarrassing moment began when I had to put back everything but the turkey, as I had just 35 cents in my pocket.

H. W.

Got Two Surprises.

One day I received a package from my sister, and opened it with much curiosity, as I was not expecting anything from her. It was a beautiful piece of silk—just enough for a blouse. After several days passed and no word was received concerning it, I decided it was meant as a surprise, so I made it into a lovely blouse, and when I had worn it several times I was surprised and embarrassed to receive this note: "I am sending material for a dress for Adele (our niece) for her birthday. Will you please make it for her? Sister."

W. J. B.

Saved the Earring.

One day, as I was getting off a street car, I happened to feel my earring slide down past my face, and as I looked to see where it had fallen I spied a man's foot swiftly descending upon it. My first thoughts were to stop his foot from crushing my earring, so I grabbed his ankle and held it in the air, and as I did so he nearly lost his balance. In the meantime, with my free hand, I came to the rescue of my 75 cent earring, and lost no time getting off the street car to save myself further embarrassment.

R. H.

Looked Like a Bargain.

I was sent to get a dozen of eggs, for which I paid 71 cents. On my way home I saw a sign which said, "Strictly fresh eggs, 54c a dozen." I went into the shop and asked the clerk if they were really strictly fresh eggs, and he said, "Why, my dear, we just paint them." I was in a paint store.

The VALUE of a PLEASANT VOICE

by Antoinette Donnelly

MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. WONDER what's the matter with the American voices anyway. Every little spell there comes a voice from across the seas, owned by some traveling Englishman or Frenchman or Italian just returned and on safe ground for such speech: "The American girls are beautiful. They dress beautifully—but O, messieurs, their voices are not pleasant like their faces."

We probably might return the compliment were we to write back in our letters of thanks for courtesies extended during a sojourn in foreign lands, were we to judge as casually as our visitors do us. There being folk of low and high degree in every land, there necessary follow voices of high and low quality. For, after all, a well modulated, soft voice is a matter of good breeding.

Should Start Young.

Therefore, voice training should be taught a child just as the daily use of the toothbrush and the daily bath is taught her, if mother wishes her to be endowed with a beauty asset that is worth more than a pretty face.

A pretty face and figure may be ruined with one sentence from a girl's lips. Many a man has found his fond illusions destroyed by hearing issue from the admired one's lips a raucous, penetrating, high keyed voice.

Shopping the other day, a beautiful young thing approached the glove counter at which I sat. Busy clerks and floorwalkers paused to give her what a young brother would call the "once-over." To the eye she was the thing of beauty and the joy forever that poets rave about. But she spoke—and spoiled it all. You wanted to reach for ear mufflers. A whining, harsh, nasal query, "How much are these?" undid her.

On the opposite hand, have you not heard of telephone romances in which the fair owner of a charming voice had not even to submit her face at all in the competition for some Prince Charming's hand? I have. And what's more I've known of them to turn out happily, for a fine voice has not only a "getting" quality but a "holding" one.

Good Voice Soothes.

Nothing can get on your nerves as will a voice of the ill bred, strident toned person whose lot is cast along side of yours. And what so soothing as a well modulated, pleasing form of elocution!

Correcting the fault is not the simplest thing in the world. But it can be done, as in the case of one beautiful girl of my acquaintance with stage ambitions. She applied at a manager's door and she had not got out ten words of her well rehearsed application speech when the gentleman in the chair interrupted her unsparingly with: "Miss S., you have looks and you may have a capacity for study. You may have brains, but your voice would bar you from every stage in the country unless you were going in for some cheap burlesque act. If you will go to some good teacher in voice expression and study hard with her for not less than six months and then come back to me I may be able to do something for you."

Miss S. did as advised. And the first thing she learned was that she had been talking from her throat and by some queer route her voice detoured until it came out through her nose instead of being shot straight out from the diaphragm. The support for all pure tone comes from the diaphragm, and talking from the throat without this foundation results in so many of the unpleasant voices that reach the critical ear.

Taught to Breathe.

She was taught how to breathe properly. An exercise she did many times morning and night was to lie on a flat surface with hands on diaphragm and take long, sleepy breaths until she could do this breathing simply and naturally.

She was taught it is the vowel that carries the word; that the consonants are the machine to shoot the vowels out with, and that the harsh consonants are what offend the ear. She practiced daily reading slowly and deliberately from short poems, being careful not to slur words nor run them together, and above all to listen with an ear for defects to the pitch of the voice.

Just as one denied the home training may acquire table etiquette by observation and by the will to do the right and nice thing, so may a sweet, pleasing voice be gained. It does not require an instructor, although an instructor may criticize to the betterment of the voice and help wonderfully. But if one is conscious of shrill tones and would like to subdue them she can practice voice regulation in her own room. Take one small verse—something you know and like—go over and over it. Breathe from the diaphragm as you read and listen and correct.

A too weak voice, when the owner is made to repeat much to her discomfiture and more to the discomfiture of the listener, is a matter of wrong breathing which may be easily enough corrected by the same reading and breathing course.

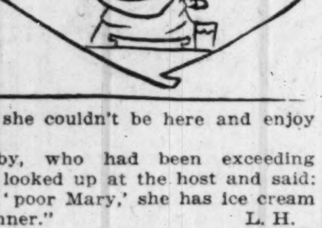
Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Mary, due to illness, remained at home with grandfather when father, mother, and Bobby accepted an invitation to dinner. She was to receive ice cream for dinner as a reward.

The guests were being served when the host remarked: "Poor Mary, I'm sorry she couldn't be here and enjoy this."



Bobby, who had been exceeding quiet, looked up at the host and said: "Yes, 'poor Mary,' she has ice cream for dinner."

L. H.

Bob and Dick are brothers. One morning their mother gave Bob 15 cents and sent the children to the store to buy a loaf of bread. The bread was 14 cents and Bob kept the change. The next day when the children's clothes were being picked up for the laundry, Bob eagerly sought out one of his suits, dived his hand into a pocket and drew out something.

"What have you there?" asked his mother.

"A penny," replied Bob.

"Where did you get it?" his mother questioned.

"I saved it up," said Bob.

His mother allowed him to keep the change.

A few days later Dick was given 50 cents with which to get a 10 cent bar of soap. When he brought back the soap he did not give his mother the change.

She asked, "Where is the change?" Dick replied, "Oh, I thaved it up!"

My Funniest Traveling Experience

What has been your funniest traveling experience on sea or on land? Your eyes and ears are usually more sensitive to sights and sounds when you are in an unaccustomed environment. Remember how your fellow passengers—perfect strangers—all seemed to be staring at you when you absent-mindedly . . . ? Probably didn't seem funny at all to you at the time. You have done your laughing since. The thing to do is to recall in detail the situation that lingers in memory. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Traveling Experience." Address Traveling Experiences, The Tribune, Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper. A Sound Like Rain.

In the month of August of the year of 1919 our family went on a tour of the eastern states. It was a beautiful day when we arrived in a small town in Ohio, and as it was drawing near evening we decided to rent a room at some hotel and stay until the next day. Our plans were that we would arise early so we could make a certain town before night time.

We secured a beautiful room in a wonderful old mansion, which had been turned into a hotel. Everything went well and smoothly until the next morning. Dad awoke at 5:30 and said: "My goodness, it is pouring rain outside. We can never think of driving in weather like this. We will sleep a little longer, or until the rain stops."

At 11 o'clock he again got up, but alsa, it was still pouring.

At noon he thought he would look out of the window and see if he could see any signs of clearing up.

Lo and behold, what didn't he see but a beautiful stone fountain with water running down its sides, which made a noise that resembled rain.

We all laughed until we were almost sick. It surely was a funny traveling experience which I shall never forget as long as I live.

PORK VARIETY.

WINTER time is pork eating time. Even fat salt pork can be made into attractive dishes and it has calories to burn. This may sound figurative but it is a solid fact, for fat pork is almost pure food fuel or contains over 3,200 calories per pound. We must always bear in mind in our sane eating plans that energy is a daily requirement, and that practically the getting of energy and the keeping our bodies warm through the consumption of fuel foods, is one and the same process, the heat being a by-product. And of the foods that go through this process those that yield the most of energy and heat are the fat foods. Sugar and starchy foods give us heat and energy, but a pound of either of these yields only one-half an ordinary fat food, and less than that when our food is a pure fat.

A book of no small volume could be written on how fat foods have been wasted and despised. They are, indeed, the most objectionable of all foods when coarsely treated and poorly cooked. Nevertheless they remain the very gold of foods, much food in small bulk like much worth in small bulk in the case of gold.

Sausages Widely Used.

But pork fats of various orders have held their own, even when under the shadow of great disapproval, and even when subjected to quite imperfect or wretchedly poor cooking. There is no animal which yields meat in such variety, the differences between different forms being so great as to make them seem like almost unrelated meats.

Perhaps we place first the cured parts of the pig, the bacons and hams. There is much of variation from kind to kind, even among these forms, because of different methods of curing. Fresh roast pork and chops give us primary meat dishes, and sausages are almost or quite as widely used as bacon.

The secondary parts have also come back into their old time service—the pig's feet (pickled), the head (cheese), the tongue and lips, and even the tail, the liver, heart, melts and brain, are now handled with great expertness by the packing houses, and presented with the most undeniable attractiveness, at any rate to those who buy wholesale. It is not common to see these presented with equal lure to the retail buyer.

Cook Book Gives Aid.

One of the packing companies at least, and perhaps all, packs pig's feet, pig's ears, pork plucks, pork melts, etc., in boxes, so that they have as great uniformity of appearance as a large box of dates. Moreover they label these "fancy meats," and have put out a cook book of elegant daintiness, with the title "Unusual Meats." Pictures of the cooked article, in color, precede each recipe. Among these are pork melts in casserole (Provencale), "pork liver—Fermiere," "pork hearts—Wayside Inn," "pork brains—deviled," "pork kidneys—Friar," "pork lips—favorite," "pork tails—Westchester," "pork feet in batter—Epicurienne," "pork tongue with Italian sauce." Seeing these pictures, you can judge what imagination and skill has gone into presenting these often despised parts.

Of late years the United States department of agriculture at the beginning of winter sends out a warning to "cook pork well," pointing out the danger of eating raw or imperfectly cooked pork products. This year the announcement said that it was prompted to issue this warning at the approach of the Christmas season because at this "season, especially, quantities of certain kinds of pork products which many people are accustomed to eat uncooked are prepared in homes and on farms, as well as commercially. Uncooked pork frequently contains parasites of microscopic size known as trichinæ, and persons who eat uncooked pork run the risk of contracting trichinosis, a most painful and distressing disease which sometimes ends fatally in spite of any treatment. The health of patients who recover from the acute stages of the disease is often permanently impaired."

Proper Cooking Necessary.

In this connection that part of the warning which reads as follows might be considerably expanded or emphasized: "In the case of uncured pork the thoroughness of the cooking can be judged by whether the meat clear to the center of the piece has lost its reddish, bloody appearance and has become more or less white in color. Heat penetrates slowly into pieces of meat during cooking, and the temperature near the center ordinarily never approaches very closely that of the surrounding air or water."

The warning tells how long to cook pork, for instance a ham put into boiling water is cooked for three hours, which certainly is none too much, and if the water is kept violently boiling for a long period that is far too short a time, since the outside may be so hardened that the heat cannot easily get to the center. In the directions given, three more minutes per pound is allowed in winter.

The Trichinæ Danger.

The trichinæ parasites are so small that even when present in large numbers it is thought that they do not affect the desirability of meat and they die and become entirely harmless when exposed to sufficient heat. In this connection it is important to notice that the United States says that "with certain exceptions it is dangerous to eat uncooked pork even though it has been marked 'U. S. Inspected and Passed.'" This is because uncooked pork is likely to contain live trichinæ no matter how healthy the animal from which it came may have appeared, or how excellent the meat looks. A satisfactory method of meat inspection to discover these parasites has not yet been devised.

It behooves those who would keep pork in high repute as a food to take every precaution to cook it properly, which in the main means thoroughly. But too hot a fire hardens meat, and may cause some parts to be undercooked while others are cooked too much. In boiling a ham whether it is put into cold water and one hour allowed to bring it to boiling point, or whether it is dropped into boiling water the water should not boil violently for more than a minute. The same thing is true when a fresh shoulder is boiled. When pork is used as an accompaniment, as in pork and beans, it usually gets long cooking and is improved in flavor thereby.

How to Use the Patterns

THIS overblouse, No. 9052, will make up well in any of the usual blouse materials — georgette, voile, crepe de chine, satin, or taffeta—the choice of material being governed by what it is to be worn over, as well as the occasions.

There is nothing difficult about the making or cutting, but first class work, especially on the shoulders (where the fastening is) and the slits at the waist line through which the belt slips, is absolutely necessary.

Taffeta or satin would be a little easier to handle, and would be most attractive. Embroidery in wool, beads or silk, or a combination of beads with the wool or silk embroidery, would be effective, and quite all the trimming needed.

Before cutting the slits at the waist line, baste a piece of the material over the line, on the right side of the blouse, and mark the slit line with a basting thread, taking the stitches through the piece of cloth. Then stitch around this basting on the machine, keeping the seam not over one-eighth inch wide, excepting as you near the ends, where it must be as narrow as possible.

After the stitching is finished turn the stitched on piece through to the wrong side, and allow it to act as a binding on the right side. The four sides should be turned in and neatly hemmed down—the stitches, of course, not being visible on the right side.

These bound openings should then be overhanded together with basting thread, taking care not to pull the stitches. This basting will hold the openings close together, and after the blouse is finished and the final pressing given, cut these stitches and remove carefully.

All these hints about care may sound rather foolish sometimes to women who rush with sewing, but the rushed, careless work, with poor finishing, always shows with great clearness, and there is nothing attractive about it. One can, when accustomed to cutting and sewing, do rapid work without sacrificing any of the accuracy and care which are essential to well made clothes.

Navy blue gabardine would be good looking for No. 9856. The dress can be made entirely of one material, or the vest, collar, and revers can be of satin in black or any preferred color.

Where the neck of the dress is to be finished like the picture, it is necessary to do the work exactly right or trouble will ensue.

The seams of the dress should be basted and dress fitted. Then, after finishing the shoulder seams, cut the dress down the front from the neck to the single perforation showing the end of the opening.

Cut the collar sections, making the under side of the collar of the dress material, and seam it to the neck of the dress as the notches show, pinning the middle of the collar to the middle of the neck in the back, and then balance of the way in both directions. This seam, of course, is made on the wrong side of the dress, with the wrong side of the collar on the same side that the seam is made. This seam is then notched across the back where the curve comes, and then should be pressed open flat.

The material that is to be used for the outside of collar and revers is then cut, and seamed together, on the wrong side from the end of the collar, on each end, up to the point where the dress is turned back. These two short seams are then pressed open, and these pieces are laid in place over the matching parts of the dress [right sides to right sides], and stitched in a half inch seam from one end to the other. Of course, the seam must be narrow as possible at the end of the opening.

Then the collar and revers are turned right side out, the edges being held flat by a basting, and the outside of the collar is clipped across the back. The edges are turned in and basted down over the first seam and hemmed. Be sure to see that every part is smooth before hemming the turned-in edge down.

Look in the embroidery catalogues, and find a deep border design for the skirt. With some smaller motifs on the vest no other trimming will be needed. Those pockets with the opening cut on a slant are smart looking, but must be handled with care.

Cut a paper pattern of the pocket first, measuring the depth you want it to be from the low end of the opening. The pocket should be cut straight across the bottom and straight up both sides, letting the side of the pocket, on the high side of the opening, be cut straight up to the end of the opening. I hope this is made clear. The idea is to have a pocket that hangs straight and yet has the top of it cut on the exact slant of the opening.

No. 9868 is a smart design for a small girl, and is so cut as to show a bolero effect in the front—a style that has been so popular with grown girls, and still is.

The skirt is a one piece one, laid in box plaits across the front and back, and gathered on the sides. The waist is cut kimono fashion, with sleeves and body in one, and the sash is fastened to the applied front.

Crepe de chine is a favorite material for these dresses, and voile is also good. Some do not like challis, but it is shown in all sorts of colorings, and nothing wears better or looks prettier for an every day dress.

Don't forget to reinforce the seams, at the under arm, to prevent tearing there. It takes less time to do this than to do the mending that will be necessary, and looks much better.

The Man Who Borrows.

DOROTHY sat silently through two luncheons this week. She not only refrained from joining in our conversation, but seemed not to be listening to us. On the third day, after she had greeted us in a listless fashion and relapsed into her absent minded manner of the previous two days, Ann startled her out of her abstraction, so that her attention was once more focused upon us, by brusquely demanding to be told what the matter was.

Dorothy reddened and looked a bit shamefaced as she glanced from one to the other of us, but she spoke frankly enough as her eyes finally rested on Ann.

"Do you remember that good looking blonde chap I introduced to you the last time you called for me at the office? Well," she said, after Ann nodded that she did, "he borrowed $10 from me one day last week, promising to return it the next day, but he hasn't given it back. He's had a pay day, too, since then, but he's never even mentioned it to me.

"I've been rather upset about it for the last few days. While I can hardly afford to lose the money, that doesn't bother me as much as the disillusionment I've had regarding the 'boy's character.'"

We could see that Ann was becoming exasperated at Dorothy's recital, but she waited until Dorothy paused before she said:

"Well, I thought you had more sense than to be taken in by a cheap crook."

"But I didn't think he was a—crook, as you call it. He's borrowed small sums of money from me before, but he's always paid it back when he said he would. He seemed like a nice chap. Educated. Well dressed. Knows a lot of awfully nice people. Accommodating. Why shouldn't I have loaned him money when I had it and it was inconvenient for him to go to the bank?"

"Why shouldn't you have loaned him money!" Ann repeated after her. "Dorothy, you deserve to lose that ten dollars. Don't you know that no man with even a shred of decency would think of borrowing money from a girl—even if he could and intended to pay it back? You'll find out, if you'll inquire, I think, that this young fellow has borrowed, or tried to borrow, from Dorothy blushed again, but looked steadily at Ann as she said: "I've already found out that he's tried to borrow from the other girls. I didn't like to tell any of them that I had loaned him money, so, without letting on about my own experience, I found out this morning, by adroitly questioning one of the girls, that he has made a practice of—that sort of thing.

"She told me that she had stopped lending him money a long time ago and that she would have warned me against him, but she didn't think he would try it on me—he seemed too eager to make a good impression. I didn't tell her that he had tried and succeeded. I listened with interest to her story.

"It seems he used different tactics with her," Dorothy went on, "than he did with me. He never told me any hard luck stories. In fact, I was beginning to suspect him of putting on a bit about his many social engagements and the amount of money he had to spend frivolously in order to keep the pace his friends set for him.

"His line with Alice was that he was heavily obligated to his family and that it took every cent he earned to help them make both ends meet. She was sorry for him at first and gave him money from time to time. She considered it rather as charity than a loan, for she let him understand that she didn't expect him to pay it back. She discovered, however, that his family were in comfortable circumstances, that he never gave them any financial help, and that the money he borrowed was simply for his own pleasure and amusement. She never loaned him a cent after that discovery.

"If she had told that to me before this morning," sighed Dorothy, "I should never have been so foolish as to donate that $10 to him."

"The experience cost you enough," said Ann, "to have a lasting effect. But I want to warn you that no matter what kind of an appeal a man makes to you for money, don't give it to him. The right sort of a man never asks a girl for a loan. When you give to the wrong sort you're not helping him; you're only encouraging him in his despicable behavior."

"Ann needn't worry," Dorothy said to me as we were leaving the restaurant together. "I'll remember this experience and her advice—always."

The HOME HARMONIOUS

THE STAIRCASE.

WHAT Juliet's balcony was to the garden of the Capulets, the staircase is to the house; and if spaces have character then the stairway is blessed with the essence of romance. To children it is most particularly fascinating. For is it not true that one of the earliest pictorial memories is that of Cinderella fleeing at midnight from the palace, trailing her lovely silvery draperies down the wide stairway, and leaving behind her the precious crystal slipper? Then, too, the stories of the poor artist in his garret. The rickety stairs leading to his high abode were more significant of poverty than the miserable attic itself. There's a world of meaning in steps—the steps you think of taking, the steps you take, the steps you build. Listen to this from Louis Couperus:

"Suddenly, on the staircase, it had beamed open before her in her soul, like a great flower of light, a mystic rose with glistening petals, into whose golden heart she now looked for the first time." You see? It was on the staircase that the lovely lady suddenly discovered that she had fallen in love. Most appropriate.

If you are building a house, you can hazard the guess that your staircase will be most important, as well as scenic. It will witness your welcomings and your farewellings. It will be the abiding place of the children, where they will laugh and play, and where they also will whack their shins and bump their noses. Secrets will be told there, tears will be wept there, hands will be pressed there.

When your architect offers you his plans, watch carefully after his steps. He may be a wonder at all the detailistic arts of the builder, but it is on the stairs that the best of them trip. To combine beauty and utility, to give the staircase the correct tone, the dignity and the charm that every self-respecting stairway demands, requires the effort of the genius. "It is all perfect—except the stairway; we fell down on that," is the plaintive cry of more than one unhappy soul who has gone through the house building ecstatical madness and has come out fairly well and intact. A meager, thin, scrawny stairway gives a look of hunger and meanness to the whole house, while the too grand and ostentatious mounting place imparts the impression of cheap splendor. Like everything else, good taste is the requirement. But it is of the staircase that the guest, standing at the entrance of the habitation, gets his first glimpse into the intimate life of the family. Have it right.

Perhaps the first thought in planning the stairway is the need of broad, easy treads. Also the construction should be so perfect that there is never any "squeak" when in use; nor should any evidence of nails appear. Simplicity and good lines are essential, and every detail of the staircase plan should make for a combination of grace and durability.

There is of course an intimate relationship between the entrance hall and staircase; they must belong to each other, and both should convey an expression of hospitality. If there is ample space the hallway becomes something more than a mere passage; it expands into a reception room, and then can be made into a place of real attractiveness. Dark stairs leading up into gloomy shadows are sinister and uninviting, and that is why the architect particularly delights in a landing midway of the length and a cunning window or group of windows. There is no particular reason why stairs should be dark, and, considering the safety of life and limb, there is every reason in the world why they should be light. Light there should also be in the hallway, since human folk are neither bats nor owls.

Gone completely is the hideous, old fashioned hall tree or hat rack. Closets are provided as storage places for outer garments, so the hall can be unlittered and in a state of repose. A console or small table, backed with a bit of tapestry, a good mirror or a flower painting, flanked on either side by a chair, will do for the furnishings, though there are an infinite variety of charming arrangements for making the hallway beautiful.

Stairways can be made more interesting than the layman imagines. One need not build a mere "flight" uniting the lower floor with the upper. Until one makes an effort to study the subject it is unbelievable how many variations can be managed and how much art can be designed and executed into balusters and newel posts. Even narrow, steep stairways, so suggestive of the economy of Puritan times, which are seen in old fashioned houses that have been standing for many years, can become decorative and charming by placing upon them the correct carpeting and by looking carefully after the wall paper. One such flight has been rejuvenated by fastening old Venetian irons to the side wall opposite the railing and connecting these with cords and tassels. This original idea immediately lifted the stairway out of the commonplace atmosphere and imparted a real touch of decorative value. What had been plain was suddenly enriched, like a dull face animated with a pretty thought.

Since the wall beside the stairway is in reality a part of the hall itself, there isn't much to be done with it, though paneled effects are always good, and occasionally there can be an indulgence in a good painting hung midway up the flight. Technically, the stairway is no place for pictures, since one does not fancy pausing there to study or enjoy high art. The old fashioned niche, bearing a good art piece, is vastly better; or small wall candelabra. If there is a landing, with sufficient space, you can place your grandfather's clock there. This will be convenient above stairs and below, for the clock can either be looked up to, or down upon, as if it were a casual friend, open to both admiration and scrutiny.

Nu-tro

The New Milk Product

Try This Pancake Recipe

2½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 level teaspoons baking powder, ¼ cup sugar, 1 cup Nu-tro, 1 cup water, 1 egg beaten, 2 tablespoons butter melted.

Sift ingredients, add sugar with Nu-tro and water. Add egg and butter. Mix and cook on hot greased griddle. Serve with maple syrup or as desired.

For Fluffy, Flavory Pancakes

Use this
New Milk Product

For fluffy pancakes made the Nu-tro way try the recipe above. Wholesome and pure, Nu-tro is an economical milk product that makes everything you cook more tasty and delicious.

Nu-tro is a blend of pure, fresh cow's milk, with the animal fats extracted, evaporated to double strength and enriched with refined coconut fat, resulting in a product of far greater food value than anything of a similar nature.

Nu-tro for all milk and cream uses

In coffee, in cooking, in baking, use Nu-tro just as you would milk or cream. Your grocer has Nu-tro and it costs very little to test its goodness and economy.

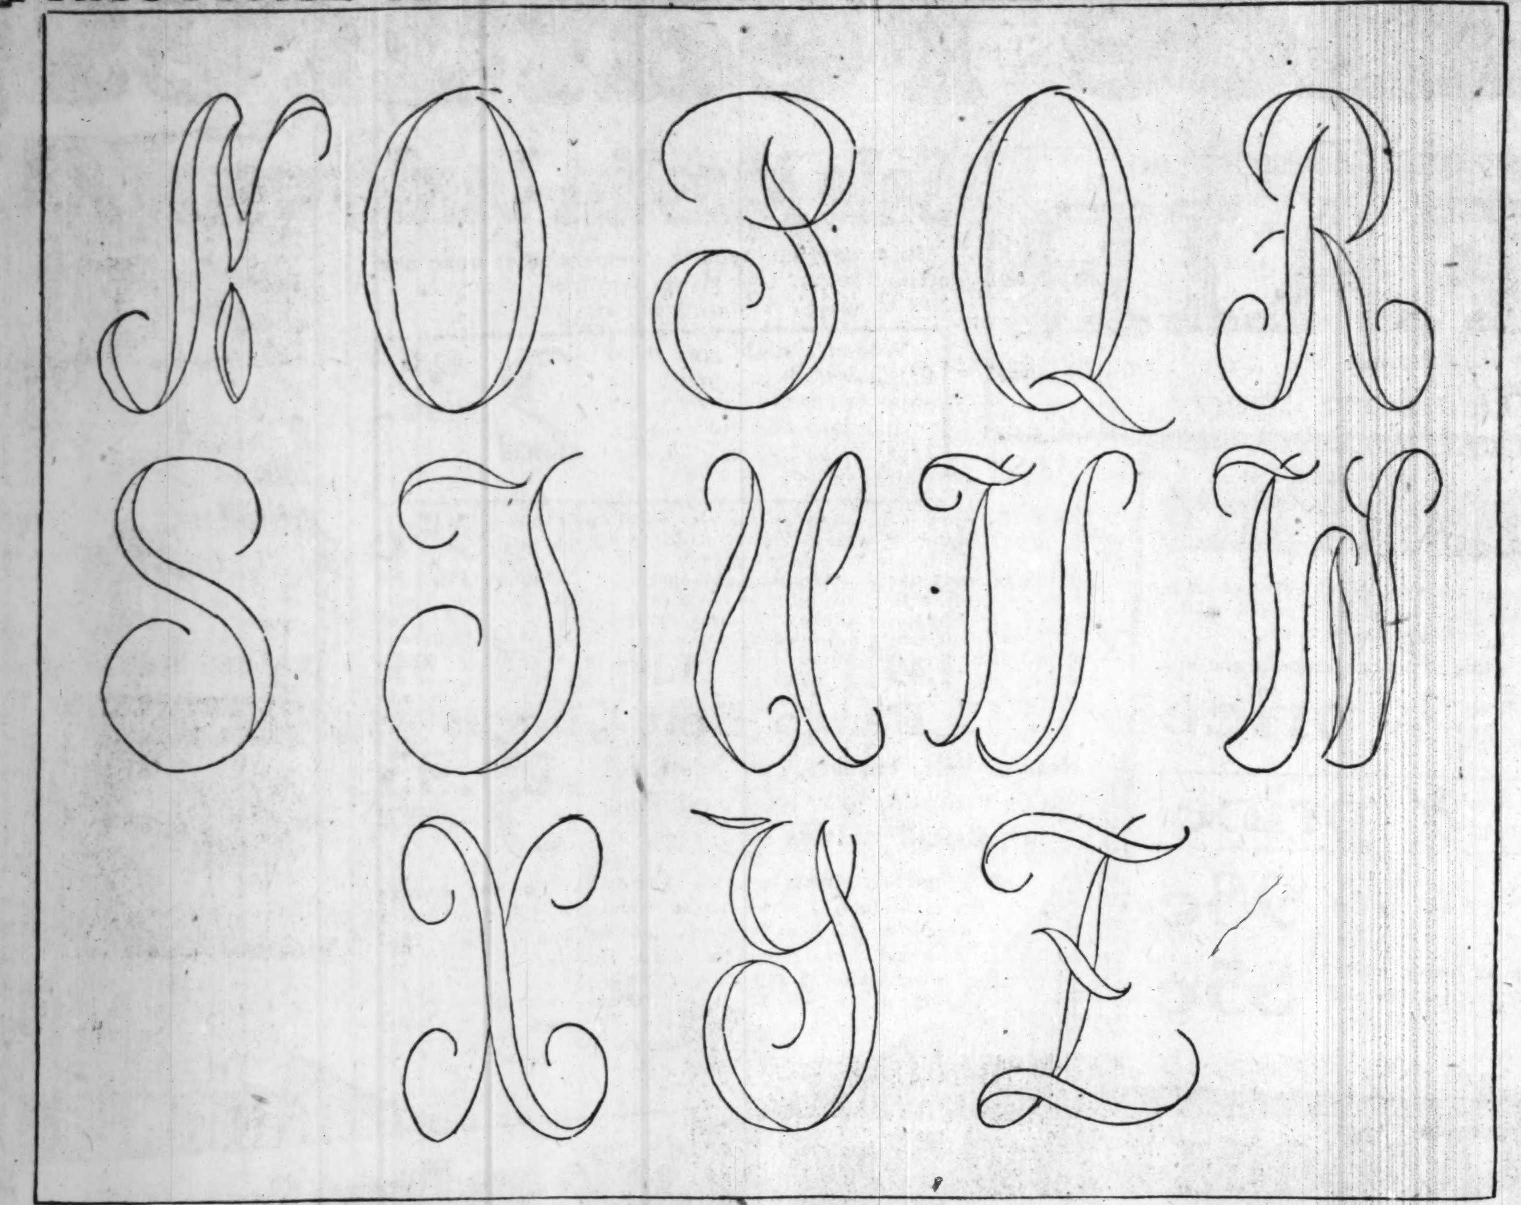
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE



N O P Q R
S T U V W
X Y Z

Questions on problems confronting the home sewer will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE ALPHABET.

INITIAL letters should first be outlined in a close, even running stitch, then the spaces filled in with a chain or other padding stitch. Where a running stitch is used the stitch should be longer on the upper side, and it is always heavier in the center than toward the edges, thus giving a curved or rounded surface when finished. The padding stitches must all be on the right side, having the stitches that come to the wrong side as small as possible to keep the wrong side flat.

The embroidering should be done in a frame, and the stitch is a simple over and over, taken evenly and close together, always running at right angles to the padding and taken as close together as is possible without lapping.

Letters are sometimes outlined with the over and over stitch, and the enclosed spaces filled with the seed stitch, but there is nothing more beautiful than the plain "laid" embroidery work if perfectly done.

The first half of this alphabet appeared last Sunday.

A FRIEND IN NEED

"Do you think you could get a pair of ballet slippers, size 2, for me? I am to dance at the school entertainment, and I just can't wait for the day to come. My mother cannot buy them for me, as we have nine children in the family, and my father is not with us. "S. W."

It would be a pity were Sophie disappointed—for she does so want to dance at the entertainment.

"I am trying to support my three children by taking in washing. I call for and deliver the laundry and have only a worn sweater coat to wear. My boy had pneumonia and the youngest child the whooping cough, so you see I have had a hard time managing on little. I am 5 feet 3½ inches tall, and weigh 110 pounds. The children's ages are: boy 7, girls 4 years and 9 months. I hope you can help me. MRS. D."

"Would you try to get a bassinette and baby clothes for my new arrival? My husband is working only three days a week, and he is not well. My six other children need clothing too. Boys, 13½, 4½, and baby boy 18 months. The girls' ages are 12½, 10½, and 9. You have helped me before in my need. MRS. C. S."

"I have cotton and silk pieces that can be used as quilt patches, also woolen goods that can be made into carpet rags, which I thought some one may like to have. "C. G."

There are many who will want these pieces, I know, so please let me have your applications early. Thank you C. G. for your kindness.

"I am returning to work after two months' idleness, my wages to be $10.00 a week. I have a wife and a baby 17 months old. We can barely exist on my present wages, and feel keenly my long time of idleness. My wife and I are greatly in need of shoes and clothing, and assure you anything we receive will be appreciated. A. R."

"We have quite a number of sixty-five note piano player rolls, which we would gladly give to some one who can use them. L. C. W."

Thank you. Your generous offering is greatly appreciated.

"A shut-in invalid would be glad indeed to receive new pieces of silks, satins or ribbons, nothing smaller than four inches, suitable for a quilt. "A READER."

"I am an ex-soldier's wife, not strong. I have a heavy baby and I am unable to give him all the air he needs to keep him well, as I haven't a baby buggy and he is too heavy to carry. My husband is sick and does not work steadily. I thank you for your help, and will be glad to call anywhere in the city if a baby buggy is offered. "MRS. C. B."

Who will help this mother and her baby to enjoy the sunshine and fresh air by providing a baby carriage?

Food For Busy Men

You men who sit at a desk all day—make up for your lack of exercise by eating the right sort of food. Bran muffins, for instance.

You will like bran muffins made from Pillsbury's Health Bran according to the special recipe on the Pillsbury package. They are delicious. And you will find that the coarse, clean flakes of Pillsbury's Health Bran—not cooked or "doctored" in any way—are the most effective form of wheat bran, nature's laxative.

Always buy Pillsbury's Family of Foods—different in kind, but alike in quality. At your grocer's.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Better Ways to Play.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it alright for boys and girls between 15 and 16 to play kissing games at parties? "NICKY."

No, Nicky, it is not. There are books and books on the market with games and entertainment features that are wholesome and designed for youths and maids of your tender years.

Just About Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think a boy two years my senior is too young? All my girl friends are telling me he's too young for me. "AN ANXIOUS GIRL."

Do they want you to be an old man's darling, Anxious? I'd suspect them! Jealous, maybe. No, that's just about the right age difference.

Something Quite New.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it is proper when a girl calls her boy friend up that he should return the nickels she spends, even if she is in love with him? K. T."

How perfectly laughable! That's the first time that problem has been presented to me. Why raise such a question? No, he should not embarrass the girl by offering to reimburse her.

LOVE LETTERS

How does a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is going to pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

WANTS BUT ONE.

BELOVED: My heart calls for you, and there is no reply. My life needs you, and you fail me. Come to me, that my happiness may be eternal and complete.

The sun may leave the sky, and I shall not complain if you but turn your smile upon me. The stars may lose their glow, and I shall be satisfied if I may but gaze into the sparkling eyes that light my soul.

To me your lips repeat the glory of the crimson wayside berries that tempt the soaring bird from flight. Your cheeks rival the beauty of the dew drenched rose at morn.

When you went away you took the light from my eyes and life from my heart. When you come back a song of exquisite joy will be ever in my ear.

Come back to me, Madeline, that I may be revived. In adoration,

HUGH.

Here Is a Fine Laxative For a Little Baby

Millions of Mothers find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin safe for infants

WHAT young mother has not often asked herself the question, "What is the best thing I can give my baby for constipation?" It is a very important question, as constipation is the basis of most ills of infancy and childhood.

Give half a teaspoonful of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. You can obtain it at any drug store under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a mild, gentle medicine that children willingly take, and a bottle that costs only sixty cents is enough to last an average family several months.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been used by millions of mothers, for the prescription has been sold in drug stores for thirty years. It is the same prescription Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who is now in his 82nd year, used in his extensive practice for half a century. It is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Last year eight million bottles were bought in drug stores.

You can make no mistake in giving Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to your baby.

In Which Month Were You Born?

by DORIS BLAKE

MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

THE ancients firmly believed that the position of the sun at the time of a child's birth was an unfailing indication of his nature.

Persons born between March 21 and April 19, when the sun is in Aries, are earnest, intuitive, full of determination, self-sacrificing, and liable to fortune and renown. They make good leaders, scholars, and orators.

Persons born between April 19 and May 20, when the sun is in Taurus, are liable to have a strong will, to be courageous ,and generous. They think a great deal of appearance, and love the good things of life. They lose their tempers easily unless given their own way. The men especially are domineering and selfish unless principles to the contrary were instilled in youth.

Persons born between May 20 and June 21, when the sun is in Gemini, are affectionate, generous, courteous, careless in money matters, and excel in the arts and sciences. They are prouder of accomplishment than of wealth. They are nervous and unsettled, their opinions changeable and easily influenced.

Persons born between June 21 and July 22, when the sun is in Cancer, are characterized by a sympathetic, persistent, and strong willed nature; feelings easily hurt; love money; lazy, fond of fine clothes, selfish and jealous; lovers of home withal; fine intellects, and much executive ability.

Persons born between July 22 and Aug. 22, when the sun is in Leo, have much self-control, magnetism, sympathy, and generosity. They are good nurses, good cooks, and good story tellers. Their intuition often helps them escape from the consequences of their actions. They must fight against prejudice, arrogance, laziness, and love for creature comforts.

Persons born between Aug. 22 and Sept. 23, when the sun is in Virgo, have cool, calm, orderly bearing; self-possessed and dependable, excel in everything they undertake—business, play, study, competition or effort of any kind; have remarkable memories. Make best teachers and lecturers. Somewhat inclined to selfishness and self-gratification, but as friends they are devoted.

Persons born between Sept. 23 and Oct. 23, when the sun is in Libra, have conservative, modest, retiring dispositions. They are sensitive and poetical, persistent and competent in the performance of their duties. They have great imitative ability, and it, together with their strong emotional nature makes excellent actors and actresses of them.

Persons born between Oct. 23 and Nov. 22, when the sun is in Scorpio, have a courageous, loving disposition. Have natural dignity and great persuasive ability. Make friends readily. More power over the minds of others than over their own impulses. They are aggressive and executive, and naturally fitted to oversee others. They are capable of great things if they can be induced to stay at one thing long enough—but are impatient of results. They are well adapted for government jobs.

Persons born between Nov. 22 and Dec. 21, when the sun is in Sagittarius, are liable to have to travel a great deal. They have an earnest, outspoken frankness of speech and manner that frequently gets them into difficulties and misunderstandings. They are jovial, vivacious, and combative, and abhor anything that verges on deception or secrecy. Have a keen sense of humor and sarcasm.

Persons born between Dec. 21 and Jan. 20, under Capricornus, are natural leaders in everything they undertake. They have great ideals; are instigators of large undertakings, and belong at the head of large enterprises. They are disposed to have things done for them. They are determined and never give up. Are endowed with an ease and freedom of manner that is pleasing; are great talkers and make good business men and good housekeepers.

Persons born between Jan. 20 and Feb. 19, when the sun is in Aquarius, are broad judges of human nature and can be relied upon to estimate a person's honesty almost at first sight. They are good "mixers," lovers of public entertainments, theaters, fairs, public ceremonies, absorb information easily and from every possible source. They are clever at mimicry, and see the funny side of life. Are well adapted to mercantile or political pursuits.

Persons born between Feb. 19 and March 21, the Pisces sign, have a quiet, loving disposition and make loyal friends. Honesty and purity are theirs and a lack of self-esteem which causes them to be easily deceived by others. They should guard against habits of carelessness, restlessness, and inattention and the habit of scolding.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

CAPT. H.

IN the early part of the recent war I enlisted at Washington as a "yeoman." My duties in the navy department called for frequent interviews with army officers. It was at such an interview that I imposed upon an old friend of my father's, Maj. L., to use his influence to have me transferred to Panama canal service. I had enlisted to see some of the world, not having the money to pay for expensive trips, like some girls. Maj. L. confessed that, due to a recent controversy with my superior officer, he could do nothing for me. He said he would call up his friend Capt. H., however, and that he might be able to work the transfer for me.

Two weeks later I was on my way to the canal. After arriving there I wrote a brief letter of thanks to Capt. H., whom I had never seen, while at Washington. In turn I received a courteous note, merely stating that he was glad to have been of some assistance to me and that he hoped I enjoyed my service in the Canal Zone.

Three months later I was put into a rather embarrassing position, due to the loss of some very important papers, through my own neglect. While I was in the highest state of excitement and fearful expectations I was ordered to report to my superior officer. I pictured myself receiving a dishonorable discharge and saw myself aboard the ship bound for the United States port. He received me, however, with a smile and told me that the papers had been recovered, thanks to the efforts of Capt. H. of the intelligence service. I received a mild reprimand and went back to my desk, wondering who Capt. H. was, what he looked like, and how he had come down here from Washington and for a second time had given me his personal help.

I made up my mind at once to meet him, and went back to my superior officer, but was informed that Capt. H. had left on a home bound vessel the same morning, after having been on canal duty for three months.

The war was over, I had received my honorable discharge from the navy, and was on my way back to Chicago.

A short time afterward I answered an advertisement, "Private secretary wanted." I applied and obtained the position.

Arriving at the office, I was instructed by the office manager regarding my new line of duties, when the bell rang.

Notebook in hand, I entered the private office of the owner of the business, and was met by a shrewd, serious, good looking, college bred young man of about 30 years of age, who pleasantly welcomed me as his new secretary and told me to have a chair. He dictated for about an hour, and after finishing his business letters asked me to take a personal letter to his friend Maj. L., adjutant general's office, Washington. In his letter he covered his trip to Panama, and incidentally told him about the lost set of papers and how he recovered the same, the "inefficient services of 'one of those yeomen girls' [yeowomen] keeping him from receiving a promotion in rank by not being able to report in time for another job, which brought the promotion to one of his brother officers." With a blush I informed him that I was extremely sorry that I had been the cause of his losing out. We exchanged notes, and I found my Capt. H. of the intelligence service, and he in turn had found the owner of two haunting blue eyes, as he confessed later, whom he had been anxious to gaze into even while doing his good turn to me at Washington. Three months later I quit my position as private secretary and assumed my new duties as Mrs. H.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

AFTER considerable research and inquiry one discovers some information about the plot of "Mecca," whose approach from the east begins to gild our gray horizon with the promise of its many colors. One reads reams about its hues and fabrics, its pagan Fokine ballets, and the numerous participants in its exotic entourage. But little about the fable inclosed in all its gorgeous envelope.

Nevertheless, investigation indicates that you may learn from "Mecca" how the Sultan loved a beggar maid, and of how Ali Shar, the wrestler (the champion of the Bagdad heavyweights), and parent to the obscure ingénue, foiled the villainous conspirator, who sought to gain the Sultan's throne. And how, after several pictorial assassinations, romances, revels, circuses, hippodromes, parades, and pageants, tranquillity is restored to the hareem with the handsome Sultan in the arms of the Moslem ingénue. Her father, the giant grappler, embraces, at the end, the quiet Mesopotamian life in a bungalow on the Euphrates with Scharazed, a minor character in the history.

Oscar Asche is the author, and (it is said), he will come from London to Chicago to see "Mecca" for the first time. Miss Gladys Hanson and Lionel Breham are to be in the principal dramatic rôles, and Miss Ida Mulle, a memory of the old, picturesque David Henderson extravaganza "days" in Chicago, will be in the cast. Morris Gest is the inspired engineer of "Mecca," and F. Ray Comstock is his fireman and associate.

Fanchon and Marco, said to be dancer-managers from the Pacific coast, announce the exhibition of their "Satires of 1920" for the Olympic next Sunday. Assisting the stars to burlesque the California film industry will be Arthur West, Lloyd and Wells, Al Wohlman, John Sheehan, and Miss Eva Clark, a singer of conspicuous repute in the California capitals.

The Messrs. Selwyn suggest that they will open their new Selwyn theater here with Miss Florence Reed in "The Mirage." They will start work on this theater next May. Another Selwyn announcement is of a play called "The Sign," by Miss Jane Cowl and Miss Jane Murfin.

"The Charm School," made from Alice Duer Miller's story in the Saturday Evening Post, will be played at the Shubert-Central, beginning next Sunday, by Miss Minnie Dupree, Rapley Holmes, Malcolm Duncan, and others. The comedy, in a moving picture version, has already been seen here. It relates the adventures of a young automobile salesman to operate a girls' boarding school bequeathed to him by his maiden aunt.

"Dulcy," a character known to readers of Franklin P. Adams' "Conning Tower" column in the New York Tribune, has been made the subject of a play due at the Cort Feb. 20. Miss Lynn Fontanne, who appeared here with Miss Laurette Taylor in "Happiness" and in "A Pair of Petticoats," will have the title rôle, that of a lady remarkable for her bromidic thoughts and utterances. The comedy is by George S. Kaufman, dramatic editor of the New York Times, and Marc Connelly. George C. Tyler and Harry Frazee will direct the enterprise.

Wounded in her feelings by the ribald comments in the press, Miss Theda Bara has abandoned her tour in "The Blue Flame." The play was successful everywhere save in Chicago, and the average weekly receipts, which Miss Bara shared as a partner, were $16,000. The play was popular everywhere save in Chicago, and particularly so in Boston and New York.

Either Lou Tellegen or Augustus Thomas' "Speak of the Devil" was found wanting since they are no longer appearing together. Mr. Tellegen is in the south with his old play, "Blind Youth."

Oscar Shaw, one of the leavening influences in "The Half Moon" at the Illinois, is to be made a star next year by Messrs. Erlanger, Dillingham and Ziegfeld. Guy Bolton and Jerome Kern have been engaged to write an opera for him.

Some figures given out by the management of "Irene" show that an average of 160,000 persons attend that musical comedy each week, paying at least $200,000 for the privilege. Thirteen companies are performing the play in many parts of the world.

Arnold Daly and Mr. Cohan did not get on well together in "The Tavern," a Cohan enterprise, in which Mr. Daly was prominent, and he is now missing from the cast. Brandon Tynan has succeeded Mr. Daly.

Thus Mr. Cohan on the actor and his wage:

"An actor is worth all he gets. If he were not he would not be getting it. There will always be high-priced actors, just as there will always be low-priced actors. A manager can cast a play to suit himself. There are expensive casts and there are cheap casts—my experience has been that the expensive cast is invariably the cheapest in the end. The question should not be 'How much does the actor get?' but 'How long is the box office line?'"

A. H. Woods, having spent much of his time in Chicago recently, confides to a New York journal that he will produce more of his plays in this town hereafter, elevating it to an equality with Atlantic City, Washington, D. C., and Stamford, Conn. His new Apollo theater, he thinks, will be opened with "The Pearl of Great Price." Avery Hopwood's "Come Up in the Haymow," which has been baptized anew as "Gloria's Garter," will be produced at the Woods before long, he says, and another one, "Something for Women," by Joseph Neebe, will be launched at the Playhouse. It is said, jestingly, of course, that Mr. Woods and his cabinet debated for days whether to rename Mr. Hopwood's farce "Gloria's Garter" or "Gertie's Garter." The first named was selected because it seemed more austere. Miss Hazel Dawn and Walter Jones will be in it, and, no doubt, John Cumberland.

MR. HOOVER'S crusade in behalf of the hungry Europeans will be aided by a play written by Porter Emerson Browne and produced by William Harris, the John Drinkwater impresario. Mr. Browne looked over the condition of the Continent at the suggestion of Mr. Hoover and, finding it a promising topic for a dramatist, is now in the throes of composition at his home in Nassau. Mr. Drinkwater, by the way, is due in America this month to observe the rehearsals of "Mary Queen of Scots."

"The Song Bird," in which Miss Jane Cowl and the Hattons sought to embalm the prima donna temperament, is now abroad as a musical play. Ralph Holmes, critic of the Detroit Journal, finds it not good, and says that while Miss Marguerite Sylva can sing, she is unhappy as an actress, thus reversing the inevitable platitude about Miss Mary Garden's art.

Max Reinhardt, having relinquished control of the Grosses Schauspielhaus in Berlin, is about to come to America to produce the Viennese play, "Gitana," for one of the moving picture concerns which carries the drama as a side-line.

A suspicion that a bill in the New York legislature contains a joker permitting Sunday theaters in New York excites the Actors' Equity into an energetic protest. Whether innocent or otherwise, the measure is being fought by the Equity, which announces that Sunday shows will be given in New York only over its dead body.

The New York Morning Telegraph turns back the pages and finds that thirty-one years ago last week Fred Stone "signed up" for his last tour with the circus. The outfit was F. J. Taylor's Greatest Wagon Shows, and Mr. Stone's contract called for $3 per week and "cakes."

Ann Davis has succeeded Ottola Nesmith in the leading woman's role with William Hodge in "The Guest of Honor." Miss Davis' father is D. S. Davis of the Illinois Steel company. She follows Emily Stevens in the leading rôle of "Within the Law" during its Chicago engagement. Her last appearance was with Taylor Holmes in "Tomorrow's Price" early last spring.

The New York Times quotes Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein as saying that she will turn her Manhattan opera house into a soap factory rather than submit to the "unjust demands and picayune tactics" of the theatrical unions. A property man's bill for twelve hours' overtime, when he could account for only two, Mrs. Hammerstein says, caused her to throw up her hands.

Small Talk: Faversham has sold his yacht, The Hawk. . . . Hale Hamilton and Grace La Rue, having changed the title of "Dear Me" to "Me," have changed it back again. . . . Owen Davis has been delivered of another melodrama, "The Haunted House," and W. A. Brady has taken charge of it. . . . George Arliss acts a rajah in William Archer's "The Green Goddess." . . . Miss Helen Ware's rôle in "Pagans" is that of a prima donna with a past, who sings so influentially that when her former and ailnig lover hears her voice, he becomes cured, discarding his crutches and his invalid chair. This rôle is played by young Joseph Schildkraut, son of Rudolph Schildkraut, a celebrated Yiddish player. . . . William Gillette approaches vaudeville in a short comedy of his own manufacture.

D. W. Griffith's magnificent production of "WAY DOWN EAST" is turning hundreds of people away at every performance at the WOODS THEATRE. An editorial in the Boston Post says of this marvellous spectacle, that "It is an unexampled wonder of the 20th Century." This thrilling, dramatic tale made from Lottie Blair Parker's play is accompanied by a Symphonic Orchestra of thirty pieces and has realistic effects. It is being shown twice daily at 2:15 and 8:15. Buy your seats well in advance. "WAY DOWN EAST" will never be seen except at first class theatres. All seats reserved.

Mr. Carey's Our Idea of a Real Western Hero

"HEARTS UP."

Produced by Universal. Directed by Val Paul.

THE CAST:

David Brent	Harry Carey
Jim Drew	Arthur Millett
Bob Harding	Charles Le Moyne
Gordon Swayne	Frank Braidwood
Lorelei Drew	Mignonne Golden

By Mae Tinée.

Harry Carey, riding on a pony,
Harry Carey, with his good gun in his hand.
Harry Carey almost sent the fellows
Who had tried to foil him to the Prom-ised land.

I LOVE Harry Carey's lined face. I love his easy, indifferent way of getting himself across. I like the way he wears his clothes; the way he rides a pony; the way he walks and that tight-lipped smile of his that he uses so rarely. The western hero de luxe—that's Harry Carey.

He wrote the story which is his present vehicle. It's the kind of story he would write—an easy detailing of a none too laborious plot, simply subtitled and with only five people in the cast.

The star himself is cast as a westerner. His life has been saved at one time by a man named Jim Drew. Returning after a number of years to repay his debt if possible, Brent—that's Carey's name—finds his one time savior dead and the latter's house in flames.

On the body of the deceased is a letter which says that the daughter of the same deceased, who has been away since she was a little girl, is about to return to father and will father please meet her in San Francisco on the fifth. A picture of the young lady accompanies the letter.

We will touch lightly on the daughter, for as played by Miss Golden, she's a person of no weight at all so far as any especial histrionic ability is concerned. A brief and fairly apt description of her would be to say that she holds her head on one side when she smiles and wears a curl over her shoulder a la the old days of Mary Pickford, et al.

"Daddy!" she cries as she beholds Mr. Brent with her picture in his hand waiting her at the station. The only way she knows he's her daddy is by the picture in his hand—it's been so long, you see, since she has met papa.

She brings forth a youth met enroute from the effete east. I suspect they plucked him from a chorus, for all you expect of him throughout the picture is to poise on one foot and sing, "O for the life of a fireman," in falsetto. Not that he fulfills your expectations. On the other hand, he dons a large hat and riding breeches, etc., etc., and the plot develops that he is a surveyor.

Well, anyhow, the pseudo father, who, since he has been called daddy by Miss Lorelei, hasn't dared break the truth to her, is discovered as a deceiver, and for a time is quite naturally suspected of being a base one. Time and an aluminum kettle, dropped in the nick of time by a devoted Chinese cook, bring all things to a satisfactory head, and the picture ends with Miss Lorelei in the eager arms that for so long have ached to receive her, but that so nobly have refrained from doing so.

There are two clever people in the cast, Mr. Carey and the Chinese cook. Charles Le Moyne, who has a not especially important part, is pretty good too. But Harry Carey's the picture. On his account you are sure to enjoy it.

Florence Lawrence, long ago known as the "Biograph Girl," will enter pictures again, it is said. "The Unfoldment" (rotten name isn't it for any film?) will be her first production. They do say that for a time she will take a position as newspaper woman on one of the Los Angeles newspapers in order that she may know just what to do with her rôle, which is that of a lady scribe. (You believe that if you want to. I don't.)

Mary Pickford has written a story, a screen version of which will be made for her by Marion Fairfax, her scenario writer.

Good news! Again Tsuri Aoki is to play with her husband Sessue Hayakawa.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

BELLE P.: Through somebody's mistake—I presume my own—the title was left off the review of last Sunday. "The Spenders" is the name of the picture. You can reach Margaret Loomis in care of Lasky, Hollywood, Cal.; Ann May, care of Motion Picture News, New York City, and May McAvoy at 217 West One Hundred and Sixth street, New York City.

M. E. F.: Write with pencil any time you feel like it. I'm always out of ink myself. Harrison Ford is with the Talmadge Film corporation, 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York City. How's every little thing out your way?

L. J. W.: Poor Lon Chaney! It'll take more than a Miracle Man to make the world believe that his legs are his own and not made of cork! He is not a cripple. Now run along and bet your head off.

ACEPHLOUS: Some banker, I should say! Also if a word of flattery doesn't come amiss, you run a wicked typewriter! If I ever come to Cairo I sure will—think of you! "Look you up?" I should say not. What if our disappointment were to be mutual?

JAMES O. H.: Far better a good music publisher than a rotten actor! I thank you for your letter, and congratulate you on your good sense.

LEE: I did receive your card, and thought I acknowledged it. If I didn't, it was not because I didn't appreciate your thought. You are nice, Lee, when you want to be! (There's a little poetry to cheer you.)

BACHELOR: Go on—you're only teasing!

JIMMY: Yes, it was Mr. Moore. Of course, I missed you. Hope you won't wait so long again to let me hear from you. How's everything in Wilmette?

READ'S STORY

The Amazing Art of Mary Garden; Contrasting Roles

By Ruth Miller

A STAGE touched with gold drifts of light piercing through purple and gray shadows. The slim, lithe figure of a young girl with the brooding eyes of a mystic. The figure of "Monna Vanna," shrinking, swaying, half frightened, and half intoxicated before the impassioned tenderness of a knightly Prinzivalle. A small, unpretentious dressing room, two inquisitive reporters, a forceful woman, still clad in the clinging "Monna Vanna" draperies, but whose keen, clear gray eyes looked straight into one's own with a calm, level gaze; a charming but matter-of-fact business woman with a firm, sure handclasp, and one who gave expression to her thought and ideas with unexpected felicity of immaculate phrase; with short, swift, comprehensive sentences that went straight to the gist of the matter without any feminine adjective frothing. That was Mary Garden last Friday, first as Monna Vanna and then in the intermission after the second act as the new director general of the Chicago Opera company.

We all have a notion that we know all about Mary Garden. We have read this fairy story and that about her various activities. We know she is Scotch, and we know that she is considered the greatest singing actress of the age. We know, too, that hardened, veteran critics whose years have passed the three score and ten mark have slung quarts of impassioned purple ink in their efforts to describe her art. But actually just what do we know about Mary Garden? Let's consider.

Playing in "Pelleas and Melisande" one night and the next in "Salome." Shifting chameleonlike from the pallid greens, the mood mists of Maeterlinck and Debussy to the livid crimsons and the horror of realism of Wilde and Strauss. That is the amazing record of Mary Garden. Melisande, shy, timid, elfin in her moods, swept with the blanching fire of girlish passion, brooding childishly with softly parted lips—could a feminine type be more remote from carnally brutal and relentless Salome?

And the item in that record that is provocative of mute astonishment is not that Mary Garden sang and acted successfully these widely divergent rôles, but that her interpretation of these two operatic heroines was so dominant, so vital, that when one mentions them it is to link them with her name.

Turn back another page in this famous book of Garden. Here is "Traviata." A typical Galli-Curci rôle. Demanding the brittle coloratura scale, dancing, whirling eddies of notes torturing the banal melodic line, long held high tones, and trills.

Those who witnessed Mary Garden's delineation of the principal character of this opera, a tubercular demimondaine possessed of all the prodigal sentimentality of her kind, speak yet in awed ejaculation of its histrionic subtleties and glittering vocalism. In fact, a few cherish talking machine records, excerpts from Mary Garden's Violetta, with which they delight in mystifying operatic provincials who have always identified this great singing actress with Thaïs.

Would you have another contrast? Then consider the tender boyish figure that is her "Juggler." What could be more provocative of a tearful half smile than her portrayal of the eager, childish mendicant who was converted through the call to dinner and thereupon brought in homage to the feet of the Virgin his most precious possession, his skill in song and dance.

"Romeo and Juliet" and "Hamlet" have been touched by Miss Garden's imperious art. Juliet, impulsive woman child, and the piteous crazed Ophelia. But, then, has she not slipped from these spiritual rôles like an eel into the water into characters of the Alexandrian courtesan, Thaïs, and the humid Cleopatra?

Those who saw the mischief, the malice, the sullenness with the flame smoldering just beneath that was her "Carmen" of last Wednesday may find pleasure in watching this magnificent show woman build the tragic figure of the fragile, traditionally feminine heroine of the "Faust" of tomorrow evening.

"Tosca" and "La Boheme." A coddled opera singer possessing white hot jealousy in the place of a brain, and an impoverished little embroiderer irresponsibly happy under the lengthening shadows of death. "Manon" and "Monna Vanna." An avaricious baby vamp and the heroine of sacrificial unselfishness, who saved her country and lost her reputation.

"Louise" and "Gismonda," "Chrysis" and "Phryne." But one staggers before the enumeration. A thousand women, this Mary Garden.

Lending that pliant body and magnificent mind to the flawless portrayal of every feminine frailty or strength. Limning the saint or prostitute, the mercenary or benevolent, the insolent or tender, the lascivious or spiritual, the child or superwoman, the domineering or supinely weak. That is the magic of Mary Garden.

An item not to be overlooked in the analysis of the operatic splendor that is Mary Garden is her flawless art in costume. Recall that amazing creation from the shop of a Spanish modiste that she flaunted in the last act of "Carmen" on Wednesday. Made of black sequin incrusted cloth, it was heavily embroidered in gold, a splash of violent crimson was fastened in the flower at her belt. Richest of black and gold lace massed over a huge comb thrust in her nigre brown wig formed the mantilla. A diamond and emerald necklace and one ring shaped from a great emerald completed this costume.

And one realizes as one gasps over this astounding sartorial array how shrewdly Mary Garden had analyzed the psychology of the deliberate, wanton, calculating, insolent, and absolute egotist that was Prosper Merimee's Carmen. Spangles and gold, the white glitter of diamonds, and the snakelike sheen of emeralds, ostentatious costliness.

Forsooth, one knows instinctively that the original Carmen would have deigned to wear nothing else. Would this flaunting, flaming creature, product of the lowest social strata of a hot-blooded race, been content with the tender white that certain prima donnas affect in this rôle? Not so that any one would notice it.

APEDA PHOTO

Mary Garden is the theater embodied. This stage sense of hers is part instinct and part remorseless work.

To perpetuate a seeming irrelevancy. Have you ever seen Mary Garden kick the long sinuous train of one of her gowns? Never. She may make a complete halfturn and while the trailing strip of cloth is adjusted someway no one ever saw her stoop to that mulelike back thrust with one foot that is the accustomed gesture.

Her magic with draperies, her sense of line, certain expressive typical gestures, and her ability to adjust her pantomime to that of her fellow artist so that the stage picture always balances, is inherent in her dramatic instinct. Her apparently limitless knowledge of operas of every school, her unerring rectitude in mimetic and lyric detail is the result of plain work of the common garden variety.

She should make a remarkable operatic director. She has more practical knowledge than any three opera conductors rolled in one; she has the forceful personality necessary; she never gambles on making a success of a makeshift, for instance in her own career; she never threw a rôle together haphazard and then whined and made excuses when it met failure—she inspires an almost passionate loyalty among all who work with her from supernumaries to her co-artists, and she has that operatic rarity, a saving sense of humor.

A great and sincere musician, an infallible artist in stagecraft, a fiery, dominant personality, the possessor of consummate tact and diplomacy, a loving, generous heart and a cool and canny head. Veritably an operatic director general with whom we may reckon.

1921 Revival of 'Erminie' Opens with a Flourish

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The actor temperament is a curious thing. I suppose E. H. Sothern, for example, was perfectly satisfied to go down to fame as the actor who contributed a funny hop to the character of Dundreary and made thousands laugh with his lisped inanities.

And Francis Wilson, having been lured out of retirement for one more revival of "Erminie," despite his gray hairs and the dignified and rather important position he has taken as a citizen of the community and the fighting head of the Actors' Equity association, is probably thrilled anew when the laughter rolls stageward to reward him for having stuffed his face full of celery tops or tripped on the stairs or otherwise made himself amusingly ridiculous as "the immortal Caddy."

And yet this isn't altogether true of Wilson. He would greatly have preferred to be remembered as a good actor and a serious one, an ambition that years ago inspired his production of a short drama called "The Little Father." But his funny legs and his flair for comedy fixed his position in the public mind, and by the time he was ready to forego the profits to be gained from capitalizing that popularity it was too late for him to build a new reputation.

So here he is, at 66, frolicking as lively as the oft quoted crickets through many of the same tricks that he first took on when "Erminie" was new. He has, as he declares in the curtain speech he makes with his co-star, De Wolf Hopper, "kept the gray of his hair out of his heart and his legs," and if he is not as funny as he was, say, in the 1904 revival, none of those who recall that performance will know the difference, for he is just as funny as he can be, and "Caddy" never was so goldarned awful funny anyway.

The first night of the revival in New York was turned into one of those occasions that keeps the street corners and the curbstones of the theater district abuzz next day. Within five minutes of the opera's conclusion, and just as Caddy and Ravvy were about to be turned over to the police, some one stopped the performance to report that the "house was full of the prisoners' confederates." Whereupon Mrs. Whiffen, in the costume of the old Southern lady in "Just Suppose," walked into view, followed by Laurette Taylor, as "Peg;" Fred Stone, straight from "Tip Top," Frank Bacon as the "Bill Jones" or "Lightnin'," and John Drew.

Mr. Drew, being in what his reviewers used to speak of as "immaculate evening dress," explained that he was just a young fellow who had stepped in off the street "to see what the stage of a theater was like."

This committee was followed by John Emerson, the new president of the Actors' Equity, his right arm raised to quiet the tumult, his left arm encircling a silver loving cup, which looked to be about twice as big as the one Sir Thomas Lipton has been trying to lift for so many years.

Followed speeches in which Mr. Hopper told Mr. Wilson how much everybody loved him, especially the actors whom he had so successfully led through the strike of 1918, and Mr. Wilson, with tears in his voice, replied that this was the greatest and proudest and most affecting moment of his life—which, undoubtedly it was. After which someone started the finale, and the performance was concluded.

It is, to get back to "Erminie," an attractive and entertaining revival. The lovely Jakabowski score has not been heard enough of late to cheapen it, and the quips and topical lyrics have been brightened up a bit by Marc Connolley.

Madge Lessing, who was the Javotte of the 1904 revival, is the Capt. Delauney of the current issue, a part you may recall Jessie Bartlett Davis having decorated on that occasion. Irene Williams, a clear-voiced soprano, has the title rôle, which Marguerite Sylvia once sang, and Pauline Hall before her. Rosamond Whiteside is the new Javotte, Warren Proctor the new Eugene (the part William Weeden had in 1904) and Jennie Weathersby is still playing the ancient dame she first played thirty years ago.

Hopper, of course, is a perfect foil for Wilson (William Broderick was his last Ravennes) and the two team it amusingly together, their curtain speech noticeably brightening the evening.

Grant Mitchell, one of the most likable and most satisfying human of the younger stars, has come to the Longacre theater with a new farce comedy called "The Champion" with which he hopes to duplicate the success he scored two seasons ago in "A Tailormade Man." It is not as good a play as the latter, but it is a good farce with the fun of it somewhat extravagantly forced.

Mr. Mitchell's rôle is that of an English boy who ran away from home to escape an impossible father, came to America, joined the Y. M. C. A., became noted as a boxer, and eventually won the lightweight championship and a fortune of $200,000. Resuming his family name [he was known as "Gunboat" Williams in the ring] he studied law, got himself elected to congress, and finally returned home expecting to be handed a liberal slice of fatted calf.

To his surprise he discovers, once his past is revealed to his family, that his father is for throwing him out again in order to avoid a village scandal. Then father learns that the sport loving English aristocrats of the neighborhood are excessively proud of having a champion turn out to be a native son, and being born a snob, he immediately becomes the most ardent of "Gunboat's" admirers. The boy incidentally wins the love of Lady Elizabeth and elects to bring her home to Con-neck-ticut with him as his bride.

"The Champion" is a thoroughly American farce, for all its English setting, but so long as it "gets the laughs," which it does, no one will worry much about analyzing its weaknesses.

MISS GILDA LEARY in "THE BAT" at the PRINCESS PHOTO by APEDA

Miss Leary in "The Bat" acts the troubled heroine whose betrothed, a bank cashier, is suspected of defalcations, vast and melodramatic.

THE MUSIC CALENDAR

Today at 3:00—"Otello," with Charles Marshall, Rosa Raisa, and Giocomo Rimini in the principal rôles. Cimini will conduct.

Today at 3:30—Alfred Cortot will be heard in piano recital at the Blackstone under the direction of Rachel Busey Kinsolving. His program is comprised of the Liszt Sonata in B minor, Chopin Twenty-four Preludes, and the Schumann Etudes Symphoniques.

Today at 3:30—Emmy Destinn, soprano, will be heard in concert at the Studebaker theater. She will be assisted by Roderick White, violinist, and Georges Lapeyre, pianist. The program includes the Mendelssohn violin concerto, Dvorak's Air from the oratorio "Spectre Bride," Aria from "Butterfly," and violin numbers by Schubert-Kreisler, White, Cottenet, and Tor Aulin.

Today at 3:30—Allen Spencer, Chicago pianist, will be heard in recital at Kimball hall under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. His program inclues Schumann's Sonata in G minor, a group of Chopin, Prokoieff's prelude No. 7, Liszt's Etude in F minor, and Saint-Saën's Etude in form of a waltz.

Today at 3:30—Hipolito Lazaro, distinguished tenor of the Metropolitan opera, New York, will be heard in Orchestra hall in his first Chicago recital under the direction of Wessels & Voegeli. He will have the assistance of Max Terr, pianist. Mr. Lazaro's numbers include the aria "O Paradiso," from Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine," a group of Spanish songs by Alvarez, Penella, and Serrano, a group of songs by Bettinelli, Sibella, Ring-Hager and Ronald, the aria, Spirito Gentile from Donizetti's "Favorita," and Kurt Schindler's arrangement of the old Hebrew melody, "Eli, Eli."

Today at 5—The second of the series of three chamber concerts given by the Beethoven trio—M. Jennette Loudon, piano; Ralph Michaelis, violin; Theodore Du Moulin, violoncello—will take place in Academy hall, 430 Fine Arts building. The program will include Beethoven's "C Minor Trio," the Wolf-Ferrari "Trio," op. 5; and short numbers by Rubinstein and Grainger.

Tonight at 7:45—John B. Miller will be the soloist at the Sunday evening club tonight, when he will sing "Like a Hart," by Liddle.

Today at 8:15—Vittorio Arimondi, basso of the Chicago Opera company, will be heard in recital at Kimball hall under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. He will be assisted by Marjorie Dodge Warner, soprano, and Fritz Renk, violinist. Mr. Arimondi will sing Tosti's "Non t'Amo piu," Mozart's "Qui sdegno non s'accende," Bellini's "Vi ravviso o lusghi Ameni," Beethoven's "In questa tomba," and Sibella's "Bocca Dolorosa."

MISS MARGOLA GILMORE in "THE FAMOUS MRS. FAIR"
MOFFETT PHOTO.

In "The Famous Mrs. Fair" Miss Gilmore acts with notable success the rôle of a flapper, neglected, until the end, by her mother, a war heroine, who becomes a lecturer.

Tomorrow at 8—"Faust," with Mary Garden, Lucien Muratore, Georges Baklanoff, and Desire Defrere. Morin conducting.

Tuesday at 8—"The Valkyrie," with Van Gordon, Francis, Claessens, Martin, Baklanoff, and Cotreuil. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Wednesday at 8—"Norma," with Raisa, Besanzoni, Damont, and Lazzari. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Thursday at 4—The children's concerts' fourth program of series A by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor. Program includes the appearance of Miss Anita Malkin, violin soloist. She will be heard in the Saint-Saëns Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso for violin and orchestra. Other numbers listed are the Elgar Suite, "The Wand of Youth," and the Tarantelle from Rubinstein's "The Costume Ball."

Thursday at 8—"Salome," with Mary Garden and Muratore. Marinuzzi conducting.

Thursday at 8:15—Frances Nash in piano recital in Orchestra hall under the direction of Wessels & Voegeli. Her program includes the Bach "Prelude and Fugue in A Minor," the "Eroica Sonata in G Minor" of MacDowell, Chopin's "Nocturne, Opus 62, No. 2, in E Major," Chopin's "Scherzo, Opus 39, No. 3, in C Sharp Minor," Granados Goyescas No. 4 ("La Maja y el Ruisenor"), and the Saint-Saëns "Etude en Forme de Valse."

Friday at 2:15—The Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra hall in its regular weekly subscription concert. Sasha Culbertson, violinist, will make his first appearance as soloist, playing the Lalo "Spanish Symphony" for violin and orchestra. The program also includes the Brahms "Symphony No. 3 in F Major," Tschaikowsky's "Fantasia," "Francesda da Rimini," and Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" overture.

Friday at 8—"Mignon," with Besanzoni, Macbeth, Pascova, Schipa, Defrere, and Lazzari. Cimini will conduct.

Saturday at 2—"L'Amore dei tre Re," with Mary Garden, Edward Johnson, Galeffi, and Lazzari. Marinuzzi will conduct.

Saturday at 8—The opera season closes with "Madame Butterfly." The cast will include Storcio, Francis, Hislop, and Baklanoff. Cimini will conduct.

Saturday at 8:15—The Chicago Symphony orchestra in its regular concerts at Orchestra hall.

More rooms are now ready in The Chicago Beach Hotel's
East and West Buildings

EVERY week more rooms are made available for occupancy in the East Building of the Chicago Beach Hotel.

We have added 550 outside rooms to our accommodations. All have tub and shower baths, extra large closets, circulating ice water from our artesian well. This water has been shown, by analysis, to be the equal of, if not better than, the drinking water sold in bottles.

Suites of 2 to 7 or more rooms are available, as well as single and double rooms, all commanding a view of Lake Michigan.

The entire first floor is given over to lounge, lobbies, public and private dining rooms.

The Chicago Beach Hotels now have a capacity of 1,000 rooms—700 with bath. Accommodations are to be had in both buildings.

The management makes every effort to combine here all the home-like comforts with the luxuries and service conveniences of an exclusive, high class hotel.

There are thirteen acres of beautiful grounds surrounding the hotel, equipped with a large hockey and ice skating rink, and for other winter sports.

You are cordially invited to visit the Chicago Beach, or we will gladly give you full information about accommodations and rates if you will write or telephone. Our prices are never excessive. Moderate charges prevail for rooms and in cafe.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Nothing Like H.B.P. if You'd Be the Height of Fashion

By Mme. X.

THERE is a new cult. Have you noticed it? It is the Royal Order of the H. B. P.'s, which, translated into the vernacular, means the high blood pressure people, those who suffer from this elusive malady. As a chronic trouble it has distinct advantages over its predecessors among fashionable complaints. It is neither contagious nor disfiguring, nor incurable.

For a long time appendicitis held the field against all others of its competitors. A livelier, more abrupt visitor was "the la grippe." Neuritis and sinus trouble have both been sources of pride and pain to their patrons. Laryngitis and bronchial disturbances have been a bond between many. But nothing has ever been quite so much the vogue among its devotees as H. B. P.

The H. B. P.'s are apt to be sad and silent in company [the malady admits of much social distraction], until they meet one of their kind, when conversation becomes animated and eloquent. Perhaps their previous taciturnity arises from the ill concealed indifference of the hale and hearty world to the sufferings and perils which beset the H. B. P.'s. At any rate, when two or more of this cult get together the mode of procedure usually is to ask first how high the blood pressure is.

Invariably the uninitiated who responds to this query is met with the retort, "O, that's nothing! Mine goes to such and such a figure." Hence advice is never to give your blood pressure first. Try to have the inestimable advantage of the last answer. It is so painful to be told that your much prized h. b. p. is of a negligible figure.

Subsist on Spinach and Buttermilk.

The next question is almost sure to be, "Who's your doctor?" When the information is vouchsafed, the invariable answer is, "O, why don't you go to So and So?"

When this error has been satisfactorily explained the succeeding discussion turns on the most exciting topic of all—the diet prescribed, or, rather, the forbidden dishes, drinks, and dissipations. This is apt to become an acrimonious debate. The sufferer whose doctor allows him or her many of the pleasures of the table and a fairly untrammeled daily life is looked down upon by the rest of the tribe of H. B. P.'s. Those composing the highest circle in the cult apparently subsist entirely on spinach and buttermilk, and very little of that. If you're living on a diet of these two delicacies it's quite natural to want every one else to do the same, and hard not to hate all who are not so circumscribed in their gustatory indulgences.

How they watch each other, these H. B. P.'s! And how the rest of the world avoids those who will discuss the trials of their regimen!

Among the élite of the order are those who have all their teeth pulled out and their tonsils removed, to placate the H. B. P. Moloch [a molar to a Moloch, n'est ce pas?]. The poor spirited mortals who decline to practice this form of worship are classed with free thinkers, progressives, and those who believe in a league of nations.

Lively Bath Discussions.

A pleasanter phase of the conversations is that dealing with the different kind of baths to which the members of the cult are addicted. The contest is lively in the debate as to which perspires most in these baths.

Of course, the actual achievements in this salubrious line of endeavor have to be left undecided. In this, as in the question of the height of the blood pressure, it is better to be the last to enter your record. It gives one a distinct advantage. Power over language also helps much in this contest. The subject can best be handled by picturesque figures of speech and not a little hyperbole.

Between the victims of H. B. P. and those who suffer from low blood pressure there is a gulf both deep and wide, and it must be confessed that the former feel decidedly superior to the latter, though why it is not easy to explain. The psychology here is not unlike that which governs the relations between high church and low church worshipers. Was it the same between the Pharisees and the Sadducees, I wonder? Or between the standpatters and the progressives?

One thing is certain: unles you have at least a little case of H. B. P. you are not quite utterly and entirely fashionable, except your youth would make it needless.

McGanns in Santa Barbara.

Every day there are new vacancies in the social ranks. Mrs. Robert McGann and her daughter, Grace, and a large cohort of cooks, maids, chauffeurs, butlers, etc., departed for Santa Barbara the last of December, whither Mr. McGann had preceded them a fortnight earlier. The McGann house is one of the most beautiful in Montecito valley.

It is situated part way up the lovely Sierra Madre range, which shuts off that part of the coast from north winds. It commands a wide outlook, taking in the green and flowery foreground and the distant Pacific ocean, with its long, slow combers, and its ever changing colors. On the far horizon lies a group of purple islands.

The house itself is of distinctly Italian style of architecture. It seems to rise from the rocks as if it were almost a part of them. Gay parterres of flowering shrubs and plants separate it from its rugged setting.

The Clyde Carrs are already well established at El Mirasol, having left here almost a fortnight ago. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson and their household are departing Jan. 24, also for Santa Barbara.

All Spain Awaiting Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, who went a fortnight ago to New York, is sailing this coming week for France with Mrs. William Astor Chanler. Mrs. Davis is planning to make a long sojourn in Spain, studying the old Spanish painters, whose workmanship is the joy and despair of all artists from that time to this. They had a secret of color mixing each modern hopes to discover in scrutinizing those glowing, vibrating canvases.

Her final piece of work before she left here was a charming portrait of the young son of the Donald Ryersons, a capital piece of work. While she was in Brazil last spring and summer Mrs. Davis met and painted the famous Spanish cellist, Franz Vescey, said by many to be the greatest of his kind today, which is hard on the great Casals, also a cellist and a Spaniard. Her portrait presents a dark, spirited, good looking man of about 27 years or thereabouts. She received a cable from him as she was on the eve of departure, assuring her that all Spain was awaiting her. Quite a formidable prospect for one as reticent and retiring as Mrs. Davis!

Florida is beckoning to icebound northerners, urging them to come and rest under its waving palm trees and pluck the succulent pineapple from the nearby plantation. Mrs. Howard Linn left here last Monday evening to spend a month with a former Chicaogan, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson, who is established in her father's (Charles Deering) place at Miami, Fla. Not far away is her uncle's (James Deering) famous mansion, set in pools and gardens, probably the most gorgeous and costly of its kind in the country. Visiting him at present are Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Winston.

A feature of Charles Deering's estate is an island, which he has stocked with all sorts of rare birds of tropical and semi-tropical species.

Masked Ball at Palmer Home.

Bold and valiant souls are Mrs. John A. Carpenter and the board of the Arts club. Late as the season is, they are undertaking another ball, and a masked one at that. It is for the Arts club, and it will take place in the famous old Potter Palmer mansion on the Lake Shore drive, on Saturday, Jan. 22. Heavens, how time flies! That's next Saturday.

The costumes will be uniform, the colors green and black and white. I think the all-enveloping, all-concealing cape is green with a black and white hood and mask. The outfit may be ordered at the "Petit Bazarre," which, by the way, is a thriving enterprise and making money for the Children's Home and Aid society.

The Palmer residence will be a fine setting for the shrouded, mysterious forms, the muffled voices, the stealthy glances which go to the making of a masked ball.

The tickets are $10. John T. McCutcheon is the publicity committee and approaches his new job with speed and dexterity. It is sure to be one of the brilliant affairs of the season.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who has been devoting her time and matchless energy to the Hoover committee, was called east on Thursday on account of the illness of her daughter, Mrs. George Patterson. Before she reached her daughter's bedside death came to beautiful Suzette Ryerson. She will always be remembered by those who knew her for a certain noble quality of spirit which was reflected in her outward aspect. Tall, lovely in coloring, with starry eyes and a winning smile, she was a conspicuous figure in any gathering. She did splendid work during the great war in a French front line hospital. For this work she had prepared herself by two years' intensive study in the bacteriological research department at the Chicago university. She was frequently under fire. On one occasion she assisted in the removal of the patients from the hospital under the raking fire of a low-swooping boche aviator when many were wounded.

During the war she married at Paris George Patterson from Ann Arbor, Mich. After a few days' honeymoon she returned to her front line hospital and he to his French artillery regiment.

For the last year the Pattersons have been living at Morristown, N. J. She now rests in the little cemetery at Springfield Center, near the family country seat, Ringwood, and much of the radiance has gone out of life for those who knew her.

Apropos of the Hoover fund, it is of interest to note that the two women most prominent and active on the New York Hoover committee are both ex-Chicagoans, Mrs. Frank Griswold, who was Miss Josephine Houghteling, and Mrs. Louis Slade, who was Miss Carrie McCormick. Hoover committees have been formed in forty-eight states. It is up to Chicago to do some hustling in order to complete her quota. He gives twice who gives quickly.

Another Landmark Gone.

Swift and devastating as is the passage of time in Chicago, wiping out landmarks and obliterating signs of the past, a few residences and buildings escape the destroyer. One of these on the north side is the old Burley house on the corner of Dearborn avenue and Chestnut street. It is a good looking red brick, three story home built in 1877 by the late Augustus Burley, father of Clarence Burley. The latter, with his wife and four children, lives there now.

The elder Mr. Burley was one of the city's best known pioneers, having with his brother, Arthur Burley, come here in 1837. In an interesting bundle of family letters he describes how in the forties and fifties of the last century the fashionable of the town were wont to walk in the late afternoons on the old north pier at the mouth of the river. When crossing the new boulevard link bridge the writer often sees in fancy the hoop skirted ladies and the high chokered gentlemen of those times walking up and down by what was then a pellucid and gently flowing stream.

This is all a prelude to saying that, as nothing endures here, the old Burley house, which was one of the late John Root's first achievements in Chicago, will soon lose its present occupants and be dedicated to the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund offices. Mr. Burley has bought the Lyman Walker house in Winnetka, to which he will move his family in the spring.

The Making of Tradition.

Across the street from the Burley house is another home even older. It is not many Chicagoans who can say they are living where they were born, but the two brothers, Arthur and George Field, who live in this house, can make this statement.

In 1867 their parents built and occupied a house on this site and after the fire in 1871, hardly were the ashes cool when the owners started rebuilding their home, which has remained the family residence ever since. I know of no similar instance in Chicago. Hardly are the builders of the modern home out of the way when their descendants dismantle and dispose of the shell of family life.

Until we develop a little more ancestor worship we will be an unstable, floating, undignified race. It is the continuity and loyalty of generations which make traditions and power. And there is no more potent symbol of such continuity and loyalty than a dwelling which has sheltered many generations of the same stock.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Y. W. C. A. Opens New Service Center for Industrial Girls

If you were a girl of 18 or thereabouts, working eight or nine hours a day in a candy factory or a knitting mill, wouldn't you love a clubhouse all your own, with a gymnasium and a cafeteria and a library, where you could spend your noon hour resting or reading or dancing to the phonograph; where you could join a sewing or cooking or gym class, and where, best of all, you had a democratic say-so in everything that went on?

Hundreds of Chicago industrial girls are finding just that sort of a club in the new industrial service center of the Y. W. C. A. at 432 South Peoria street, which has its formal dedication next Saturday afternoon in an open house reception from 2 until 6 o'clock. Prominent Chicago women, and men, too, who have watched the gradual transformation of the center from a dilapidated old tenement in the heart of the smaller factory district to an ideal recreation and club center for girls, will come to see it completed and in running order.

Mrs. Robert De Golyer is chairman of the executive committee, and with her are associated Mrs. Edwin S. Mills of Evanston, Mrs. Robert E. Ross, Mrs. E. P. Dewes, and Mrs. Edgar S. Robinson.

The Chicago center is one of nine established in the larger industrial cities by the national board of the Y. W. C. A. as a development of the war time work done by the association among girls in munitions plants. Miss Gertrude Murrell of New York City supervised the work of choosing a site, remodeling the building, and establishing the work, assisted by Mrs. Ruth K. Barton of Chicago, its present director. On Jan. 1 it was turned over by the national board to the Chicago association, which on that date assumed responsibility for its management.

The center is attractive enough to delight any girl's heart. The little cafeteria is gay with green and black chairs and tables and rose hangings. The gymnasium is strictly up to date in equipment and is big enough for a regular baseball game—and these girls are ardent fans, too!

Upstairs is the big clubroom, with its upholstered wicker furniture, cretonne curtains, pretty rugs, Victrola, and a real fireplace that burns honest-to-goodness logs. The library, across the hall, is all a soft tan tint in rugs and furnishings, with a long reading table, little writing desks by the windows, and one wall lined with bookcases filled with books from the Chicago public library, which has established a branch here.

Clubs are flourishing in sewing, cooking, gymnasium, dancing, and ukelele playing. One or two nights a week there is a party or entertainment planned and carried out by the girls themselves, who make all their own rules and regulations and see that they are carried out.

The executive committee has in addition to the five women named above, a body of representatives chosen by the girls from among their own number, Louise Koch, Ethel Sherlock, Grace Vik, Laura Stall, Gussie Fledda, Margaret Schwercka, and Anna Young.

Adjoining the building is a vacant lot which has been cleared and leveled off into an outdoor playground, where with the coming of spring one may expect to see such diversions as baseball, jumping rope, and mumblepeg flourishing gayly in the shadow of the tall surrounding factories.

Among the Chicago women who as members of the metropolitan board of the Chicago Y. W. C. A. have devoted their time and interest to the success of the new center are Mrs. C. C. Bullock, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. R. R. Donnelley, Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, Mrs. Luke I. Wilson, Miss M. Elizabeth True, Mrs. George F. Brown Jr., Mrs. John V. Farwell, Mrs. William R. Folsom Mrs. George I. Swift, Mrs. Lawrence Viles, Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. Holmes Forsythe, Mrs. William H. Hubbard, and Mrs. Robert McCall.

MRS. RAYMOND A. RAILTON PHOTO BY MOFFETT.

MRS. HENRY W. CHENEY PHOTO BY HELEN WEBSTER STUDIO.

Mrs. Raymond A. Railton is president of the auxiliary of St. Anne's hospital, which is composed of club women in the north and northwest part of the city. The auxiliary has initiated a membership drive which will continue through this month. To stimulate interest in the drive a card party will be given on Saturday afternoon at Garfield park refectory. The regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held on Thursday at 2 o'clock.

MRS. NORMAN W. HARRIS PHOTO-©-MOFFETT.

Mrs. Norman W. Harris of Winnetka is in charge of arrangements for a recital to be given by Benno Moiseiwitsch on Tuesday evening, Feb. 8, at Mandel hall, University of Chicago. The affair is to be given for the benefit of the Bethlehem Day nursery, and will be given under the auspices of "The Esoteric," a university organization. Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson heads the list of patronesses, which numbers thirty-four prominent women.

The Illinois League of Women Voters, of which Mrs. Henry W. Cheney is president, will hold an intensive course in civic and political instruction from Jan. 24 to Feb. 5 inclusive, at the central branch of the Y. W. C. A. at 59 East Monroe street. Lectures by nationally known leaders will be given, and at the end of the course there will be an examination. Those receiving diplomas will be qualified to direct the movement for better citizenship in their own communities.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

At the literary meeting of the Chicago Woman's club Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Recital hall Joseph Jastrow, professor of psychology, University of Wisconsin, will speak on "Education for Intelligence." Tomorrow at 2:15 o'clock the philosophy and science department will meet in the northeast parlor to discuss the subject "Greek and Roman Philosophy"; speakers, Mrs. Albert H. Roler, Mrs. John L. Pfaff, Mrs. James H. Channon, and Mrs. George N. McMurray. Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the following departments will hold business meetings: Philanthropy, reform, art and literature, and philosophy and science. A New Treatment that Beautifies Your Complexion

Soften—Whiten—Cleanse in the Common Sense Way

The texture of your skin depends upon the size of the pores. These little pores are the natural exits of the oils that tiny glands beneath the skin manufacture to nourish the tissues and keep the skin soft and smooth.

The dust and dirt that the face is exposed to, settle in these little pores and clog them. If these impurities are allowed to remain they will enlarge the pores and irritate the skin. A muddy, greasy skin is simply one that can not breathe.

What Does Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream Do?

Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream is made of soothing oil emollients and whitening lemon. It works deep into the pores where soap and water will not go. The soft cream assimilates the oil and dirt that has accumulated in the pores and removes it. Rub the dainty cream well into the skin with the tips of the fingers. Always rubbing outward and upward so that tired droopy lines are not encouraged. Then with a soft cloth remove the cleansing cream.

Now that the Skin Can Breathe—Nourish the Tissues

Angelus Skin Food replaces all the natural oils that exposure, over-heated houses and frequent powderings have drawn out of the skin. Without these oils the skin would soon become harsh, drawn and wrinkled.

At night, after your pores are cleansed with Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream, massage Angelus Skin Food well into the skin. The hungry tissues quickly absorb the soothing nourishment and are kept supple and refreshed.

Angelus Skin Food is an excellent retiring cream. It not only strengthens and vitalizes the tissues beneath the skin but it whitens and softens the surface at the same time.

There are no harmful chemicals in any of the Angelus Creams and they positively will not grow hair. All the whitening is done by the action of the lemon which has been deftly blended with the soothing substances.

Start the Angelus Treatment Today

All smart shops, drug and department stores carry Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream and Angelus Skin Food. Don't be without them another day. Start tonight to give your complexion the soft silky texture of health by using these delightful creams.

The "Arch" Enemy of the Foot

Metal appliances are the "arch" enemy of the foot. Your arch was not made to be propped up stiffly by a piece of unyielding metal. It was provided by Nature with a set of muscles fully capable of supporting it. If those muscles have become weak, an artificial prop may afford a temporary support, but since it is merely a "crutch" it will finally tend to make the arch weaker.

Like the human foot, the Cantilever Shoe has a flexible arch. The foot muscles, having full freedom to exercise, grow strong from use.

Buy a pair of Cantilevers and see how really delightful a walk can be. How snugly comfortable your feet feel. How almost unconsciously you straighten up and hold your head high. And don't be surprised if the first friend you meet exclaims about the pep in your step and the smile in your eyes.

Cantilever Shoes correct and prevent fallen arches. Well-made, trim lines, fine leathers. Widths AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

Chicago Area of Methodist Church Reports Progress

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter

THERE are 920 pastoral charges, owning 1,375 churches and 797 parsonages, valued at $18,660,135, in the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church, according to an announcement made by Dr. Joseph W. Van Cleave, area secretary of the committee on conservation and advance.

The great bulk of the membership of the Chicago area is embraced in the territory covered by the Central Illinois, Illinois, and Rock River conferences. This territory extends from north to south about 200 miles, and from east to west about 200 miles on the southern border and about 150 miles on the northern border. Nineteen of the twenty-one districts of the area are within these limits.

The membership of the church is 230,000 in this territory, with approximately 690,000 adherents. These contributed to the benevolences of the church $1,518,916. In Cook county alone there are 300 Methodist Episcopal churches.

In Rock River conference, which includes Chicago, there are 76,626 members, 2,539 probationers, 6,697 nonresident members, and 225,000 adherents.

There are 366 Sunday schools, 7,729 teachers and officers, with an enrollment in the Sunday schools of 89,576. There are 381 church buildings, worth over $7,605,300, and 240 parsonages, valued at $1,162,575.

The Rock River conference, after filling out lists for deaths, removals, and withdrawals, shows a net increase of 5,324. There is a total increase in the area in full members of 9,352. The Rock River conference alone paid over $849,000 this year for benevolences and over $500,000 for missions. In four years the total amount paid to retiring ministers has trebled, reaching $79,000 in 1920. About fifteen new churches were dedicated in 1920.

The Rev. Thomas V. Shannon, D. D., is the energetic pastor of St. Thomas Apostle Roman Catholic church, Fifty-fifth street and Kimbark avenue. Father Shannon formerly was pastor of St. Francis Xavier church, Wilmette, and editor in chief of the New World, the official organ of the archdiocese of Chicago and the province of Illinois, of which he is now an associate editor. During the war Father Shannon was in charge of Liberty loan drives in the Roman Catholic churches of Chicago and is the sponsor of a community house movement in his parish, making him one of the best known and most popular clergymen of the Roman Catholic church in Chicago. He has but recently returned from an extensive tour abroad with the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis C. Kelley, D. D., in the interests of the foreign relief work now being carried on by the Roman Catholic Church Extension society.

On Thursday evening Haydn's "Creation" will be sung at the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, by the Butler Brothers Choral society, George L. Tenney, director. The soloists will be Ethel Benedict, soprano; Arthur Kraft, tenor; Major Fairbank, baritone; Angelina Curtis, pianist, and Hugh Porter, organist.

The Paulist choristers will give a sacred concert this afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Anne's church auditorium, Garfield boulevard, near Wentworth avenue, for the benefit of the memorial fund, which is to be used in the erecting of a shaft in memory of the gold star heroes of St. Anne's church.

An evangelistic campaign conducted by the Rev. Franklin W. Swift, D. D., in the First Baptist church of Irving Park, North Kostner avenue and Irving Park boulevard, will be brought to a close this evening, after a series of successful meetings during the last two weeks. Evangelist Swift is not a sensational preacher, but seeks to follow the method of the late Dwight L. Moody in awakening the church membership, and his campaign in Irving Park has been markedly fruitful.

The roundtable of the Episcopal clergy will meet tomorrow morning at St. Paul's church, Fiftieth street and Dorchester avenue, the Rev. George H. Thomas, rector. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m. and the Rev. John Henry Hopkins, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, will speak on "How to Listen to Music," after which there will be an open discussion on church music and the "New Church Hymnal." The Rev. William Brewster Stoskopf, B. D., rector of the Church of the Ascension, is the president of the roundtable and the Rev. Erle H. Merriman is its secretary.

Emmanuel church choir of La Grange, under the direction of William Ripley Dorr, will give a special musical program in the First Congregational church of Oak Park this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Edwin Stanley Seder will play the organ for the accompanied numbers, and Mr. Dorr will conduct. Under the management of F. Wight Neumann, Emmanuel church choir will give a public concert in Kimball hall, Jackson boulevard and Wabash avenue, on Sunday, Feb. 6.

The pastor of Grace Methodist church, 870 North La Salle street, the Rev. Raymond L. Semans, is preaching a series of sermons to young men on the Sunday evenings during this month, prefaced by an address by a prominent business or professional man. This evening Mr. Semans will preach on "The Young Man and His Capital," and Dr. Channing W. Barrett will give an address on "How to Keep Well."

The University Congregational church at its annual meeting last Wednesday voted to change its name to the Hyde Park Congregational church. The inauguration of a staff ministry was also decided upon, with Prof. Theodore G. Soares of the department of practical theology of the University of Chicago as the preacher and the Rev. Paul G. Macy of the Eliot Congregational church in Boston as the pastor. Directors of religious education will also be employed, and a forward movement in education is planned.

The central and west side branches of the Y. W. C. A. will hold a united vesper service this afternoon at 4:30 at Central branch, 59 East Monroe street, when Miss Marea Vlasto, religious director of west side branch, will lead, and the Girl's Reserves will present a New Year's pageant.

A Christian workers' conference at Moody Bible institute is announced for Feb. 1 to 5 inclusive in a call issued by Dr. James M. Gray, dean of the institute, who states that the purpose of the conference is not so much teaching and preaching as it is united prayer for a revival among Christians everywhere. Thomas E. Stevens, director of the Great Commission Prayer league, will be the prayer leader, and other speakers expected include the Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D.; Dr. R. A. Torrey, dean of the Los Angeles Bible institute; the Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., recently pastor of Metropolitan tabernacle, London, England, and men of like ability.

Would your husband marry you again?

For 3,000 years supreme

Palm and olive oils were Cleopatra's cosmetics. They were the luxuries of the Greek and Roman baths.

They were the basis of all ancient beauty. Now modern experts go overseas to get them, and blend them for you in this scientific way.

There never has been, and never will be, anything to match them for the skin.

Other soaps cost five times more

There are soaps which cost five times as much as Palmolive. Most facial soaps are higher priced. But there are no soap ingredients more costly than palm and olive oils.

There is nothing so luxurious.

It is only because we make it for millions that Palmolive sells at 10c.

Palmolive factories work day and night to supply the demand. The costly oils are bought in enormous quantities.

Result, the popular 10-cent price and the most popular toilet soap in the world.

Fortunate is the woman who can answer "yes." But many a woman, if she is honest with herself, is forced to be in doubt—after that she pays stricter attention to her personal attractions.

A radiant skin, glowing and healthy, is more than a "sign" of youth. It is youth. And any woman can enjoy it.

Beauty's basis is pure, mild, soothing soap. Never go to sleep without using it. Women should never overlook this all-important fact. The basis of beauty is a thoroughly clean skin. And the only way to it is soap.

There is no harm in cosmetics, or in powder, rouge, if you frequently remove them. Never leave them on overnight.

The skin consists of countless glands and pores. They clog with oil, with dirt, with perspiration—with refuse from within and without.

The first requirement is to cleanse those pores. And soap alone can do that.

A costly mistake

Harsh, irritating soaps have led many women to omit soap. That is a costly mistake. A healthy, rosy, clear, smooth skin must be a clean skin, first of all.

There is no need for irritating soap. Palmolive soothes and softens while it cleans. It is based on palm and olive oils.

Force the lather into the pores by a gentle massage. Every touch is balmy. Then all the foreign matter comes out in the rinsing.

If your skin is very dry, use cold cream before and after washing.

No medicaments

Palmolive is just a soothing, cleansing soap. Its blandness comes through blending palm and olive oils. Nothing since the world began has proved so suitable for delicate complexions.

All its beneficial effects come through gentle, thorough cleaning. There are no medicaments. No drugs can do what Nature does when you aid her with this scientific Palmolive cleansing.

Millions of women get their envied complexions through the use of Palmolive soap.

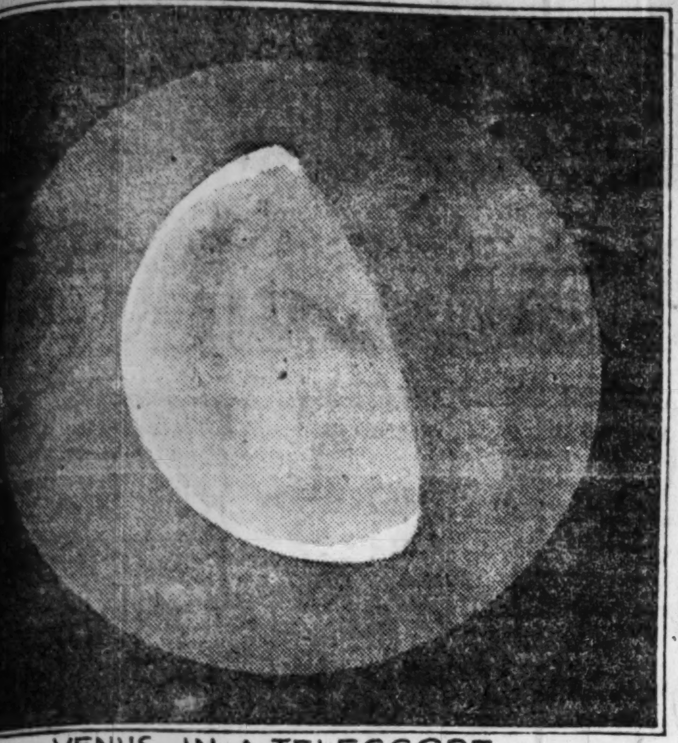
ASTRONOMY



VENUS IN A TELESCOPE
AS SEEN IN THE DAYTIME
BY S. F. MAXWELL

THE PLANET VENUS.

VENUS, the planet nearest the earth, is coming into its full glory as the evening star. You can hardly have failed to notice it is that huge, pure white light t shines off toward the southwest r sunset. To make its appearance m more interesting, the planet Mars close by, as a tiny red dot.

The two form an interesting sight. Mars is far away now, on the other ide of the sun, while Venus is comparatively near the earth. You can ee this if you will watch the two r a few nights; Mars appears to be nost standing still among the stars, hile Venus has a noticeable motion.

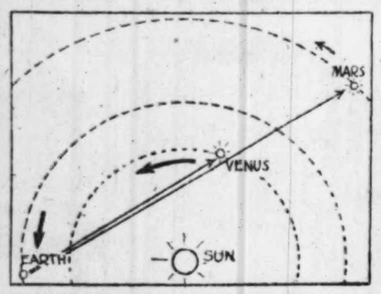
Venus is a planet much like the th. The two are so nearly the e size that if they were placed by side it would be hard to note t Venus was a little the smaller. planet is 8,800 miles in diameter, us is 7,700.

ike the earth, it has air, clouds, d and water, mountains and storms. s the clouds in its air that make ine so white. Clouds reflect over e-fourths of the light that strikes , and so appear as white or whiter fresh fallen snow.

nus land is densely covered by s, and so we see the planet al- wrapped in a dense mantle of tness. So intense, indeed, is the of Venus that astronomers can- study the planet at night, but must h it during the day, when our own dilutes its glare to a point where thing can be seen.

r so large a globe, Venus land ap- usually placid. There are no extremes of summer and winter . The sun's rays are stronger than here, but the cloudy blank ilizes their force, and the result- climate must be nearly that of a y, tropical day on earth, day after year on year, and age on age.



WHY MARS AND VENUS LOOK NEAR EACH OTHER

Geologists tell us that the climate that Venus is enjoying is the normal and usual one for the earth, and that fully four-fifths of the climate of the geological past has been of this type, with little difference between the equator and the poles. At intervals this climate is broken by periods of extreme weather, which, while they are severe, do not last long. The earth at present is undergoing one of the seven epochs, with the zonal difference extremely pronounced.

If at any time men should cross the 24,000,000 miles of space which separate Venus and the earth when the two are nearest together, they would find there a world that they could live on, and which might be to the earth what America was to the old eastern hemisphere.

Standing on one of the mountain tops on Venus and looking out through rifts in the clouds to the stars and the black sky beyond, the full earth would be seen shining. It would be steely blue in color, with flashes of red and yellow, and would be six or eight times as bright as Venus is to us at the best. From here the earth would seem like some huge, clearly blazing lamp in the sky, while moving back and forth around it would be a lesser yellow satellite, the moon.

MAJESTIC.

Harry Langdon:

"We'll go home in my pleasure car."

"Do you call this a pleasure car?"

"Yea, when you get out of it."

"Kiss me or walk home."

"I'd rather walk home."

"Funny they all walk home; guess I'll buy a motor boat."

"Are you takin' a picture of my car?"

"Certainly."

"Bet it'll be a tintype."

"Now, lean on the car as if it's yours."

"Why, the car's all damp."

"Yea, so much dew (due) on it."

Joe Morris and Flo Campbell:

"How fast do you knit?"

"O, about ten knots an hour."

"What's that gonna be when it's finished?"

"Dunno. Give it a chance; it's young yet."

"O, gee, I dropped a stitch; anybody down there see it?"

"Goodness, but that's a good looking knitting bag. Will you give it to me?"

"Well, you can use it in the winter, my horse wears it in the summer."

"I didn't know you had a horse."

'Oh, yes, I'm a horse tailor. I make harnesses."

"Gee, but you look swell from here, come on up and look at yourself."

"When you go up the people cry: 'Don't he look beautiful' and when you come down they say, 'Don't he look natural.'"

John Hyams and Leila McIntyre:

"I wonder where the switch is?"

"Here switchie, here switchie."

"Won't you step in?"

"I don't know of any other way to get in."

"Why, yes; this letter came the day before yesterday."

"That's funny; she just mailed it this morning."

"Tomorrow isn't here yet."

"No, but you can expect it most any day now."

PALACE.

James Mullen and Anna Francis:

"I was in love with two girls, Anna and Marie, and I didn't know which one I wanted to marry. But one day my question was solved. I was walking along the street and picked up a cigar that had the words 'Havanna, Havafina,' so I married Anna.

"Today's my wooden wedding."

"Why, you're not married."

"I know, but five years ago today I asked a girl to marry me and she woodent (wouldn't)."

"Can you keep a secret?"

"You should see my cellar."

The Cartooners

By Guy F. Lee.

What a wonderful race the cartoonists have founded,
What marvelous nerve their activities speak!
They leap from the picture whenever astounded,
And survive a whole crockery store every week.

They stand on their heads in a manner most eerie,
Dive off of a mountain or jump in the lake;
And yet they're on hand the next morn bright and cheery
To do what the artist's strange fancy may take.

Their bank roll's unending; they're always in clover;
In every condition you find them "among";
Yet they speak a queer lingo—note cryptic marks over
Their shoulders whenever they're startled or stung.

Cartoonists, you fill me with constant elation;
Your tribe splits my sides with their actions outre;
Could I be acquent with your odd inspiration
I'd call it my most educational day.

If I could but mingle with such super mortals
I'd forswear the hope of all riches and fame;
For a bid to step into those singular portals
Would make every other ambition seem tame.

THE POTTERS

A VISIT TO THE SNUBURBS

ILLUSTRATED by J. H. STRIEBEL

by J. P. McEvoy

The Potters know the Crottys away out in one of the snuburbs, or snoburbs, of the city. Occasionally the Potters get up enough energy to make the trip—and this Sunday afternoon is one of the occasions. Of course, Mamie stayed home—Clarence or Bill is expected. And Brother Bill must go out with his gang. So it is up to Pa and Ma and the baby to do the pretty-pretty. Professor: Give us a chord in "S.".

SCENE I—THEY GO.

PA: Sunday's the only day I rest.
Why should I call on those birds out there?
Making calls is a dad-blamed pest—
I'd rather park in my easy chair.
MA: Now, Pa, we owe them a call, you know.
PA: Well, call yourself, you're so wild to go.
MA: You said you'd go—and you're going, too.
PA: I'll bet I don't.
MA: I'll bet you do.
(It looks like a deadlock, but Pa compromises by agreeing to go—he always does.)
MA: Now, dress the baby. . . . Where's my purse?
PA: Dress him yourself—I'm not a nurse.
Find my shirt, I've gotta shave.
MA: Find it yourself, I'm not your slave. . . .
Now the baby's dressed, if he'll just stay clean.
PA: If he doesn't, I'll bounce on his little bean.
MA: You bounce on him and I'll bounce on you.
(To baby): Him mean old daddy—him mad at ooh.
PA: C'mon, are you ready?
MA: Just a minute or so.
PA: Hurry up, let's go—My Gawd, you're slow.
(Five minutes later.)
Say, Ma, ain't you ready? C'mon, let's go.
MA: In a minute or so.
(Five minutes later.)
PA: C'mon, let's go.
My gawd, youre slow.
MA: Just a minute or so.
PA: C'mon, let's go. C'MON, LET'S GO.
(They go—finally.)

SCENE II—THEY ARRIVE.

MRS. CROTTY (looking out window):
Look! Some one's coming down the street—
It's the Potters, Tom—for the love of Pete!
Why don't they let a person know?
And they'll want some supper before they go.
And that roast is nearly gone—O, dear!
Go and get dressed—they're nearly here.
TOM CROTTY: O, d—— the Potters! I want to rest.
Who asked them here?
MRS. CROTTY: Go on, get dressed.
And look at this room, the way it's messed?
TOM CROTTY: Why don't they stay home?
MRS. CROTTY: Go on, get dressed.
TOM CROTTY: Tell 'em I'm sick and gone to bed.
I don't wantta dress—tell 'em I'm dead.
MRS. CROTTY: Go on, get dressed. Hurry up, I said.

MRS. CROTTY (at the door):
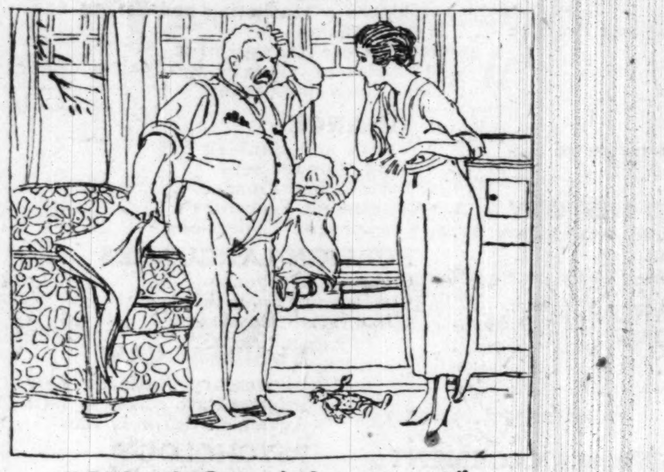
How do you do, Mrs. Potter. . . . Mr. Potter, too.
And what a sweet baby! Coo coo—coo coo. . . .
Won't you come right in? Put your wraps down here.
Tom was just saying to me: "My dear,
I wish the Potters would come out again."
Yes—he's just getting dressed. O, you know these men!
How well you're looking—and the baby, too!
What a sweet little baby! . . . Coo coo—coo coo.
O, Tom, hurry up; the Potters are here.
TOM (aloud): Bully for them! . . . I'm coming, my dear.
(To himself): Why in thahel don't they stay at home?
I'd like to bounce on that Potter's dome.



"O, d— the Potters! I want to rest."

MRS. CROTTY: I made him get dressed—he was just a sight. . .
My dear, now isn't this room a fright—
And I straightened it up three times today.
But you know how it is—a child must play.
MA POTTER: You ought to see my place, my dear.
It's a perfect fright—not like yours here. .
TOM (enters): How d'ye do, Mrs. Potter? . . . 'Lo, Peter, old top. . . .
'Lo, little shaver . . . looks just like his pop. . . .
Glad you came out today. . . . Well, what do you know?
The Missus was saying just a moment ago:
"I do wish the Potters would come out today."
And you DID IT, by gosh! . . . You surprised us, I'll say.
(Note—I'll say they did!)

The conversation here splits into two parts: The men, of course, are left to talk over important business—you know men have such important things to talk about between themselves—while the women go into the bedroom to discuss secrets.

In the Bedroom.

MRS. CROTTY: I'm so glad to see you. I was just wishing you'd come out.

MRS. POTTER: I could hardly wait—I wanted to see that new coat of yours.

MRS. C.: O, it's nothing. It couldn't compare with yours.

(Note—It cost twice as much and and Mrs. C. knows it. So does Mrs. P.)

MRS. P.: O, what a beauty! And what's that, a new hat?

MRS. C.: O, yes; Tom just insisted upon me getting it.

(Note—He did like fun!)

MRS. P.: I suppose the boys are busy in there talking business. Peter is all business. He worries about it so much. I don't think he ever thinks of anything else.

MRS. C.: Just like my Tom. I say to him, "Bother your old business," but he goes right ahead . . . thinks of nothing else. . . . O, by the way, did you hear about Maude (whisper, whisper).

MRS. P.: My DEAR, you don't mean it!

MRS. C.: And she knew he was married all the time and (whisper, whisper).

MRS. P. No! Honestly?

MRS. C.: As sure as I'm telling you. But don't tell a soul. I promised I wouldn't tell.

MRS. P.: O, you know I won't! You knew the Nutleys are having trouble, didn't you? They say that (whisper, whisper).

MRS. C.: I suspected it.

MRS. P.: Oh, yes, and they say that (whisper, whisper), but don't tell a soul I told you. I wouldn't have it get out for the world. . . . I hear you have a maid.

Mrs. C.: And she's a jewel. I'll tell you about her some time. . . . But I think we girls ought to be getting back to the boys. They'll miss us.

In the Living Room.

CROTTY: Well, what d'ye know?

POTTER: Nothing much. What d'ye know?

CROTTY: O, nothing much. How's business?

POTTER: O, not so good. How's yours?

CROTTY: Not so good. D'ye think it'sll pick up?

POTTER. I think so. Do you?

CROTTY: I think so. But just now every department in our place is working overtime except the manufacturing and the shipping.

POTTER: That's a good one—haw, haw!

CROTTY: I'll say it is.

POTTER: It sure is. . . .

CROTTY: I'll say so.

POTTER: It's the berries, as Bill would say. Bill is my son, you know.

CROTTY: O, yes. . . . Say, I heard the other day from a fellow who knows a fellow in the internal revenue office that you can get (whisper, whisper, whisper).

MR. P.: You can? How much?

MR. C.: Only twenty-five dollars a quart.

MR. P.: Where?

MR. C. (Whisper, whisper, whisper). But don't tell a soul. I promised I wouldn't tell.

MR. P.: O, you know I won't.

(Pause while a painful search is being made on both sides for an idea.)

MR. C.: Whaddye think of Harding?

MR. P.: O, I don't know. Whaddye think of him?

MR. C.: Well he may do and he may not.

MR. P.: That's just exactly what I think—he may do and he may not.

MR. C.: But I think maybe he'll be all right.

MR. P.: So do I. I think maybe he'll be all right.

MR. C.: And then again, I don't know. He seems weak and undivided in his mind.

MR. P.: He does, now, don't he?

MR. C.: He sure does. I like people who have clear cut, definite ideas of their own and are not afraid to state them.

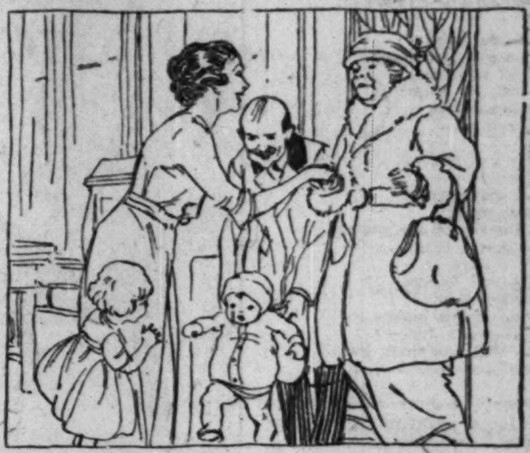
MR. P.: So do I. You said something that time.

MR. C.: You know I did.

MR. P.: You sure did.

MR. C.: I'll say I did.

MR. P.: Yea bo.



"How do you do, Mrs. Potter?"

(About two hours more of this—and then.)

MRS. POTTER: Well, we must be going. . . .
MRS. CROTTY: O, don't go yet.
MRS. POTTER: O, we simply must. Now, don't forget
To call on us. . . . We've enjoyed our stay.
MRS. CROTTY: We've enjoyed your visit—come back some day.
Good-by, Mrs. Potter.
MR. CROTTY: Well, folks, adoo!
Come back again, or we'll call on you.
MRS. CROTTY: Good-by, Mr. Potter . . . and baby, too.
What a dear little baby! Coo coo, coo coo!
(And that's that!)

ART

Artist Members of the Arts Club Give Art Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett.

Sunshine and flowers,
  A dancing breeze,
Color and motion—
  The both of these
At war in a garden
  By purple seas.

Sunshine and flowers,
  A marble fawn—
Mischief and laughter
  To play upon
Where the sea by the garden
  Sighs in the dawn.

Sunshine and flowers,
  A crimson noon
From the molten palette
  Of rose-strewn June—
Fawn! Will love touch you
  At rise of moon?

EACH year the Arts club has an exhibition of paintings by its professional members, and to that exhibition only one painting from each artist is permitted entrance. This, on the face of it, would apparently work toward that elimination of the weaker brethren, for which juries and hanging committees are (apparently) concocted as the usual prelude to the more official and public exhibit.

In the present Arts club exhibition this is exactly what has happened. Little has been hung that would not have passed the most jaundiced judge, keen as he might have been to put the "thumbs down" mark upon it.

Undoubtedly the most pretentious painting is the large canvas by Edward J. Holslag, "The Nymph's Gambol," a canvas with deep shadows and a wealth of rich color. With the lighting to which it is subjected, it is difficult to make clear to one's self the true inwardness of the picture.

A distant sea may be distinguished, and, nearer, a green, flower studded bank, where a group of nymphs dance to the accompaniment of a bulking satyr. Backing the group is a dense forest grove. It is here that the lighting defrauds one of most pleasure because with the exterior shadows thrown upon the glass the depth and color of the variegated foliage is practically completely lost.

"By the Bay of Algiers," by Carl N. Werntz, might be considered the single painting illustrative of the principles of spring. There is in it the tender, wistful, eternal pathos of the April month. Wide reaches of blue water flow, an unbound sea, from under the green bank where, beneath budding trees (slim, graceful silhouettes of larger growth), laughs a glad group of sunny Grecian maidens.

Frederic M. Grant gives in his "A Summer Garden"—to which, by the way, the lines that head this column refer—a delightful, beautiful, picturesque spot with blue distances of sea and sky. The foreground is the corner of a garden, rich to overflowing with all the prolific abundances of flowers gone mad in the intoxicating nearness of the summer sun. It is one of the most decorative paintings in the exhibit.

"California Hills," by Edward B. Butler, is a landscape excellent in composition, treatment, color, feeling, and appeal. I cannot remember when I have seen a picture by Mr. Butler which I have liked as thoroughly. One might object to it that it verges upon the finish of the prudent academic, but though that inclination does convey the thought of spontaneity, like Prometheus, bound, yet for its sheer beauty, definiteness, and clarity this objection is thrown out as never written.

There are several paintings of flowers, and it is none too easy to tell which is the more likable. "The Gold of Autumn," by Dorothy Visju Anderson, is purely decorative and to be praised for that quality. A mass of flowers, making a marvelous harmony of conflicting colors, pours from a massive, dense blue goblet. Framed as the canvas is in blue, the effect is extremely satisfactory.

"A Rose Tree," by Anna L. Stacey, is lovely in color and in the rendering of the flowers. The frame undoubtedly detracts from the full pleasure one should get from the beauty of the canvas.

The still life, also of flowers, by Anna Lynch, is another beautiful piece, grateful to those who delight in faithful translations of the growing blossoms to paint. The decorative panel by Mabel Key deals again with the same subject, but the treatment between this and the still life by Anna Lynch is so different that one would scarcely dream of placing the two in the same paragraph were he not hardened to such extravagances of conduct by the hard metier of journalism.

Having placed them side by each in this story, a word concerning Mabel Key's picture is in order. The color is rich, the painting solid, the strokes firm, and the whole vigorous, realistic, and truthful as well as beautiful and intensely decorative.

Lee Sturgis is showing an exceedingly nice etching, "The Last Snow Storm."

Among the other paintings, which I hope I can mention at greater length next Sunday, are "A Refuge," by Mary H. Wicker; "Call to Meeting," by Joseph Pierre Birren; "Laccoliths," by Josephine L. Reichmann; "Spanish Courtyard," by L. O. Griffith; "A Passing Memory," by Jessie Benton Evans; "In the Open," by Pauline Palmer; "Portrait," by Cecil Clark Davis; "Primavera," by Katherine Dudley; "Buttons," by Anita Willets Burnham; and an excellent portrait of a young boy, "J. E. T. Jr.," by Elisabeth Telling.

"Button," by Anita Willets Burnham, a lesson in persistence in the exhibition of paintings by club members, which is now on view at the Arts club.

On Tuesday the various interesting exhibitions which have been shown at the Art institute during the last month are to be taken down, and on Jan. 25 one of the institute's most popular exhibitions will open—the twenty-fifth annual exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity. The opening reception will be held in the afternoon, and in the evening the exhibiting artists will be entertained by the Art institute at the annual dinner.

The jury for the exhibition includes the following artists: Painters, Karl A. Buehr, Edgar S. Cameron, Charles W. Dahlgreen, Frank V. Dudley, Frederick F. Fursman, Frederic M. Grant, Lucie Hartrath, E. Martin Hennings, Wilson Irvine, C. Raymond Johnson, Alfred Juergens, Irma Kohn, Carl R. Krafft, Albert H. Krehbiel, Arvid Nyholm, Pauline Palmer, Frank C. Peyraud, Wellington J. Reynolds, H. Leon Roecker, Gordon St. Clair, and Walter Sargent; sculptors, Leonard Crunelle, Albin Polasek, Gilbert P. Riswold, Lorado Taft, and Emil R. Zettler.

Several additions have been made to the list of prizes that are given as annual events in this exhibition. The additional prizes are: The Fine Arts Building Purchase prize of $500, the Business Men's Art club prize of $100, the Chicago Woman's Aid prize of $50, and the William H. Tuthill prize of $100.

SPEECH-FLUENCY
CLASSES NOW FORMING
Have you ever been asked to speak at a business conference, lodge or political meeting, banquet, private interview, social club affair, or at any speaking event when your knees shook, words failed you, with that heart-thumping nervousness—and you could not express your thoughts intelligently, forcefully and convincingly?
You have often said, "I'd give any amount if I could talk as fluently, interestingly, convincingly and impress people as so-and-so does." Any day you may be called upon for an address, to express your thoughts with precision and power. You will want to attract listeners and hold them. Can you do it? You can accomplish it if you decide to enroll.
Our class lessons are brimful of practical topics, instructive subjects, suggestions, helpful ideas, which you can utilize daily. Every lesson gives you greater courage, decision, fixity of purpose—it makes you more efficient in your business or profession, it will add hundreds of vividly expressive words to your vocabulary, make your language fluent, interesting and convincing; gives you confidence, power of speech and authority in any company; gain more friends, influence, to converse and impress on timely questions. This is just what you accomplish under our chief instructor, Dr. Rostell, Ph.D., of England, the greatest and most thorough teacher in the United States. When you come from under his tutorship you will have the most thorough training obtained in this country or abroad. Quick results and practical for all occasions.
The separate classes have business managers, salesmen, lawyers, club women, physicians, young business ladies, political and bank officials, accountants—men and women from all business lines who hold influential positions in the social and commercial life. Whether you realize it or not, the ability to talk convincingly, confidently and intelligently has a powerful influence for success and advancement in the business world.
An established institution of 30 years' experience, known for its ability in teaching forceful, convincing speech-power-fluency. Two separate classes for men and women, ages 30 to 55 years. Two separate classes for young men and ladies, ages 20 to 28 years, now forming to begin active training January 19th and 20th. Classes or private. Enrolling every day. FARM AND GARDEN

Back Yard Poultry Plant Profitable, Says Suburbanite

By Frank Ridgway.

As you leave the chicken yard at M. A. MacLean's home at Western Springs after hearing him tell about his sturdy little flock of hens you want to go home and start a poultry plant in your own back yard. Perhaps the way he tells about his little band of cacklers is especially appealing, but if Chicago and its suburbs had a few more chicken raisers like him the oriental shipments of eggs into this country would be greatly reduced.

While a chubby Buff Orpington pecked and pecked at the metal tip on Mr. MacLean's shoestring he told how, as an amateur, he was able to produce 1,340 eggs from eight young hens in a single year.

Many suburbanites have met with considerable success by starting out with a few hens. Some are able to have a fresh supply of eggs the year round. Most beginners start with a small flock as Mr. MacLean has done, and his experience, which began a little more than a year ago, is a fair average example of what a novice can do with a few hens in the back yard.

Began with Mixed Flock.

When he started in November, 1919, he knew practically nothing about feeding or handling poultry, and worked out his own scheme, with the aid of advice from neighbors. He began with a mixed flock of hens—three White Orpingtons, one Buff Orpington, two Barred Rocks, and two Rhode Island Reds, a total of eight. He got them in November and they were all April pullets. None of them came from distinguished ancestry, although the Orpingtons look like fair blooded stock.

They began laying on Dec. 7, and when the year was up, on Dec. 6, 1920, the eight pullets had laid 1,340 eggs, an average of almost 168 eggs for each hen. The average egg production for Illinois, according to figures available, is only sixty-one eggs per hen in a year.

The two reds did not start to lay until late in January, and the production records were seriously handicapped when three of the hens had broods in early summer and two others had to be broken up.

The egg records by months follow: December, 67; January, 128; February, 91; March, 107; April, 155; May, 137; June, 101; July, 120; August, 155; September, 146; October, 89; November, 32, and December (first six days), 7.

During his year's experience taking care of the flock and keeping careful records of operations, Mr. MacLean made mistakes, recognized many of them, and will no doubt make better records this year.

His Feed Schedule.

"When I first started out I fed each pullet one handful of mixed grains in the morning and afternoon, an hour before sundown," said Mr. MacLean. "I used cracked corn, oats, wheat, kafir corn, buckwheat, and sunflower seed in the mixture. The ration measured about two-thirds of a quart for the eight fowls.

"I soon found that the chickens ate everything but the cracked corn, leaving this on the floor where it accumulated. Then I cut out the morning grain feed, and they consumed it all. I kept the floor covered with a six inch layer of straw, changing this litter every two weeks. The chickens would leave some of their night's feed, and spend a good part of the next day scratching for the remainder.

"I fed sprouted oats, and always kept a high grade of commercial laying mash in a large hopper where they could eat as they desired. They averaged about four or four and a half pounds of this a month. At noon they were given all of the kitchen waste, which they seemed to relish more than anything else. I make it a rule to give them fresh water every morning, and in zero weather it is changed again at noon.

Sprouting the Oats.

"For sprouting the oats I use five pans, four of them having holes in the bottom to allow water to seep through. These pans are a foot and a half long, a foot wide, and an inch and a half deep. To start the sprouter I fill the bottom pan, the one without holes, an inch deep with oats, and wet it down thoroughly. After two days I transfer the oats to one of he other pans, and proceed as before with the first one. Every morning I sprinkle them well with water, and at the end of ten days the first panful shows a growth of oats from one to two inches high. I feed about two pounds of these tender, green seedlings to the chickens every morning.

"Charcoal, grit and oyster shell are always kept in hoppers where the chickens can get them easily. They seem to relish the shell the most.

"By keeping books on my operations I found that, at the end of the year, I had spent $52.46 for feed and straw. According to retail prices of eggs month by month those 1,340 eggs laid by the eight hens would have cost $77.34. This left a net profit of $24.88, or $3.11 a hen.

First Year's Experience Costly.

"My experience in raising chickens was rather a sad one, but I picked up plenty of experience for this year's attempts. I bought all of my setting eggs from my neighbors and few of them were fertile. Many of them would not hatch. The Buff Orpington was the first to set, on fifteen eggs, and not one of them hatched.

"The second hen, a White Orpington, brought off one chick from thirteen eggs. I placed a dozen White Wyandotte chicks with her, and all lived but one which was accidentally killed. The first of these Wyandottes, which were hatched June 2, laid its first egg on New Year's day this year. A third hen, a White Orpington, brought off six chicks, three of which were killed by cats. All of the others have lived, except the cockerels which were used as 'friers.'"

Mr. MacLean also points out that he used the best kind of feed he could buy, and it happened that his first year's experience came at a time when chicken feed reached its highest price in history. "I might have saved several dollars by mixing my own feeds. The baled straw was rather costly during this time, and I had to use a half a bale every two weeks. But I will get some of this expense back because it has enabled me to enrich my garden."

ICE CREAM AND SODA
CANDY
(Copyright: 1921: By The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)
BRANNER

It was Sunday, and Winnie and Pat were strolling down the avenue. "Let's wrap ourselves around a couple of ice cream sodas," suggested Pat.

Winnie had paid for the sodas after the usual argument as to who would treat, when the clerk handed her back a dime, declaring it was lead.

"Can you beat that?" pouted Winnie, as they continued their walk. "I've had this bad dime four weeks now, and I can't get rid of it!"

Pat looked at Winnie in amazement and declared, "Why, Winnie Winkle, I'm surprised! Don't you ever go to church no more?" Winnie was too shocked to answer.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"DOH TO WORK! DET OUT! DOH DOWN TOWN!"

I.

When I would reprimand my son
For something he has said or done
Parental is my attitude;
Cool my temper—calm my mood,
But he is quite the other way—
When I reproach him, he will say:
"Doh down town!"

II.

A son should not address his dad
In such a way—and I might add
That though he isn't three years old
His manner is by far too bold;
When I would counsel or advise
He yells at me with blazing eyes—
"Doh to work!"

III.

The other day he hit his pup
Athwart the beazer with a cup,
And when I scolded him for that
He threw another at the cat.
"You musn't do that, son," I cried.
And then he dutifully replied:
"Det out!"

IV.

I do not think my little cuss
Should holler at his father thus.
It's hard enough to work all day
Inditing verse like this one, say—
Without him yelling day and night
The minute I would guide him right:
"Doh to work, Det out, Doh down town!"

"Why do you wish to leave us, Susan? What is the cause?"

"Adolphus McManus Ulysses FitzWilliams, ma'am—that's the cause. We're engaged to be married."

"I had no idea any one was waiting upon you. Has he ever been here?"

"No, ma'am. I met him at a ball over in New York. We got introduced at 8 o'clock, had supper at 9, danced together at 10, had another supper at 11, and he asked me to marry him at midnight."

"And when did you say 'Yes'?"

"Half a second after midnight."

"I presume you expect to get married shortly."

"As soon as Dolphus has a hundred dollars saved up. He's got all but ninety-seven of it already."

RIALTO.

"Did you know that they're going to change the name of Central park to Central orchard?"

"Why?"

"Because there are so many pairs under the trees."

"When your wife starts to talk does she know how to stop?"

"I'm unable to say—I've been married only nine years."

"Have you got card feet?"

"Certainly not."

"Then stop shuffling them."

"Did you have any trouble catching the train?"

"No, indeed; it stood still and let me walk right up to it."

"Have you any close friends who have money?"

"All my friends who have money are close."

If It Pleases You, Pay for Instrument and Records in Small Monthly Payments

NO OBLIGATION TO KEEP IT IF YOU ARE NOT ENTIRELY SATISFIED

MODEL K SILVERTONE is a fine floor cabinet instrument, rich, refined and tastefully simple in design, possessing the improvements and refinements shared by the best instruments in the SILVERTONE line. It is made of genuine mahogany, fine polished finish, and genuine quarter sawed oak in the popular dull, fumed finish. The woods used are specially selected for beautiful grain effects and the cabinets are rubbed and finished by hand to bring out their full beauty.

TRUE MUSICAL TONE. With its pleasing design and proportions and its excellent workmanship and finish, Model K SILVERTONE is a fine piece of furniture that makes an instant appeal to good taste. BUT, FIRST OF ALL, Model K is a TRUE MUSICAL INSTRUMENT. The Silvertone Reproducer with which it is equipped is a wonderfully sensitive mechanism, reproducing with marvelous fidelity all sound vibrations from the delicately shaded violin or vocal solo to the heavy instrumentation of a military band. Contributing in no small measure to the tone quality is the Silvertone Convertible Arm, of heavy, massive construction, absolutely free from vibration and so designed that it will play disc records of any make or any size—SILVERTONE, Columbia, Victor, Edison, Pathe, Okeh, Emerson and all others. It plays them all, and it plays them all well.

MOTORDOM

Every Prospect Pleasing—Motor Show Sentiment

Promoters Radiate Good Cheer as New York Exhibit Closes

BY MORROW KRUM.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—[Special.]—With every angle of the industry pointing towards greater business and prosperity for the coming year, the twenty-first annual national automobile show came to a close tonight in the Grand Central palace. The greatest and most comprehensive exhibition of motor cars and accessories ever held is now a brilliant page in automotive history.

The manufacturers, dealers, and salesmen are hurrying back to their home offices bearing tales of optimism and good cheer and orders. They will spend the few days remaining before the opening of the Chicago show in spreading the glad word around their factories, their salesrooms, and customers. They will be busy boosting, shaping their organizations to meet the onslaught of buyers and completing arrangements for the Windy City exhibition.

The optimism of this year is sincere. Each year the word "optimism" goes ringing through the ears of the visitors. The "good year" song bursts out in the newspapers, in the after dinner talks, in the catalogues, and in the promoters' conversations. But the story they tell this year seems reasonable.

It is this: There are on hand in plants and salesrooms in America approximately 100,000 motor cars ready for delivery. That number represents one month's supply during a normal buying year.

Plants are now running on a 25 per cent production basis. That figure is an average. Some are operating on a [illegible] per cent basis, others on 10 per cent. But the average is about 25 per cent. Automobile plants can be shut down on a day's notice, but it takes weeks to speed up production until the peak is reached.

There are in America 9,000,000 automobiles in the hands of owners. Nine million cars wearing out. The replacements required will be in the neighborhood of 1,000,000 machines. The number of buyers who have never owned a motor car before has not been definitely figured, but is placed at an approximate figure of 400,000.

Now the cause of the slump in the motor business was the reduction in Fords made several weeks ago by the Detroit company. The public, thinking that all other motors would be cut, went on a buying strike, and the business went into hysterics.

It has been assured that prices will not be cut. No cuts were announced at the New York show.

So the manufacturers believe, the public being convinced that the cars they desire are not going to be reduced in price, will commence to purchase. The market will open up, the factories will commence to roar, and the salesrooms will be the scene of great activity, the leaders of the industry assert.

The early days of spring will find a shortage of pleasure cars, is the prediction, and the summary seems to make it stand up.

But more than all of the foregoing reasons is the belief in a coming prosperity stronger because of the orders the salesmen received during the show. One sales manager made the statement last night that his company had averaged six orders every day of the show. Another placed the average of his company at five.

Every exhibiting company sold cars and that's the blood of the industry. The boosters can talk "optimism" from morn 'til night, but if the order blanks remain unused their hearts will not be in their conversation. However, all agreed that this show just closed was beyond expectations successful, and all are now looking forward to the Chicago show with happiness instead of fear.

The show just closed was without doubt the largest ever held in New York. Four floors of the Grand Central palace were filled with motor cars and accessories. Greater crowds attended than ever before. It is impossible to learn the number of cars sold during the exhibition, but each company reports great success.

The automobiles exhibited did not vary greatly from those of last year's show. The inclination seems to be to standardize the pleasure cars of America. There were perhaps not more than fifteen radical changes among the eighty-nine different makes. All cars were stream lined and more comfortable. Many were dressed in brilliant colors. Many comforting devices for tourists were found in the accessories.

The manufacturers are concentrating on fours, sixes, and eights. The popular priced cars were the most sought by the buyers. The public wants slower and more comfortable motors, some dealers argue, while others assert that the buyers want more speed and more comfort, too. The fours and sixes predominated the show.

The show just closed was America's answer to the challenge of the French show at Paris and the British national show at Olympia and "the White City." The results of last year's work was found, one of the notable features being in the lines of the closed bodies, even in the low priced and medium priced cars, which are becoming more beautiful, the bodies low, roomy, shapely, rather than the cumbersome and uncomfortable closed types of former years. This was particularly noticed in the sedan and coupe styles.

That the interior appearance has become strongly American is shown in the following instance, related by one of the largest custom built body builders in New York.

"I was in one of the largest upholstering houses devoted exclusively to automobile fabrics a day or so ago," he said, "and I saw 'home grown' cloths that excelled any imported material. Those cloths were used in preference to imported fabrics in many of the cars exhibited at the palace."

There were many devices for eliminating small noises in the cars shown this year, one being the new gear shift on the Cole. Great attention was also paid to gasoline saving devices, many cars having certain attachments to heat the mixture and so forth.

The coming season will be bigger and better than ever before—that was the closing word of the show.

A MUNICIPAL SNOW BATTLE—The New York police recently have been receiving instructions in the operation of snow tractors, built after the lines of army tanks. These new power units are expected to rid every street in the city of snow in one day. The twelve horse power tractors, which either pull or push big plows, have been purchased in large numbers and are stationed at various fire houses ready for any traffic emergency.

The Ratio.

There is one automobile to every sixteen people in the United States. The population may therefore be roughly proportioned as six riders to ten dodgers.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

The End.

Here lies the body of Jim Lake, tread
softly all who pass;
He thought his foot was on the brake,
but it was on the gas.
—"Jack Canuck."

You've been over it. Unburden yourself by addressing "World's Worst Road," The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Give the exact location of the stretch you struck. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

Florida Short Cuts.

HELPFUL natives advised me to cross from Melbourne to Kissimmee in motoring from Florida's east coast to Tampa on the west, and thus save some ninety miles of the regular route through Daytona, Sanford, and Orlando. I did. Also I'd like to meet up again with the helpful natives! Not far from Melbourne I entered upon a trail that dived through the deepest everglades, a writhing path of livid ruts. I carried no moonshine, but frequently saw snakes, lying hopelessly in the mud after struggling vainly to cross that trail. Would advise sailing due east, like Columbus, to reach the west coast, rather than to tackle the famous short cut until every inch of it is pulled from the swamp. L. L. M.

O, Very Michigan!

Coal Valley, Milan and the rest of the "highway immorals" may now retire to the dressing room. The gilded palm goes to the stretch of sand road near New Buffalo on the Blue Polo line from Michigan City to St. Joseph. You fall violently in love with Illinois mud after the first five minutes of your struggle over yonder. M. H. T.

Nominations Closed.

I wish to second the nomination of W. R., who offers the Cannonball trail between Lamoille and Dover, Ill., as the worst on earth. It has been just that for twenty years and no one has ever paid any attention to the disgrace except now and then to dump a load of gravel into one of its mud holes. As a close second I offer the main street of Tiskilwa, Ill., a part of the Indian Head trail. B. S.

On, Wisconsin!

Don't let any motorist be lured into taking Wisconsin State highway 12 as the short route to Minneapolis. The log book marks it a trunk line, but beware! Between Tomah and Black River Falls is the most abominable path I have ever seen. The faint trail winds through sand ruts for nineteen miles, marked by continuous rows of trees only. Were it not for the trees the tourist could imagine himself in the Sahara desert. F. D. F.

Gear Knowledge Prime Essential in Driving Car

Improved Transmission Big Feature of New Models

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE war has brought us a number of improvements in the mechanism of the car. That is to say, under the stern lash of military needs many weaknesses were discovered and remedied which, in the ordinary course of events, would have taken years to bring out. Not all these innovations have yet actually made their appearances, but the national shows will undoubtedly place most of them on public view.

Whatever else the war may bring us, it is devoutly to be hoped that some improvement in present types of transmissions or gearsets may result. Engineers are unanimously agreed that the gearset is far the most backward of all the mechanical units that go to make up the modern motor car chassis. And we may reasonably hope that some improvement in transmission design is imminent so that it will be of interest to examine the present types of this mechanical unit in detail.

The function of the transmission or gearset is to change the tractive effort at the rear wheels in proportion to the effort needed. By its means the rear wheels are permitted to run slowly while the engine is running fast, etc.

In general, this control over the tractive effort is obtained by meshing gears of various sizes. In operation power is generated by the engine, passes back through the clutch, which delivers it to a shaft, which is part of the transmission unit. On this shaft are a certain number of gears which may be shifted into and out of engagement with other gears, mounted on another shaft, known mechanically as a countershaft. These gears on the countershaft have varying numbers of teeth, a condition which produces the changes in tractive effort.

The mechanical unit that we have just described is known as the sliding selective gearset, and while it serves its purpose fairly well it uses a tremendous expenditure of effort to accomplish what is comparatively a small effect. We need a device to perform this service in a simpler and easier way, without the constant danger of breakage and injury that exists with the present type.

If the car owner will stop for just one moment and consider the essential construction of the conventional gearset he will realize the need for great care in operation and maintenance. Two shafts holding sets of gears, which must be brought into engagement while the parts are spinning at a high rate of speed point to ever present danger of breakage and injury.

Breakage of members in the gearset and bending of the shafts so that they are out of alignment are common in gearset operation. When the shafts once go out of line there is no hope of decent operation until the condition is remedied; the gears will clash and growl, the teeth will chip or suffer more serious breaks, and replacement of gears will do no earthly good until the entire transmission is properly lined up again. When the shafts are out of line the gears do not engage evenly, as they are intended to do, which is the whole secret of the trouble.

The first thing to do to keep the gearset up to proper operation pitch is to give it proper lubrication. Oil is the proper lubricant for this unit, not grease. In winter it will be well to use a somewhat thinner oil than in hot weather, as the cold tends to thicken the oil, anyway.

Every two or three months, or, better, every thousand miles of running, the oil should be drained off from the gearset housing, which should be flushed with kerosene and then refilled with fresh oil.

AVIATION

THE LAWSON AIR LINER NO. 2—Here is Alfred W. Lawson's newest aerial leviathan, a luxury ship which carries twenty-six passengers and provides them with sleeping berths, shower baths, smoking compartments, etc. Incidentally, it is equipped with the largest tires ever made for an airplane. These are large enough to permit the ship to land in a foot of snow.

Pacific Coast to Have Important Aviation Meet

The tentative schedule of events and exhibits, which has been announced by officials of the Aero club of southern California and by army and navy officers who are lending every assistance, indicates that the affair, which is to be held at Daugherty Municipal Flying field, Long Beach, will be one of the most important aerial events of the year.

The three days of flying and of practical demonstrations of the commercial possibilities and development of aeronautics, will include everything from an open speed event to parachute jumping by army observers, and a handicap race between three, and possibly four, dirigible airships.

The fullest possible coöperation is to be afforded by the various air service units belonging to the Ninth Corps area, instructions having been issued by Gen. Charles T. Menoher from Washington to Col. H. H. Arnold, chief of air service on the Pacific coast, to meet with officials conducting the tournament relative to arranging army entries in the various contests.

As a result Lieut. H. Halverson, aid to Col. Arnold, is contemplating the plans whereby more than twenty single seater planes and several fast two seaters, will participate, as well as other material.

The army entries, which will concentrate at Long Beach from several California fields, will include Fokkers, Spads, and Nieuports, SE-5s, Le Peres, De Havilands, and several Hispano Curtiss machines. The final entry list of both planes and pilots is now being drawn up at air headquarters, San Francisco, and will be announced early next week.

Several fast civilian planes, including Orioles, and an Italian Pomollo, are to be entered in both the scratch and handicap races.

The ground show, which will be entirely out of doors, will surpass anything of its kind held during the present year, and will be particularly featured by multi-engined planes. The entry list already includes the Pacific Hawk, a twin-engined six passenger plane manufactured on the Pacific coast; the Friesley biplane, another California product; two all-metal monoplanes, both of which were delivered from New York by air; the New Davis Douglas "Cloudster," the latest product of Donald Douglas, designer of many of the Glenn Martin planes, and possibly one of the Martin "Torpedo planes," several of which have recently been consigned to duty with the Pacific fleet.

The navy's exhibits, which were secured through the coöperation of Capt. Toombs, chief of the naval air service on the Pacific coast, consist of three flying boats, an F-5L and R-6 and a F-boat, in addition to complete displays of radio equipment, engines, and ordnance.

The meet will be held early in February.

"See" Flight.

Operations at Lake St. John, Quebec, are being carried out in accordance with orders. Some interesting flights have been made, and representatives of vaarious pulp paper companies have been taken up at the request of the Quebec government and shown the timber limits. Great enthusiasm was expressed for the use of aircraft in their work, the representative of the Belgo Pulp and Paper company in particular stating that he had seen more of interest to him in one flight of two hours than he could have seen during the entire season from canoes.

Closed for Winter.

It has been decided that the German aerial services connecting Amsterdam, Bremen, Hamburg, and Copenhagen and Berlin, Warnemunde, Maemoe, and Copenhagen shall be suspended during the winter months. The present intention is to resume these services in March next. The service between Berlin and Bremen is to be maintained during the winter.

U. S. Air Mail Report Wakes Up All of Europe

Praeger Tells Postal Congress of Our Success

Transportation of the mails by aircraft won recognition and approval at the international postal congress at Madrid, according to Otto Praeger, second assistant postmaster general, who represented the United States and who returned Dec. 11 on the Cunarder Aquitania.

"There is intense interest in the air mail throughout Europe," said Mr. Praeger to a representative of the Manufacturers' Aircraft association. "Practically every country either has opened an air mail experimental line or plans to do so in the near future. The report of the United States air mail service which I submitted to the congress was the subject of much discussion. Many countries have asked for more detailed information, particularly Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, which already have some posts carried by air but are eager to extend the system.

"The international postal congress recognized the transportation of mail by aircraft, and prepared the way for signatory powers to enter into agreements for special compensation where it was desired to transmit postal matter either wholly or partly by air.

"Europe is crisscrossed with air mail lines radiating from London, Paris, Copenhagen, and Berlin and extending through every country on the continent. The English and French services between London and Paris are eminently successful, while their branch routes through other countries are developing rapidly.

"Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Germany, and Spain are fostering mail routes either by government operation or by private companies. Italy had a government air mail service between Turin and Rome, but has had difficulty retaining planes and aviators. A pilot on setting out with his plane well supplied with gasoline would fly over to Fiume and join D'Annunzio's forces.

"Czecho Slovakia is organizing an air mail service between Prague, Warsaw, and Paris, fostered by French capital. Other nations are following the example of France, which has established great juction points, one at Nice for all traffic between Rome, Paris, and Bucharest, while at Strasbourg it has established a junction for planes flying between Germany, Poland, France, and Russian.

"One reason for success in Europe is the availability of landing fields. A pilot finds an airport wherever he flies. The French believe that within ten years the public will use airplanes as much, and for as many purposes, as it now uses railroads. More than 1,000 persons have flown from Paris to London in French machines alone."

AUBURN Beauty-SIX

AUBURN owners had reason to be proud of their car at the New York Show this year.

It was a critical audience. A new spirit prevailed. Nothing was taken for granted. The car that won approval delivered the goods.

Quality beneath the surface was recognized. The Auburn exclusive torque arm construction and the annular ball bearing transmission, together with the 4-bearing crankshaft, were accorded due worth. Other notable features—unusually large brake drums, positive pump-driven oil system, and a unique type of clutch construction, which assures most easy operation—were critically appraised.

Beauty was judged as it should be—of value only when it served to emphasize and accentuate the strength and durability built into the car.

Price, for the first time in years, received careful consideration—not for price alone but for the value represented in the price—an honest, present-day dollar-for-dollar value based on present deflated merchandise prices.

It is not hard to understand, therefore, why Auburn should have been accorded pre-eminence. Quality—beauty—price—with twenty-one years' engineering knowledge as assurance that each is in ideal relation to the other.

SALESMEN.

Live salesmen know that the big money in sales work is earned in selling lines such as high grade specialties, bonds, advertising, and special service. Our work is in the latter class and is not affected by present day business conditions. If you value your services at not less than $7,500 per year and have the dignity and force of personality to meet executives on a common level and present intelligently a service for which there is a real need—if you want to make a permanent connection with a firm that has been established twenty years—if you are willing to work on a straight commission basis with a guarantee of not less than $100 the first week in the field—if you believe in making sales on the one call basis and can show a clean record, let us show you how men without previous experience in our work jump into the $10,000 class after brief preliminary training. We have openings in several of the leading cities. Little traveling is required and if you feel that you can measure up to our requirements phone Sales Manager, Harrison 9534, for interview.

DE BARDAS & BARR,
Suite 812, 64 W. Randolph-st.

MAN—THE WRITER HAS RECENTLY CON[illegible] with one of the most successful [illegible] ever undertaken in America. He is now with an organization of young business men who are not retarded by present conditions and are proceeding with extensive expansion plans which require the permanent assistance of many capable men. I am looking for a man who will be one of us; just a plain, regular fellow. He may have worked in a store or in some mechanical vocation, but is adaptable to something different. This man must have a clean record, be fond of meeting people, possess a sunny disposition, and be capable of holding the friendship and respect of his associates. We prefer a man who was raised in a small town or city, but he must have lived here at least two years. Call during business hours. 64 W. Randolph-st., Suite 814. Ask for E. M. LAW.

A NO. 1 OFFER TO AMBITIOUS MEN.

This offer is a liberal one, and is intended for the man who finds it hard to get along on his present salary. The man who is now employed, but who, on account of greatly increased rents and the high cost of living, finds his income short of his expenses. The man who finds it necessary to deprive his family of some necessaries. The young man who wants to make a greater success of himself and who wants to lay aside some money for the future and the rainy day. Spare time work, after regular working hours. Call at once for particulars.

WOMEN.
A GOOD JOB FOR YOU.
FULL OR SPARE TIME.

No experience necessary, as we teach you; pay while learning. Last week one woman made $123.00, another $107.00, another $57.00, and several others better than $40.00 assisting us in disposing of the Marshall Field estate, located 35 minutes' ride from the loop—with present transportation—65 trains stop daily—11c train fare—property 2 blocks from station. Has beautiful paved boulevard. The estate is completely surrounded with beautiful homes costing from $3,000 to $20,000, churches, schools, playgrounds, etc. We have only 145 parcels left—unusual sizes, 80x131 feet, including sewer, water, gas, and shade trees. We are opening a big, slashing sale, and this will be closed out at $11.00 per foot. Think of it—property for this price right in the face of the greatest building boom the country has ever known and with 100,000 homes short in Chicago. If you want to get in on this hurry and get on the force, as this won't last but a couple of weeks. Your husband or other members of the family may assist you if they wish. Ask to see MR. ROBERTS, Gen. Mgr., Room 1949 Conway Bldg. An exceptional offer to experienced organizers and closers.

WOMEN—FOR TRAVELING; advertising plan requiring tactful, good appearing women with business experience, to call on dry goods trade, $38 weekly salary; liberal commissions and traveling expenses; must be over 25 years. Address F L 138, Tribune.

California.

FOR SALE—THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA makes you this bargain offer: The State Land Settlement Board of California will sell bona fide homeseekers an irrigated farm of 20 or 40 acres in San Joaquin Valley, with 36½ years' time for deferred payments.

These farms are in Farm Land Unit No. 3, consisting of 1,540 acres in Merced County, the heart of the famous San Joaquin Valley, and will be offered to bona fide homeseekers.

These carefully selected lands were acquired by the State of California for settlement purposes. A complete irrigation system is being installed. Price per acre varies according to location. Five per cent of purchase price payable when deal is made; remainder in semi-annual installments, extending over a period of 36½ years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum.

When this unit is exhausted, other similar tracts will be opened up as rapidly as land can be prepared for the new settler.

An unusual opportunity to acquire a small ranch in winterless California, at a minimum cash outlay.

All deciduous fruits are profitably grown, and alfalfa is a paying crop. Ideal conditions for stock and poultry. You have benefits of established communities. Schools are ready, and fine roads. The various fruit associations have a remarkable marketing system. You raise the fruit; no bother about markets.

You can farm all year in California. The State Board's booklet about these lands and plans for financing improvements, Santa Fe illustrated folders descriptive of San Joaquin Valley and the trip there, mailed on request.

Let me help you plan your trip.
C. L. Seagraves, Supervisor of Agriculture, Santa Fe Ry., 901 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

$15 TO $35 PER ACRE

Think of it! Hardwood land, only a night's ride from Chicago and capable of producing most any crop that can be grown in the north central states, at a price that puts a farm within reach of most any man. Located in Antrim, Kalkaska, and Otsego counties, Mich., close to local markets, schools, churches, and railroads, this land offers the farmseeker one of the best opportunities we have ever seen during 20 years of business. Some extra choice locations on lakes and streams are available now among 20,000 acres just placed on the market.

EASY TERMS.

Our liberal credit plan gives you a chance to get started with only a small down payment. Terms on the balance, which hundreds of satisfied customers and settlers have found easy to meet. We give you free insurance protection while paying for the land and the advice of practical farmers as to the best farming methods. Michigan grants the settler who makes some improvement on his land five years' exemption from taxes. We loan money in proportion to your investment to help you erect buildings, buy live stock, etc. We do not reserve the oil or mineral rights nor do we sell swamps or stony land. Our policy is to help you all we can.

INVESTIGATE NOW

by sending for our big free booklet. It will be cheerfully mailed without expense or obligation on your part. Read it over, learn what others are doing—what you can do—in this land of farming opportunities. There is not enough of this land to go around. Don't be one of the disappointed ones who delay too long. ACT NOW.

FARMS

At the present time there is, in Taylor, Lincoln, Langlade, Marathon, and adjoining counties, considerable snow, and farms cannot be seen to good advantage.

We advise prospective buyers to get the free literature from the Wisconsin State Department of Agriculture, study soils, become thoroughly acquainted with the State literature, which gives accurate and authentic information, and GO TO SEE the farms this coming spring.

A number of prospective buyers insist on going to see farms at the present time. We do not advise this, but IF YOU INSIST UPON GOING, we will issue a written statement, describing the soil and surface of the particular farm picked out, guaranteeing the same with the assets and prestige of fifty years of continuous LOEB-HAMMEL activity in Wisconsin.

If farm is not as guaranteed when buyer goes on same in the spring, money paid will be refunded promptly and cheerfully.

WE SOMETIMES TAKE IN DESIRABLE INCOME PROPERTY, NOT HEAVILY INCUMBERED, IN PART PAYMENT OF FARMS WHICH WE OWN, TAKING MTGE. BACK FOR BALANCE.

Horses, cows, etc., sold on liberal terms. Write for FREE list and literature. Medford, Merrill, and Butternut offices open all the year around.

Stutz Limousine

$3,000

BUILT SPECIAL FOR HARRY STUTZ.

There isn't another car like this one anywhere. The body, which is a very smart appearing narrow lined town car limousine, was designed [by the man who built the car] for his personal use. The mechanical condition is 100% perfect and the entire car presents the appearance of new. As one would naturally expect, the car has had expert care. It being one of a number in this gentleman's private garage has had only slight service.

MOTOR TROUBLES

The Power and Efficiency

of your motor depends upon its cylinders and pistons. It is impossible to have full power with least expense of operation unless you have perfect round cylinders and pistons. 98% of all motor troubles is caused by out of round cylinders or scored; cause carbon, which acts like emery, that wears every moving part of the motor, fouls the plugs, pits the valves, valve seats, causing loss of compression, pre-ignition, waste of oil, gas, and causes frequent expensive replacements. Fargo service of regrinding cylinders, making oversize pistons and rings, regrinding crankshafts insures a smooth running motor, delivers full power as surely and steadily as when new. Ford price $24; others $48 and up.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

THE VEGETARIAN CLUB, 1435 S. Millard-av., will be addressed on topics of vital interest by E. L. Gerardi. The lecturer has had wide experience in religious, social, and economic fields.

Tuesday, January 18, the subject will be:

GOD AND WAR.

Few men have any philosophy of life beyond physical needs. Mankind has ever followed the paths of slaughter when there was promise of returns. President Wilson assured us that we have just waged "the first unselfish war in history!"

THURSDAY, JAN. 20:

What Psychic Research Has Done for the World.

Science astonished us by revealing that matter cannot be destroyed. It is now bewildering our ignorant minds by demonstrating that LIFE cannot be destroyed. With clearer knowledge of the continuity of LIFE we see the appalling effects of ignorance and vice extending beyond physical dissolution. There come also gleams of undreamt hope and inspiration.

THE RESALE SHOP
3429 S. Michigan Ave.
TAKES THE LEAD

in announcing the new prices of French Seal and Near Seal

FUR COATS
trimmed with Marten, Squirrel, or Beaver,
$175.00

These coats sold for $450.00 as late as six weeks ago. This previously unheard-of price reduction is going to close out the retail stock and the manufacturers' samples. This will result in replacement orders and will so improve the fur business in general that further downward price movement will be impossible. The fur industry will be one of the first to improve, just as it was the first to liquidate.

THIS MEANS that you who have gone around shivering in your cloth coat, waiting for the price to go down, had better or else keep right on shivering for another year, and next year may be somewhat colder for shivering than this one.

The weather has been mild this winter and the price of fur coats is bound to be higher next year because the manufacturer is not going to be caught again with too much merchandise on hand.

So if you ever expect to get a bargain, buy now along with the other wise ones whom you will find crowding into The Resale Shop all week, beginning

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice of Receiver's Sale.

In the Court of Common Pleas.
State of Ohio, Stark County, ss.:
J. H Firestone, et al., Plaintiffs, vs. The Canton Auto Parts Manufacturing Company, Defendant.

In pursuance of an order of the Court of Common Pleas of Stark County, Ohio, in the above entitled cause, the undersigned receiver will offer for sale at public auction on Saturday, the 22d day of January, 1921 at 10 a. m. at Court Room No. 3 in the Courthouse at the City of Canton, Ohio, all the property, rights, assets, and credits as described and set forth in the inventory and appraisal of said property on file in this cause, belonging to The Canton Auto Parts Manufacturing Company of Canton, Ohio, including the accounts receivable of said company existing prior to the appointment of said receiver, less any credits on account of payments made thereon to said receiver and excepting, however, the rights or claims of The Canton Auto Parts Manufacturing Company as set forth in the journal entry ordering the sale of said property. The property to be sold as aforesaid consists generally of machinery and equipment, furniture and fixtures, physical inventory and patents owned and used by said company and located at its plant at 415 Ninth-st., SW. in the City of Canton, Ohio; all of said property having been heretofore appraised in said proceeding at $91,062.17.

In accordance with the order of the court directing said sale, the sale of said property will be held open for at least one hour. Said property will be sold as a whole to the highest responsible bidder, and no bid will be considered by the receiver for less than $50,000.00 cash, to be paid within five days after confirmation of said sale by the court, $10,000.00 of which amount will be paid at the time the proposal is accepted.

The receiver reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

GEORGE W. PERKS.
Receiver The Canton Auto Parts Manufacturing Company.

East Has Unfair Advantage.

The development of Chicago and other cities of the west is retarded by the way in which the affairs of great corporations that do business all over the country are administered. The officers and most of the directors of railroads, insurance companies, and industrial combinations live in New York, Boston, or Philadelphia. Partly because their personal interests are in their home cities and partly because they are familiar with the strength of their home banks and trust companies, most of the corporate funds collected in the west are kept on deposit in the east.

The results of this policy can be seen in a myriad of facts which usually are accepted as inevitable, but which in reality ought to be changed. The most obvious fact is the greater abundance of money in the east in normal times, resulting in lower interest rates and facilitating business expanison there. The most spectacular example of this is the New York stock exchange, which overshadows all the other exchanges of the country merely because its operation requires immense amounts of money at the lowest available rates.

Largely because railway directors live in the east, terminals there are electrified while locomotives blacken Chicago with smoke, although much of the revenue that makes electrification possible comes from the west. The west does more than its share in producing the country's wealth, and the east gets more than its fair proportion of the profits. This condition is clearly unfair and it ought to be remedied. If stockholders in great corporations will call on directors for more equitable distribution of bank deposits and improvements a beginning will be made in a much needed change.

Brief Answers.

M. F., Fond du Lac, Wis.: The Ironwood and Bessemer Railway and Light company earns its interest well over twice. It has outstanding some notes secured by deposit of 133 1-3 per cent of mortgage bonds. The notes evidently have a wide margin of safety, but the market for them is narrow.

H. W.—The Cicero Gas company first 6s are an underlying issue of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois and a conservative investment.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The weekly review of F. M. zeller & Co. follows:

Generally higher prices prevailed in the local unlisted securities market, but part of these gains were relinquished at the close. Butler Brothers advanced to sales at 38¾, reacting to 36 bid, 36¾ asked. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply also improved to sales at 48, but was offered at 47 with buyers at 45 at the close. A better tone was in evidence in the Goodyear Rubber issues, preferred advancing to 53 and the common to sales at 26, closing at 52 to 55, and 25 to 27 respectively. Emerson Brantingham preferred moved up to sales at 40, and was in demand at 39, with offerings at 41 on latest quotations. Willys Corporation preferred advanced to 31, but later eased off to 25-27.

Motor stocks reflected higher levels, Reo advancing to 22½, while Packard on the announcement of the passing of the dividend was firm around 10¼. Stearns was actively traded in around 20. Paige-Detroit improved to 17, closing at 15-16. Sugars also improved, Michigan changing hands at 9 and Holland-St. Louis at 8¼. Columbia was quiet at 13½ to 14½.

Public Utility sales were as follows: American Light and Traction common, 82-83; preferred, 77-78; Cities Service common, 245-247 ex-dividend; preferred, 64¾-65 ex-dividend; Bankers, 29-29½ ex-dividend; Commonwealth Power common, 14½-15; preferred, 35½-36; Northern States Power common, 38½-39½; preferred, 79; Standard Gas common, 12¾-13¼; preferred, 79; Standard Gas common, 12¾-13¼; preferred, 34½-35; United Light common, 22¾-23¼; preferred, 57-58.

FOUND DEAD IN STREET.

Tony Gerlus, 65 years old, was found dead in the street yesterday in front of 5627 West Sixty-fifth street. The police believe he died from a sudden attack of heart disease.
